This civil service you speak of, how far does the civil service extend in the City of Philadelphia? Are all city employees under civil service?

MR. MILLER:

Bureau chiefs—yes; department heads—no.

SENATOR WALKER:

Are the county employees under Civil Service?

MR. MILLER:

No.

SENATOR WALKER:

Under your plan you would have civil service extending over all consolidated government?

MR. MILLER:

All the functions of the city.

SENATOR BARR:

What functions come under the county commissioners—Fairmount Park, Weights and Measures, what else?

MR. MILLER:

At the present time, sir?

SENATOR BARR:

Yes.

MR. MILLER:

I am afraid I would need a little bit of coaching on that.

SENATOR BARR:

I will ask Mr. Harris to answer that.

MR. HARRIS:

I would rather call on Mr. Watson.

MR. WATSON:

As I understand it, the only thing you want to get straightened out is what comes under the county commissioners. We have the county board of elections, weights and measures, the children's bureau. We are the fiscal agent for the courts. We have no authority to assess, and no authority to appraise. We have none of the authorities you have in the other counties. Council is the appropriating body. Council takes their recommendations from the other bureaus. We have no authority to appraise. We get a lot of peculiar jobs where the county itself decides to build a building—that is our responsibility, the same as it is in other counties, but we don't have many of the functions you people have. Council is the appropriating body for any monies that come to the county commissioners or any other county office. While many of the county offices are almost, or close to being, self-supporting, their original funds for use come from city council, nowhere else. Now, does that make it clearer?

SENATOR BARR:

Does the Fairmount Park Commission come under you?

MR. WATSON:

No—it is a separate body. We have no control over any parks, city property, or recreation. The only time we have control is when the county builds a building. For instance, there has now been provided by the courts the construction of a house of detention. The construction of that building must be approved and followed by the county commissioners. If the city has a building, that is a different picture. We have nothing to do with it.

SENATOR DENT:

The job of the county commissioners is practically the same as a department head.

MR. WATSON:

Only we are a county bureau and we are elected.

SENATOR DENT:

They don't have any of the functions or powers given to other commissioners.

MR. WATSON:

That is where I thought you were confused with Mr Meade.

MR. ANDREWS:

Mr. Miller, if this Philadelphia situation unfortunately develops into a political dogfight, do you believe the legislature should presume to referee it?

MR. MILLER:

That is a leading question, sir. We have hoped and done everything we can that the program presented should be nonpolitical. We thought the best chance for Philadelphia was to come to the legislature and say, "We all want it." I don't feel today that there are too many differences. The organizations with which we have worked are together except on minor points.

MR. ANDREWS:

Don't you believe, then, that it would be wise, sir, for the various parties interested to frame bills for presentation to the legislature rather than attempt to operate through the Joint State Government Commission, assuming what would be an impossible task?

MR. MILLER:

I don't know. The other approach would make for a confused legislative picture and one bill killing off the other.

SENATOR DENT:

Mr. Chairman, it has been an observation of mine, as the father of several children, a child never takes castor oil without force, and sometimes a community needs outsiders to do the work they, themselves, can't get together on. I have heard proposals of a number of committees for a number of years, but we always find that the thing Mr. Andrews brings up is the determining factor in the final analysis. Perhaps the legislature will have to do what they think best.

SENATOR BARR:

Do you think you would have more honest elections by having watchers from one ward go into another ward?

MR. MILLER:

I think it should probably be pretty carefully watched in that the matter of identification is important.

SENATOR BARR:

I fully agree with you.

MR. ANDREWS:

How are we going to be able to discriminate between the angels of light and squads of goons that might go in?

MR. MILLER:

That question has often been raised, and I think very careful credentials should be provided for them. I think a squad of goons is difficult because in any division there can only be two watchers for any party.

MR. WATSON:

Three watchers in the general and three for each candidate in the primary.

SENATOR WALKER:

What would be gained by repealing the party raiding bill of 1937?

MR. MILLER:

It is the only thing that would make effective a fusion movement at that or any other time. I think the Democrats tripped themselves up at that time.

SENATOR WALKER:

I am interested in knowing why you want it repealed.

MR. MILLER:

Simply because that now or at any time it makes impossible any effective fusion movement. If you want to go into detail—in the first place it is a physical impossibility in Philadelphia. I would like the two-party system to build up a brand new party to take them over the jump. There are a great many people who just won't vote Democrat no matter what the provision is and others who won't vote Republican no matter what the provision is.

SENATOR WALKER:

If you repeal this bill, you could have a candidate who would file for mayor on both the Republican and Democratic ticket.

MR. MILLER:

You could. I don't think it would happen.

SENATOR WALKER:

How would he be nominated?

MR. MILLER:

Through the regular primary procedure.

SENATOR WALKER:

Tell me, Mr. Miller, do you think that would assist a fusion movement?

MR. MILLER:

Very definitely.

SENATOR DENT:

Historically, the strong political party, whether Democrat or Republican, in a given territory absorbs the minority party in the primary election and nominates for its own uses minority party candidates. It has never worked out. I think the proposition you would be interested in, Sir, would be the breaking down of barriers on independent candidacy, not the other.

SENATOR WALKER:

Do you think that party responsibility, after they are elected, could be better discharged if civil service were eliminated?

MR. MILLER:

That is a question that is pretty well bound up with political philosophy. I would like to say it could be discharged better without civil service. On the other hand, we have the important factor of merit—the fellow really trying—he should have the opportunity to get ahead and have some protection in his efforts. I agree that that proposition is dynamite and should be thoroughly discussed. We have deliberated on it. We are in favor of a civil service merit system.

SENATOR DENT:

The Committee of 70 has struck me as a group which tries to do the best for the community. I would appreciate it if they would look into the workings of civil service in any of the departments in Pennsylvania and tell me whether a person who has gotten his job for merit continues to climb on merit. It only works for selection, but it doesn't work from then on.

MR. MILLER:

I presume you mean employees of the Commonwealth.

SENATOR DENT:

Yes. Take the Liquor Control Board setup—check on the clerks there to see whether merit has anything to do with it.

MR. MILLER:

We do check civil service in Philadelphia year by year and day by day. It works rather imperfectly, but you can't improve anything until you at least have it.

SENATOR HEUBURN:

Thank you, Mr. Miller. Mrs. Donald F. Bishop, representing the League of Women Voters in Philadelphia.

December 15, 1948.

MRS. BISHOP:

The League of Women Voters is deeply concerned over the confusion, the inefficiency and wastefulness, as well as the overlapping offices and functions of office in City Hall, which, combined, are major road blocks in the path of civic progress. The League, therefore, has put at the top of its legislative program for 1949 active support of four basic measures which are imperative if Philadelphia is to have honest and efficient City Government.

1. City-County Consolidation:

Philadelphia City and County boundaries are identical. Philadelphia should, therefore, have a strong central government like other large cities rather than the present dual government, composed of both city and county officials, with vaguely defined authority. As county offices are mandatory under the State Constitution, Philadelphia cannot achieve a strong central government without a Constitutional Amendment—which, as we all know, must be passed by two sessions of the Legislature and then approved by the voters at the election following the final passage of the measure.

2. Stabilization of Philadelphia Debt-Limit:

Philadelphia LWV advocates stabilization of the city debt-limit by using the average value of assessments on real estate over a ten year period as the base, rather than that of only the previous year,—the current practice. This change would prevent over-borrowing in periods of prosperity, leaving a large borrowing power available when most needed—in depression years. This requires an amendment to the constitution. The Smith Amendment receives our support.

3. Home Rule:

A city of the first class should be able to make and change its own governing local matters, which would also relieve the legislature of responsibility for a large number of bills of purely local concern. Home Rule powers would not extend to matters requiring uniform state wide legislation, such as election procedures, education, public health and other such general issues. The constitution was amended in 1922, permitting the Legislature to grant home rule powers, but so far the Legislature has not passed an enabling bill.

4. Merger of Registration Commission (City) with the Board of Elections (County):

Philadelphia is the only large city (of the first class) which has two such overlapping agencies whose merger would group all these functions under the jurisdiction of one board at a greatly reduced administrative cost. The merger would also materially reduce the likelihood of election fraud.

The League of Women Voters of Philadelphia will work actively to secure the passage of such bills as are introduced to attain these results, and urges the support of the Joint State Government Commission in this long-range program.

SENATOR BARR:

You are incorrect about overlapping of registration. In the County of Allegheny there are two registration units—the county commissioners for boroughs and townships and third-class cities and another commission for the city of Pittsburgh.

MRS. BISHOP:

They are just as bad off or worse.

SENATOR HEYBURN:

Thank you, Mrs. Bishop. Our next speaker is Mr. John J. MacDonald, president of the Philadelphia Real Estate Board.

MR. MACDONALD:

Members of the Commission, I want to thank you personally on behalf of our real estate board for the opportunity of being here today. I should also like it to be a matter of record that we of the board and those we represent are very much in favor of such activities as the City Planning Commission has undertaken to develop and improve our city. We are all very anxious that those improvements proceed. We are absolutely in favor of a ten-year base for the development of a tax assessment basis for the raising of revenue for the city, but I think that something has been left aside in this regard. We always look to real estate to develop revenue. If we forget that in times gone by when the small home owner, particularly in the early and middle 30's, was in a very bad position to pay taxes the foreclosures that occurred simply because of servicing of debt and other municipal activities that had to be taken care of through taxes raised from real estate, we may again, at a future time, come into a similar period of foreclosures. That we wish to forestall. We want to continue the happiness of home ownership in the City of Philadelphia. I suggest to you gentlemen of this honorable body that in the development of any legislation concerning the raising of revenue funds for the program of construction now going on and contemplated that you include the thought of the subject of personal property taxes. We think that the personal property tax is a definite source of revenue; and, if, as happened in the past, we look solely to real estate, which is the source of all wealth we will readily agree, but, on the other hand, if it is really broken down, it will be found that the backbone of our nation and city is made up of individual home owners who seek happiness within their own domicile. I plead with you not to consider solely the development of a tax structure for revenue raising purposes based solely on real estate. If you do, I wager with you and I say to you that within a period of the next ten years you are going to find that this so-called five-year limitation period for the raising of revenue is going to be very harmful to the individual small home owner. I don't want to take up the valuable time of this committee, but I plead with you sincerely if you are going to have any tax revenue raising measures considered by the legislature that you definitely, and I must say insist insofar as the representation we have from the small property owners is concerned, consider the question of the personal property tax and that to be apportioned over the ten-year average period. Gentlemen, I thank you.

SENATOR DENT:

Mr. MacDonald, I am very much interested in the question of a tax base in real estate taxes and made somewhat of a study of it. Would you consider a division of real estate on the basis of homestead real estate and investment real estate for tax purposes?

MR. MACDONALD:

Well, that is a very nice question, Senator, but I would say this to you—I will try to be frank and honest in my reply. The percentage of investment real estate is, in my humble thinking although I cannot verify this at the moment, relatively low compared to the amount of total real estate that is home owned. Now, as to considering as two separate entities investment real estate in which money is invested for a profit (naturally, in the past few years not too much of that has been obtained) as against the home ownership feature I am not prepared to comment upon at the moment because, frankly, I have not given it that much thought, and I want to be real candid in my replies. I don't know the relative proportion of the two, so as to how this would affect the immediate situation of averaging five-year periods against ten-year periods I can't say; but I do think this—that the over-all average, whether it be on investment real estate or homestead real estate, would modify itself to a very decent level for tax revenue purposes over the ten-year period. Now we don't pick out the ten-year period as a question of taking the thought out of the air, but long studies have been made on the economics of real estate; and, as consistently in the thinking of our men as we can get nationally, we find that there is a certain relativeness to the periods of peak and low real estate; and, as close as we can bring that is a period of eighteen years. Now that 18 year period may vary if some extraordinary event happens such as occurred in the last war; but, rather than ask you to consider the 18 year period, we prefer to be as reasonable and cooperative as we can in the development of city funds. We ask you seriously to consider the ten-year period; because, I repeat, if you consider solely the five-year period, you are going to raise revenue on a peak assessment value; and, while I don't expect that our values will ever go back to the early 30 values in real estate, there should be some modification at a lower level of average values. We suggest that our program of development and improvements be based on revenue possibilities that will occur on that basis and, at the same time, not place a heavy burden on the small property owners who, I am sure would, at that time, feel that debt servicing tax very seriously.

SENATOR BARR:

You are against that amendment?

MR. MACDONALD:

Yes.

SENATOR WALKER:

Couldn't this problem be handled by the charter commission in the proposed charter?

MR. MACDONALD:

I see no reason why not.

SENATOR WALKER:

Is it logical to assume your group would be represented on the charter commission—at least have an opportunity to present this problem to the charter commission?

MR. MACDONALD:

However this particular charter commission may be created or developed, I would feel at this particular moment that whatever honorable body that may be would certainly give us the opportunity of a hearing because, if they wouldn't do so, we would make ourselves vociferous in other ways.

SENATOR WALKER:

You would be in favor of the creation of a charter commission?

MR. MACDONALD:

I have not gone into that too seriously at this particular moment. We are in favor of anything permanently bettering conditions in the City of Philadelphia and, on that, we would prefer to speak at a later time.

SENATOR HEYBURN:

As I understand this debt problem, it is in no way tied up with the charter commission.

MR. SCHWARTZ:

The debt limit and formula on which it is based is a part of the Constitution, and any change in the base or rate would require a Constitutional amendment.

MR. MACDONALD:

I might say that we are not opposed to advancing the debt limit from ten to twelve-and one-half percent. I believe the people of Philadelphia want to have everything done to better their city, and in that particular instance we are certainly in favor of that.

SENATOR HEYBURN:

Thank you, Mr. MacDonald. Senator Jaspan.

SENATOR JASPAN:

STATEMENT BY H. JEROME JASPAN

Gentlemen: You are called upon to hear out various groups and individuals on the need for the revamping and overhauling our City Government. Yours is a difficult task, especially in view of the fact that none of you are Philadelphians. You have little knowledge of and personal experience with our problems. However, with help from proper sources, I have confidence that you will be able to grapple with this all-important problem. There is no doubt in any one's mind, and I dare include the respected leaders of the Republican and Democratic party, as to the seriousness of the situation, and hence the need for immediate changes to save the City of Philadelphia, once known as the Cradle of Liberty, and now labelled as the Hot-Bed of Graft and Corruption.

Recent investigations have only scratched the surface. Investigations, arrests and convictions have their value, but more important is remedial and corrective legislation.

Suggestions and ideas as to legislation—some of them very worthy—have been and will be advanced to you. Many of them are conflicting and divergent, especially as to the mode of procedure, and the time when the suggested changes should take place. For the purpose of assisting the Committee in this difficult job, I recommend the appointment of a subcommittee consisting of 10 outstanding and civic-minded persons, acquainted with Philadelphia's needs and wants. The Committee I have in mind can very well sift out the proposals already made and incorporate their own ideas as well. Having carefully studied and analyzed the ideas, suggestions and proposals submitted to your Commission, they can report back to you by January 17, 1948.

This Committee in fact can operate throughout the session of 1949, of course, in an advisory capacity, as permitted by the Act of 1943.

Time is very important, and we dare not delay any longer. We should all meet on common ground to make common cause. Accent should be definitely placed on City Welfare. Party factionalism should be eliminated in the interest of good government.

I do not intend to go into details as to the proposals already submitted. The much vaunted City-County Consolidation project has been again presented to you, and properly so. However, while I strongly recommend its passage, it has no immediate benefit. Assuming that it meets with no opposition, it cannot become a reality until 1952.

There has been much talk about the need for a new Charter. I heartily subscribe to the idea. As a matter of fact, I introduced a bill in 1947 to implement the Constitutional Amendment of 1922 designed to permit Cities to frame their own Charters and decide on their own form of government, but for political reasons, it was killed in the Senate Committee.

A New Charter, properly framed and honestly presented to our people, would undoubtedly break up the dynasty of the Republican party in Philadelphia. However, I am opposed to the adoption of a new Charter by the Legislature for Philadelphia. First, it can very well be made a political football to be deliberately tossed about by Upstate legislators. Astute political leaders could readily use this as an excuse for its defeat. Second: Why should Upstate legislators not familiar with our problems, be asked to vote for a Charter for Philadelphia? Third, and more important: the citizens of Philadelphia should be given the opportunity to decide on their own form of government. Otherwise the idea of home rule is negative. Framing a new charter, necessary and desirable that it is, and then submitting it to the electorate, will also take considerable time.

The enactment of an amendment by the legislature to stabilize the City's debt limit is an excellent idea—gives City free play and will not restrict it in its efforts to borrow in case of a bad year or two in the real estate market.

Members of the Commission, I am inclined to believe that everyone within hearing distance will go along with the aforesaid proposals. There are, however, other plans equally important, that could be put through in short order, and I now offer them to you.

1. I urge the passage of an amendment to the Charter Act of 1919—to put all City Departments as outlined under Civil Service and repealing all other Acts inconsistent therewith. Therefore under the proposed bill, Civil Service would be extended to the Receiver of Taxes Office, the City Controller's Office and the City Treasurer's Office.

2. I urge the passage of an Act to put all County employees under Civil Service immediately, with a provision therein prohibiting participation in politics.

3. In order to carry out the provisions of the latter proposal, a Civil Service Board, free from active participation in politics, is to be appointed by the Governor, and it shall be their duty, among other things, to set up new work standards with emphasis on training, ability and experience.

Members of the Commission, these proposals if adopted, will go a long way towards solving Philadelphia's problems. And what is more, they can be put through immediately after the legislature convenes.

With the passage of these proposed bills, you can expect good and efficient service by capable employees without any political tie-ups. Having done a day's work, they need not be concerned about any political activity or any allegiance to political bosses. Further, and more important, it will reduce fraudulent elections to a minimum.

We all know that practically every County employee participates in politics either as a Committeeman or political worker. As a matter of fact, his very job depends more or less on his success at the polls. Consequently he goes to the extremes to stampede, blackjack, and threatening people into voting against their better judgment. Quite frequently the political workers will commit fraud through illegal assistance, through deliberately voting for others in their absence and occasionally manipulating the machine so that the machine will not operate properly or will only operate the vote for the political worker's party. Every trick that ingenuity can devise has been resorted to by politicians in order to insure success for his party. Thus by putting the County employees under Civil Service and prohibiting them from participating in politics, the voter could be left to his own devices, free from the domination and influence of political workers. The right to vote is the most precious and sacred one and should not be trifled with. It forms the basis of our democracy, and anybody interfering with it is destroying the very backbone of our form of government.

Gentlemen, let me say to you that an aroused citizenry is clamoring for action. They look to you, their chosen representatives for the necessary help. Little or nothing has been done by the present leadership in Philadelphia for the people. Very little has been done in the way of slum clearance; police protection is inadequate; sewage system is rotten, every time there is a heavy shower, the sewers become overflowed in certain sections of the City; every other day we have reports of the old water mains bursting, causing untold property damage; the promised playgrounds are slow in coming; our gas and electric rate practically the highest in the United States, and now the Bell Telephone Co. is ready to saddle about one million six hundred thousand subscribers in the State with a 60% increase, approximately $25,000,000. Pittsburgh has seen fit to oppose the application as filed by the Bell Telephone Co., but Philadelphia lags behind. Taxes, however, have to be paid, and as indicated, our citizens get little for their money.

Philadelphia finds itself in a sorry mess. Governor Duff has commented on the precarious state we are now in. Apparently we need a guardian. Gentlemen, we should bow our heads in shame. It is difficult to believe that Philadelphia is unable to manage itself and has to look to the Legislature for help. The Evening Bulletin best sums up the situation in an editorial dated December 14, 1948, which reads—

"The best politics is good government. Let us practice it."

H. JEROME JASPAN.

EDITORIAL APPEARING IN "EVENING BULLETIN"
December 14, 1948, and read by Mr. Jaspán.

OUR WAY AND PITTSBURGH'S

If an impartial observer compares what Pittsburgh and Philadelphia have accomplished in a civic way since the end of the war, this city doesn't fare very well. We're due to hear more about it this week, when leaders of the Allegheny Conference come here to tell how they've channeled effort and developed co-operation.

As soon as an important job is discussed here, if it's to be done with public money, the first question that concerns Philadelphia leaders is: "Who will pass out the jobs?" In Pittsburgh they ask: "Who is best fitted to do it?"

It wasn't a major miracle that brought Richard K. Mellon, millionaire Republican, and Democratic Mayor Lawrence into civic harmony in Pittsburgh; it was the crying need that city faced to forget its bickering and get something done.

Philadelphia is up against the same kind of crisis. One of the toughest jobs that the State Administration has with respect to Philadelphia projects is to find somebody here who can speak with authority without being immediately vetoed by somebody else with equal authority.

Right now there is need to agree on a program for which legislative approval can be sought. Philadelphia civic agencies can't get together. There's mighty little chance of getting the Legislature to act if the city itself can't say what it needs and wants.

Pittsburgh has shown how the thing can be done and it isn't done in the traditional Philadelphia way of ward leader endorsements.

SENATOR HEYBURN:

Thank you, Mr. Jaspán. Our next speaker is Mr. Arthur W. Binnes, chairman of the Committee of Fifteen.

MR. BINNS:

Gentlemen of the Commission, the Committee of Fifteen promised you much earlier in the year that before the end of the year we would bring our recommendations before you. During the year we have been working very hard trying to crystalize our recommendations. There are many points that we are not able to come to conclusions on, but we do have, in accordance with our promise, a statement to make to you on certain cardinal points on city-county consolidation. (Mr. Binns then read from a typewritten statement which he retained at the end of his presentation. The notes below are comments made by Mr. Binns supporting the recommendations he set forth. Mr. Binns advised that a prepared statement will be mailed to the Commission later.)¹

The most we are able to do at this time is to recommend an enabling constitutional amendment. The precise form we are not able to recommend. We do not feel qualified to give the exact details, but we do think, at this time, the first step should be taken to make it possible for the legislature to move by an enabling constitutional amendment.

In general, we have the feeling, although we are not prepared to give it as a final recommendation simply because we do not feel qualified, that the only elective offices probably should be the policy offices—namely city council, the mayor, and the watchdog officer—the city controller. Perhaps all the rest, in some form or another, might ultimately be appointive offices.

At the moment the city has a great program under way. We understand that if this present Smith amendment was enacted it would dry up, we are told, about $25,000,000 borrowing capacity. Now there is a difference of opinion on that. Some experts say it is not so—at least Herman Schwartz, our assistant city solicitor makes that statement. It would impair our borrowing capacity. There is a good deal of doubt in our mind, gentlemen, whether ten years isn't too long a period. As far as we can determine, there is no city in the United States that has a ten-year basis—five, six, and in one case seven, but in no case as long a period as the base ten years. If you enacted the amendment right this minute, you would freeze the borrowing capacity against low taxes assessable during the depression. We recommend that the present act be amended to make it five years instead of ten. Now that means a postponement of two years automatically; and, in that two years we feel there will be enough of a rise in assessments so that the assessments of the last two or three years will have the net result of fixing our borrowing capacity based on our true value rather than the values of the depression. We would like to see the thing go through on the five-year basis at 12½% of the real estate assessment of the previous five years, beginning two years hence.

There are a number of other things. As far as the question of the extension of civil service to county departments is concerned, we are not taking any position on that at all. We have listened in a year's time to testimony on the operation of civil service, and I am sorry to say that it appears to me that there is at least as much evidence that civil service is as harmful as it is good. The freezing of the job at the lowest level of efficiency is amazing. We had Edward N. Hay and Associates make a careful and objective service. We had a group of five top personnel officers of the City of Philadelphia study civil service backward and forward. This is not meant to be any reflection upon the civil service, but as to the policy of civil service in city, state, and nation, there is a tremendous lot to be said on both sides; and, at the moment the Committee of Fifteen is taking no stand on that point.

There are some other things we would like to recommend that need legislation. I will file with you, in writing, a careful report setting forth each of our recommendations, but I will not do so now because some things have to be corrected. These other recommendations are concerned with some things needed in order to collect correct amounts of fees set by the state legislature and which are a way overdue.

There is one final recommendation I would like you gentlemen to most earnestly consider. It may have been made a number of times before. We have in our town just now a tough problem in connection with the receiver of taxes office and our whole financial position. There is no merit in going into personalities. I could talk for an hour without beginning to touch the different phases of that situation. However, it does seem to us that there might be a solution to the whole problem—one which is perhaps long overdue in the interests of sound government and intelligent management. We have passed this resolution which we very respectfully recommend to you—that the city charter should be revised forthwith to include a Department of Finance. It is suggested that this department should contain a Bureau of Budget, a Bureau of Collections, a Bureau of Accounting, and a Bureau of Machine Operations. A tremendous savings could be brought about if we could get machine operation of records. The office of the receiver of taxes should be abolished, and all functions except that of the depository should be eliminated from the city treasurer. The depository function should also be eliminated if and when city and county consolidation is achieved. Now, the creation of that department of finance, which I understand could be established by a simple act of the legislature, would cure our troubles in Philadelphia. The encumbents of these offices might be paid salaries in full until the end of their elected terms, and then we could move to get something like a tight administration of the fiscal policy of Philadelphia. We have the most diverse, difficult tax collection problem of any city in the United States. It is a terrible problem, and there is no criticism of the present incumbent with inadequate staff, with much political control, with the forcing into his office frequently of political appointees who are not qualified. He is the victim of a system. I believe that Mr. Frank Marshall, the individual, is absolutely honest and a man of integrity, but he is caught, and the City of Philadelphia is caught in a terrible difficult position. Now, if we could move, at this time, with the creation of a Department of Finance, we would, at once, make a great and constructive step in the direction of sound fiscal management for the City of Philadelphia and correct what happens to be momentarily a most unhappy situation in the City of Philadelphia. Thank you very much gentlemen.

SENATOR HEYBURN.

Thank you, Mr. Binns. Are there any questions?

SENATOR BARR:

How is the Committee of Fifteen appointed—by city council?

MR. BINNS:

It is a creature of city council. There are five councilmen and nine citizens set up by ordinance of city council to study the whole problem of business-like management.

SENATOR BARR:

Your recommendations are not the same as Mr. Meade's?

MR. BINNS:

No. Our recommendations are totally unrelated and independent. These are the recommendations of fifteen men—four councilmen (one councilman passed away) and the nine remaining citizen members.

MR. BRUNNER:

Why do you recommend that all officers of the new government other than mayor and members of council be appointed? Would you include the district attorney, the treasurer?

MR. BINNS:

I tried to say very carefully that we are not prepared to make that recommendation—we are not qualified to make it. I said that we leaned in that direction—that, apparently, is the direction cities throughout the nation have gone in. There is no Republican way to record deeds or Democratic way to record deeds. If you elect a sheriff, you shouldn't elect a chief of police. It is a question of how many shall be elective and how many appointive. I feel, personally, you have got to elect a mayor and you have got to hold him responsible and pin the problem on him; and, if he doesn't work, throw him out; but you can't do it by spreading out. In our county the budget is approximately one-sixth the city budget, and yet there are many more men, I think five or six times as many men elected in the county as there is in the city. Why, if it is proper to elect all the officers in the county government, shouldn't you elect by the ballot the director of supplies and purchases; why not elect the chief of police; why not elect the director of wharves, docks. You have one system one place, the other the other. It seems to us, at long last, this business of government is the business of a good man. Give him the works and the reigns and hold him to it. The multi-headed monster is not conducive to sound, efficient business management.

MR. BRUNNER:

I realize you did not make a recommendation. I was interested in the reasons for your observations.

SENATOR BARR:

Mr. Binns, was Mr. Marshall caught in his own back-field?

MR. BINNS:

I am not familiar with that vernacular.

SENATOR DENT:

You said that Mr. Marshall was an honest man but he got caught—you don't want it that way on record.

MR. BINNS:

I believe that Mr. Marshall, personally, is an honest man, and a man of integrity. I believe he is the victim of a set of circumstances.

SENATOR DiSILVESTRO:

What do you think of Grakelow. I think that Mr. Grakelow is an honest man also. If we are going to make a statement about one gentleman, I think not speaking about the other gentleman makes him guilty. I don't think he is guilty, personally.

MR. BINNS:

In this final report which the Committee of Fifteen is rendering to the mayor we make that statement.

SENATOR DENT:

That everybody was honest.

MR. ANDREWS:

Where did you fix responsibility for determining the stabilization period?

MR. BINNS:

The state legislature. We are recommending that it amend the present Smith Act.

SENATOR HEYBURN.

The Smith Resolution.

MR. BINNS:

To make it five years instead of ten.

MR. ANDREWS:

You would write that into the Constitution?

MR. BINNS:

Yes. That means automatically, sir, you have to postpone it two years, because it has to come up twice, and that gives us the time we think we need to readjust local affairs before the stabilization.

MR. ANDREWS:

Would the period be a matter of charter determination if the city is given power by constitutional amendment?

MR. BINNS:

I am not able to answer that.

MR. ANDREWS:

I want to know whether by means of a provision in the charter the city couldn't be given the power to determine the stabilization period.

MR. SCHWARTZ:

Under present conditions your standards are rigidly fixed in the Constitution. If the constitutional provision is amended, that amendment could take the form of fixing a limit and authorizing the municipality to determine what the average shall be; but that will depend upon the terms of the constitutional amendment. At the present time it couldn't be done.

SENATOR DENT:

The answer is yes.

SENATOR HEYBURN:

Mr. MacDonald has a statement to make before we adjourn.

MR. MACDONALD:

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, thank you very much for your indulgence to hear me—I will take but a moment. I have no desire to enter into any controversy with Mr. Binns in his approach to the tax structure of the five- or ten-year period, but I must repeat to you that I represent on the Real Estate Board the interests of the home owners and the property owners of Philadelphia, and that in the past ten years, which will not be entirely low assessment years, we in the real estate activities are very conscious that there have been increases in assessments, particularly in the last five years. We have gone along with those assessments because in many instances we thought those increased assessments were justified. Where we thought otherwise the natural course of appeal was taken; but I would not want you gentlemen to think for one moment that the last ten years was an entire ten-year period of low assessment value in the City of Philadelphia. I would not want that impression to be broadcast because in the last five years there has been an upping of assessments. If you take the last ten years, you get a good average assessment over a ten-year period. Again I state that we who are engaged in the real estate business and those with whom we have been in contact nationally, from an economic standpoint, are very much of an opinion, that this eighteen-year cycle does exist; and that we, in advocating the ten-year period for real estate assessed valuation, are doing everything within reason not only to aid the city in its improvement program but also to keep consciously in mind the interest of the small property owner who will be affected by this debt structure and assessment charges. Gentlemen, please remember that. Thank you very much.

SENATOR HEYBURN:

I think we have time before lunch to hear Mr. James A. Finnegan, chairman of the Philadelphia Democratic County Executive Committee.

MR. FINNEGAN:

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
1418 Walnut Street,
Philadelphia, Pa.

STATEMENT BY JAMES A. FINNEGAN, CHAIRMAN,
DEMOCRATIC COUNTY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
BEFORE JOINT STATE GOVERNMENT COMMISSION,
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, WEDNESDAYS, DECEMBER 15.

It has been truly said that governments and systems of law are no better than their administration. The key to good government is honest, competent, conscientious personnel. There is no reason why such personnel cannot be supplied by political parties, and it is my firm conviction, in view of the intelligence, sagacity and advanced stage of political education of the American voter, that a political party must supply this kind of personnel if it it to remain in power, be entrusted with the administration of a great city such as Philadelphia, or, indeed, if it is to survive.

Political parties today must be judged on their merits. Party labels no longer are the determining influence. Political parties will win elections only on the basis of public confidence in the honesty of their intentions and they will remain in power only on a record of proved accomplishment and public service.

If you accept this premise, there is no secret of what is wrong, fundamentally, with the administration of Philadelphia's municipal government. It is a matter of record, written into the reports, surveys and publications, into the minutes and hearings of numerous official and unofficial committees, civic organizations, research organizations and other groups interested in good government. The salient fact about the recommendations made by these groups is that they point the way, and for years have pointed the way, to improvement and reform but the findings, in almost every instance, have been ignored by those who control the administration of our municipal government. This has been true even in numerous cases where the studies were made at the express request of municipal officials, and by committees established and financed by the city authorities for the ostensible purpose of remedying the admittedly bad situation.

I respectfully refer the members of the Commission to the various data accumulated by the following organizations and to their conclusions and findings and recommendations. I respectfully request that this data be made a part of the record of these hearings so that it will be available to the members of the Legislature for their consideration and study.

1. The reports of the Committee of 15, together with the data on which the reports were based. This should include also the records of hearings, the minutes of Committee meetings and the public statements issued by the Committee.

2. The various statements by city officials, relative to the competence and efficiency of personnel in the city and county governments, particularly the recent statement by Director of Public Works Buckley.

3. The various studies and reports prepared for the Committee of 15 by the Bureau of Municipal Research, the Pennsylvania Economy League, and by the various professional research organizations and agencies engaged by them.

4. The official presentments by the Special (June) Grand Jury, particularly with reference to the Receiver of Taxes' Department and the Fire Marshall's office.

5. The report concerning the operation of the City Wage Tax Bureau prepared by Mr. Howard Wolf at the request of the Receiver of Taxes.

6. The various reports and publications of the Bureau of Municipal Research and the Committee of 70, including the publication "Citizens Business" published by the Bureau of Municipal Research and the "Civic Letter" of the Committee of 70, for the past three years.

7. The report of the Bureau of Municipal Research concerning the competence and efficiency of personnel in the Bureau of Weights and Measures.

It is significant that few of the recommendations for municipal improvement and reform made by the Committee of 15 after one year of study and research were adopted by city and county officials, although this committee included several of Philadelphia's most distinguished citizens and was established by City Council. Also significant is the fact that none of the recommendations with respect to the operation of the City Wage Tax Bureau made by a prominent Philadelphia Banker, at the request of the Receiver of Taxes, ever was placed in effect.

These reports form an impressive indictment not only of the defects in machinery of government, but more particularly and significantly of the administration of the machinery of government in Philadelphia and of the personnel utilized to carry on the functions of government.

That is our first need. It is true, however, that an efficient governmental structure and wisely conceived enabling legislation can be of great benefit and assistance in assuring good government in this city. Our governmental structure should be streamlined and brought up to date in the interest of economy and efficiency. But we must never lose sight of the fact that even the most carefully devised techniques and safeguards are not adequate for honest, competent administration and personnel.

First, however, it is extremely important and only fair that, since the legislature possesses powers vitally affecting the welfare of the city, the city be adequately and fairly represented in the legislature. I, therefore, urge that this commission recommend and the legislature enact at the 1949 session a reapportionment of the state's legislative districts in accordance with the clear, unequivocal and express requirement of the Pennsylvania Constitution.

Despite the constitutional requirement that a reapportionment be made of the state's legislative districts following every diennial census, there has been no successful reapportionment since 1920. The 1937 legislature, the only one in recent years in which both houses were controlled by the Democratic party enacted a reapportionment measure, but it subsequently was thrown out by the courts.

There are great areas of the city, which are fantastically under-represented and other areas that are just as fantastically over-represented. Wards 2 to 15 in the city now have 10 members of the lower house—under the formula for representation written into the state constitution, they are entitled to a maximum of 3 on the basis of the official United States 1940 Census. In this area there is one legislative district, the 9th, where a legislator represents only 9,618 population. The Germantown-Chestnut Hill section has one representative for 108,000 population; the Olney-Oak Lane section, only 1 for 157,093 population; in a West Philadelphia district, there are only 2 representatives for 215,212 population; and in the North-east, only one for 177,522 population.

I submit, herewith, complete data on Philadelphia's legislative districts showing the disparity in representation. The figures are from the official 1940 census. (Exhibits "A" and "A-1")

I know the arguments will be advanced that we may as well wait now until after the 1950 census. I do not think such an argument is well-founded. This wrong to hundreds of thousands of Philadelphians has persisted too long already. It is a major cause of Philadelphia's many governmental ills. It should be corrected, forthwith, at the 1949 session.

It is time the Pennsylvania Legislature stopped flouting the Pennsylvania Constitution.

Another measure that should be among the first order of business is an amendment to the election code removing the requirement that watchers at the division polling places must be residents of the election division in which the polling place is located. Enactment of this amendment would go a long way toward insuring honest elections in Philadelphia.

Fraudulent elections, intimidation of voters, wholesale illegal assistance, voting of non-existence electors and forging signatures to the voters' check list and voting persons who do not personally appear at the division polling place—all contribute to bad government in Philadelphia.

Dishonest elections interfere with the free expression of the popular will and prevent the ousting at the polls of public officials who have betrayed the public trust. Such practices, which are widespread and which go unchecked and unpunished in Philadelphia, deny to the residents of this city self-government. They have no redress for their grievances at the polls—because their votes of protest are canceled out by thousands of votes fraudulently cast.

The District Attorney's office makes no genuine effort to halt vote frauds or to punish those guilty of vote frauds. During my entire experience in politics, I have never known of, or heard of, a single instance where the District Attorney's office initiated a single prosecution as to the result of its own efforts or investigations. The District Attorney has been forced to act reluctantly when evidence has been turned over by the Committee of 70 or other civic agencies. But, his prosecutions are usually mere token affairs.

This is not surprising when one realizes that, of the District Attorney's entire investigative staff of 22 county detectives, a minimum of 18 are Republican division committeemen.

The Democratic City Committee no longer turns over to the District Attorney of Philadelphia County any evidence that it may have of election frauds, recognizing the complete futility of such proceeding. However, both the Committee of 70 and the Registration Commission do turn over such cases regularly for further investigation and prosecution. In all but a bare minimum of such cases, there is no prosecution and the cases are dropped. I submit, herewith, two lists of election divisions in which evidence of fraud was cited to the District Attorney by the Committee of 70 and by the Registration Commission following the 1947 Mayoralty election—in which there was no prosecution. (Exhibits "B" and "C")

Some interesting facts can be drawn from Exhibits "B" and "C". In the first place, you will note that a total of 45 separate cases were cited to the District Attorney, either by the Registration Commission or by the Committee of 70. The District Attorney, of course, built no cases of his own nor uncovered any fraud on his own, although the fact that frauds regularly occur in Philadelphia elections is so generally understood and so widely accepted as to be beyond the realm of controversy.

In 37 of the 45 cases, there either was no action by the District Attorney's office or the cases were dropped by the District Attorney for various reasons, including his asserted inability to find witnesses or the fact that witnesses changed their stories or claimed the disputed signatures as their own.

In only two cases were convictions obtained. Two others resulted in acquittals and one in a demurrer to the evidence sustained by the trial judge. In three others, election boards were held by magistrates and indicted by grand juries and still are awaiting trial.

I call your attention especially to the unduly long period which elapses between the time the cases were cited to the District Attorney by the Committee of 70 and prosecution was begun in those few cases where there was prosecution. It is not uncommon for six months to elapse before even a grand jury indictment is obtained. This, of course, makes it difficult for witnesses to be located and gives plenty of time for the application of pressure by the City Hall machine, and is still another manifestation of the District Attorney's hostility to prosecutions of this kind. It also allows indignant voters plenty of time to "cool off" and lose their enthusiasm for prosecuting those guilty of election frauds.

I also charge that, whether deliberately or because of incompetence, the District Attorney's office shows a remarkable propensity for botching up the evidence in cases where prosecution cannot be avoided, until it is no wonder defendants are acquitted by juries.

In one election division, the 21st division of the 20th ward, which is listed in Exhibit "B", evidence was presented that four persons whose signatures appeared on the voters' check list as voting were dead, two were in prison and one was a soldier, serving his country in the Army of Occupation in Germany at the time the election took place. The District Attorney, however, by his masterful presentation of this incontestable evidence of fraud managed to win an acquittal.

In another division, the 12th division of the 20th ward, the District Attorney notified the Committee of 70 that he was dropping prosecution because of the witnesses cited whose signatures on the voters' check list were believed fraudulent, half said they had voted and the other half he simply could not find. After several requests, he furnished the Committee of 70 with a list of the witnesses he could not find. These asserted frauds, remember, occurred in the 1947 Mayoralty election. After the 1948 Presidential election had been held, the District Attorney finally supplied the Committee of 70 with the names of the missing witnesses. Acting on a hunch, the Committee's investigators checked the Binders in the Office of the Registration Commission for the 1948 Presidential Election. Of the 13 names supplied, the Committee found that 8 of those who could not be located by the District Attorney for questioning concerning fraudulent voting in the 1947 election were recorded as having voted in the 1948 Presidential election. The Republican division committeemen apparently had no difficulty finding them.

The handling of election fraud cases by the Philadelphia District Attorney is a disgrace, and a travesty on justice.

I submit also a list showing the official vote in selected divisions in those areas where election frauds regularly take place, for the 1947 election, (Exhibit "D"). The returns, I submit, indicate fraud on their face, but there

EXHIBIT "C"

The following data concerns election divisions cited to the Philadelphia District Attorney by the Philadelphia County Registration Commission for investigation and prosecution following the 1947 Mayoralty Election. In these divisions a routine examination and comparison of signatures on the voters' check list with the signatures of electors on the affidavits in the Commission's files indicated a possibility of fraud sufficiently strong to warrant their being cited to the District Attorney by the Registration Commission for investigation and prosecution, if warranted. In each instance, the cases were dropped and there was no prosecution.

SENATOR HEYBURN:

As I recall, the Constitution provides it must be uniform all over the State.

MR. WATSON:

That is true.

MR. FINNEGAN:

I still believe that this amendment I am asking for and most of the civic agencies here are endorsing certainly would be out of the realm of controversy in any section of the state.

SENATOR HEYBURN:

I just wanted it pointed out that it must be uniform all over the state. With respect to the fixing of salaries, we passed a piece of legislation last session giving city council that power in certain cases.

MR. MORGAN:

Yes, there was such legislation, and the law only permitted city council to fix the salaries of appointed officers.

SENATOR WALKER:

In Exhibit "D" you indicate election divisions in Philadelphia where the likelihood of fraud is suggested by official vote. Taking the ninth division of the third ward, the vote is 419 to 5—the neighboring division don't support such an overwhelming vote. Do you have any districts in the City of Philadelphia where just the reverse was true in the November elections of this year?

MR. FINNEGAN:

No, sir. We had strong Democratic districts but not that strong. I think you are losing sight of one fact, and that is that the election machinery at the present time is controlled by the Republican Party in Philadelphia. Consequently, they have no difficulty at all in getting competent watchers. However, minority parties in the City of Philadelphia do have great difficulty in getting watchers in certain sections of this city due to intimidation and their fear of reprisals by the local politicians in that particular division.

MR. LEE:

Was this a primary?

MR. FINNEGAN:

A general election. In a primary I could understand figures like that.

SENATOR WALKER:

Do you have any objection to submitting a copy of this to the district attorney's office?

MR. FINNEGAN:

I am happy to. In fact, all of these exhibits are a matter of record already in the district attorney's office. They have been submitted by the Committee of 70.

SENATOR DENT:

I have listened to the charges and surcharges (referring to Sheriff Meehan's argument) on the inability to get watchers. Perhaps the Committee of 50, 70, 20, or whatever it is, would want to recommend to the legislature not the naming of a city charter commission but a new vigilante committee.

MR. FINNEGAN:

I think this amendment should apply to both the primary and general election and to all parties. That is the only way we are going to get honest competent government not only in Philadelphia but in any municipality, borough, or township, and the continuation of the fraudulent practices carried out in Philadelphia by both political parties certainly gives rise to the thought that democracy is on the way right here. I don't think the people of certain localities of this city need be impressed.

AFTERNOON SESSION

SENATOR HEYBURN:

Mr. Joseph S. Clark, representing Americans for Democratic Action.

MR. CLARK:

(Mimeographed statement presented.) I am not going to read this program because, substantially, it is what we presented July 19th. We have since, however, done a great deal of research work and had meetings with other civic organizations. I would like to comment, briefly, if I may, on the different planks in that program and discuss very briefly some of the matters brought before you this morning, because I think there is a good deal of fog around some of these questions. First, with respect to city-county consolidation, could I emphasize the point made by Mr. Andrews this morning that the proposal of the Republican City Committee in that regard is an utterly unsound and unrealistic one. You cannot and you should not write into the State Constitution a framework for the government of the City of Philadelphia. It would be a serious error of the first magnitude. The type of city-county consolidation amendment which we recommend is attached as exhibit one to the memorandum. It is not our work—it represents the work of people who have been thinking about the thing for fifteen or twenty years as the result of conferences among a number of civic agencies. It covers what I think is sound government procedure in that it is a resolution which consolidates the city and county and then leaves the details of consolidation to legislation. That is the only sound way to bring city-county consolidation about, and any other suggestion, gentlemen, is a red herring and a phoney. Secondly, with respect to a new charter for Philadelphia, we recommend, as you know, the Evans Charter as the basis for discussion. The Committee of 70 and a number of other civic organizations are largely in accord with our proposal. There is nobody against our proposal except the Republican City Committee. I urge on you gentlemen that this Evans proposal with the changes which we suggest present a basis on which I am confident all people of good will in Philadelphia can come to an agreement. If you gentlemen, either yourselves or through a subcommittee as suggested by Mr. Finnegan, will honor us with coming down here and sitting here a week or ten days and ironing out those difficulties, your prestige, judgment and ability will make it possible to get agreement where many of these organizations are unwilling because of reasons of pride, loss of face, etc., to get together on a sound program. If we want a new city charter at this session of the legislature, I feel we do very strongly, this is the way to get it. Next, with respect to home rule—we are for home rule, and there is a home rule provision in the Evans Charter, and we have submitted a draft of a home rule section which we believe adequate; but, may I point out to you gentlemen that home rule too can be a red herring. The pious hope, in my judgment, of the Republican City Committee is that this session of the legislature will not adopt a new city charter; that it will adopt a home rule bill which will have the provision in it enabling the city committee to control the charter commission which will draft the new charter. They will bring it on in half-baked form for the 1950 election when men and women of good will in Philadelphia will be scattered in political allegiance. Republican and Democrats will not be able to agree on a nonpartisan or bipartisan approach, and we won't get our new city charter which is just what the Republican City Committee wants to have happen. Thirdly, we want civil service for the county officers. I cannot emphasize too strongly, gentlemen, that the keystone of corruption in Philadelphia today is the control of the county patronage by the Republican City Committee; and, while I am first to agree that we are dealing here today only with the tools of good government and in the last analysis the problems of the City of Philadelphia will be answered only at the ballot box and not through these methods of reform, nonetheless the single most important tool in my judgment for Philadelphia is the extension of civil service to the county offices; and that could be done at this session of the legislature. May I say, don't judge civil service by the way it is administered in City Hall, Philadelphia. It is a shambles and a disgrace. If you say because civil service is not well administered in City Hall we don't want any more civil service, I think you are making a grave mistake. One of those reports Mr. Binns referred to and Mr. Finnegan mentioned by Hay Associates made for the Bureau of Municipal Research and submitted to the Committee of Fifteen for its approval, which approval it did not get, is one of the most searching analysis of the political domination in City Hall and the county government—of our whole city administration and lays at that door a large part of the evils which now confront us. I would like to take issue with my friend Senator Dent with whom I usually agree 95% when he says "Look at civil service in the state." I had the good fortune a year or so ago to be engaged in private litigation as a result of which it was necessary to call in as witnesses fifteen members of the Liquor Control Board, ranging from supervisor of purchases down to two or three clerks in the local stores. I have never seen a finer, better, more alert, more intelligent, more honest group of men in my experience at the bar. If you don't take civil service for the county offices, if you don't make it possible for us to get better administration of civil service in the city offices, we are never going to clean up Philadelphia and give it a decent government. I am a Democrat. I have always been a Democrat. I hope to continue as a Democrat. I shudder to think of the Democratic Party taking over City Hall and the county offices without civil service because the pressure for jobs would be such that nobody, regardless of how good, would be able to resist. The leaders of the municipal affairs of Philadelphia deserve the protection of civil service and deserve the opportunity to make it work as it has been doing in countless municipalities. To be sure, it is not perfect; but, compare it to the spoils system in Philadelphia as it is today and you have the difference between day and night. As to the consolidation of election functions in the registration commission, which we favor, I hope you will do it, but don't consolidate with the county commissioners if you don't want fraud. In my judgment, the present county commissioners are under such disabilities it is impossible to properly run elections. You can do a good thing by consolidating registration and elections in the registration commission. There is some problem as to its constitutionality; I think it is constitutional, and I suggest that those sections of the Constitution dealing with voting machines and election laws is broad enough to permit this being done, but I won't vouch for it as a constitutional expert. As for watchers at the polls, I can say no more than Mr. Finnegan and Mr. Miller. It is vital that we have that protection. If you gentlemen think court protection is necessary for good squads, then we should have it. I concur in the request for reapportionment. I also concur in the request for a party raiding bill for the reason dragged out of Mr. Miller that it will make it possible for a substantial group of honest Philadelphia Republicans to vote for reform without voting the Democratic ticket, and if that will make them happy, I certainly think we ought to help them out.

Gentlemen, I would like to make a brief remark about the plan of Mr. Meade today. It is not city-county consolidation. It would not help our city government; it would harm it. Imagine consolidating the recorder of deeds and the register of wills, two high-grade clerks, and saying they should be elected by popular ballot. Why do you have to elect all court clerks? Why do you have to combine the coroner and sheriff and have them selected? I will tell you why—non-civil service. He knows and you know that if you scatter the attention of the voter among a large number of offices, if you don't consolidate this sprawling government under a mayor and a small city council, the opportunities for perpetuating the type of government we have in Philadelphia now will be enormously multiplied. I was interested to hear the program of Mr. Meade for streamlining. It is more of a London fog. In the 1949 campaign it is a phoney and a dud. Please don't let it go on.

AMERICANS FOR DEMOCRATIC ACTION

Memorandum Respecting Legislative Program to be Presented to Joint State Government Commission

December 15, 1948

I. INTRODUCTION

At the July 19, 1948 meeting of the Joint State Government Commission, ADA presented a proposed legislative program. Since that date, many conferences and a substantial amount of research have resulted in the formulation of more specific and definite suggestions implementing the original program. A bi-partisan citizens' committee under the Chairmanship of Richardson Dilworth, known as the Action Committee for Philadelphia Reform, has been organized. The Committee of Seventy has indicated its approval of most of the ADA program. It is hoped that several of the other civic organizations represented at the July 19th meeting will support most, if not all, of the ADA recommendations and will not oppose others. There follows a discussion of each of the recommendations heretofore made:

II. RECOMMENDATIONS FOR LEGISLATION

1. City-County Consolidation

The draft of a City-County Consolidation amendment to the Pennsylvania Constitution which appears on page 44 of Thomas Evans' pamphlet "Demand for Action" is recommended for adoption with minor changes correcting typographical mistakes and eliminating, on the ground that it is unnecessary, the next to last sentence in the proposed Section 8 to article fourteen of the Constitution. This sentence prohibits receipt of fees or commissions for work done in the course of public employment by officers or employees paid out of the City treasury. This evil has already been covered by legislation and it seems inadvisable to include the provision in the Constitution. A draft of the amendment with these changes is attached as Exhibit 1.

2. A New Charter for Philadelphia

The form of City Charter set forth in Thomas Evans' pamphlet "Demand for Action" is recommended as a basis for discussion. Study has indicated the desirability of a number of changes in this bill which, in turn, derives from the bill proposed by the City Charter Commission in 1938 and the Shapiro Bill of 1943, referred to at the earlier meeting of the Joint State Government Commission. The principal changes may be summarized as follows:

A. There should be a preamble setting forth that public office is a public trust and that the standards of ethics and propriety required of a trustee in the administration of a private trust shall apply to the acts of all municipal officers and employees.

B. City Council should consist of 13 members, 1 of whom should be elected from each of the 8 State Senatorial Districts, the remaining 5 to be elected at large. Party designations should appear on the voting machines for all candidates.

C. City Council should have the power to abolish departments as well as to create new departments.

D. The present Fairmount Park Commission should be allowed to remain undisturbed. Article IV of the proposed Charter should be amended accordingly.

E. Potential interdepartmental trouble through overlapping duties of the Departments of Public Utilities, Public Works, City Property and Port, Commerce and Industry should be eliminated by redrafting. It is recommended that departmental responsibility regarding harbor facilities and airports be clearly delegated to the Department of Port, Commerce and Industry.

F. The proposed Department of City Planning should be revised to perpetuate the present city planning status, which is working satisfactorily.

G. Article XIV creating the Department of Civil Service should be revised to provide for appointment of the Civil Service Commission by the Mayor with the advice and consent of Council instead of by Council itself as at present. The Personnel Director should not be required to be a resident of Philadelphia at the time of his appointment. Assistant Directors of Departments should be eliminated from classified service as should a clerk or secretary to each department head as well as to the Mayor. The prohibition against political activity should be confined to officers or employees in the classified service and not be applicable to everyone paid out of the City treasury.

I. Article XX should be changed to provide for the appointment of a Board of Assessment Appeals by the Mayor with the advice and consent of Council, instead of by the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas as at present. It is desirable to limit, as much as possible, the appointing power of the Judges in order to remove them from political pressure. Lists of eligible candidates for appointment should be presented to the Mayor by the Personnel Director of the Civil Service Commission after unassembled competitive examinations have established a list of qualified persons.

J. The capital budget provided for in Article XXII should be framed on the basis of the six year public improvements program now prepared by the City Planning Commission, showing not only improvements to be made but also the suggested sources of funds for each project. It should be adopted by ordinance by a majority vote of Council after public hearings. No appropriation for a public improvement should be made without review, allowing proper time and procedure and publicly issued report by the City Planning Commission. Section 2209 providing for a constantly decreasing percentage of amounts authorized by the capital budget which can be raised by loan is probably not realistic and too inflexible.

K. Article XXIII on loans should be revised to eliminate the requirement of a 2/3 vote of Council before the indebtedness of the City can be increased.

L. The home rule provision of Article XXVII should be expanded. Attached as Exhibit 2 are sections proposed to be added to this article providing the mechanics for elections to determine whether the Charter should be rewritten or amended.

M. The schedule and repealer in the Evans draft will require revision in the light of conditions existing in the Legislature at the time the bill is finally passed.

3. Civil Service in County Offices.

A proposed act establishing a Civil Service system in the County Offices appears on pages 45 to 55 of Mr. Evans' pamphlet "Demand for Action." Passage of this act is recommended after amendments to bring it in line with the suggestions for changes in the Civil Service provisions of the City Charter outlined under 2-G above. The same Civil Service Commission appointed by the Mayor with the advice and consent of Council should administer the Merit System in the County Offices.

4. Repeal of the Party Raiding Provisions of the Election Code of 1937.

The Act of June 14, 1935, P. L. 337, known as the "Party Raiding Bill" forbade candidates for public office to run on more than one ticket. These provisions were incorporated into the Election Code of June 3, 1937, P. L. 1333. Their constitutionality was upheld in Wilson v. Philadelphia, 319 Pa. 47, and Thompson v. Morrison, 352 Pa. 616. The effect of this legislation is to make it impossible for any independent body of voters to support the candidates of a particular party with which they do not desire to affiliate through the medium of organizing a political body or political party of their own. In practice, this has worked out as a deterrent to the election of competent and honest candidates in Philadelphia. It is recommended that these provisions be repealed. This can be done by amendments to Section 951 of the Act of June 3, 1937, P. L. 1333, 25 P. S. 1911, and also to Section 976 of the same Act, 25 P. S. 1936. The draftsman of the repealer should examine the remainder of the Election Code with care to be sure that certain other sections of the Code do not also require amendment with this end in view.

5. Consolidation of all Election Functions in the Registration Commission.

If item 3 above is approved, it would result in placing these employees under the Merit System. It is expensive and inefficient to have two separate bodies charged respectively with registration and election matters. Economy and efficiency would be promoted by consolidating the two agencies. It is recommended that the surviving body should be the Registration Commission. Attached as Exhibit 3 is a memorandum setting forth in greater detail the reasoning in support of this recommendation.

6. Legislation Authorizing the Appointment of Watchers at the Polls Who Do Not Reside in the Election Division in Which they Serve.

Most of the fraud in recent Philadelphia elections arises from intimidation in certain election divisions where the minority party is not and cannot be represented by watchers who reside within the division because such individuals are afraid to qualify and serve. There are approximately 100 divisions of this sort in Philadelphia. The suggested legislation would remedy this condition and, to a large extent, eliminate the intimidation. It is in accord with the law in other States such as Maryland.

7. A Constitutional Amendment Changing the Debt Limitation Provisions Applying to Philadelphia.

It is recommended that the City debt limit be stabilized at 12½% of the average yearly assessed valuation of taxable real estate for the past ten years. Such an amendment would reduce the wide fluctuations in the debt limit and provide a stable base. The proposed draft of such an amendment which has been approved by the Bureau of Municipal Research, the Pennsylvania Economy League, and a number of other civic agencies interested in this problem is recommended for adoption.

8. Legislation Similar to New York State's Moreland Act Providing for the Effective Investigation of Municipal Affairs by the Governor.

Legislation of the above character facilitated the general clean-up of New York City municipal politics during the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt as Governor of New York. Such legislation was essential to the success of Samuel Seabury and Thomas Dewey, who broke the back of the Tammany machine with the assistance of Fiorello LaGuardia. It will be recalled that, under such legislation, James Walker was deposed as Mayor by the then Governor Roosevelt. The present Pennsylvania Grand Jury investigation system is cumbersome and ineffective. The presently unsatisfactory results of the investigations now in progress are the best testimony to this effect. The proposed legislation will authorize the Governor, for cause shown, to investigate conditions in any municipality. His investigating agents would have the power of subpoena and the right to swear witnesses. Attached as Exhibit 4 is a draft of the desired legislation.

City-County Consolidation Amendment

Proposing an amendment to article fourteen of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania abolishing County of Philadelphia as a separate political entity and providing for administering of County functions by City of Philadelphia

The General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania hereby resolves as follows:

Section 1. The following amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania be and the same is hereby proposed in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof.

That article fourteen be amended by adding thereto section eight as follows:

Section 8. The County of Philadelphia as a political entity separate and distinct from the City of Philadelphia is hereby abolished. Functions of the County government within the City and the functions of the Philadelphia courts shall be performed by officers of the City who shall be appointed or elected as may be provided by law, but nothing in this section shall apply to the manner of selecting judges and magistrates. Except as the General Assembly may otherwise provide the tax levying body of the City shall control all expenditures from the City treasury. Laws shall be enacted to provide that all appointments and promotions of officers and employees paid out of the City treasury shall be according to merit and fitness. No law regulating the affairs of cities or counties shall be held invalid as local or special because of the inclusion of provisions giving effect to this section.

Section 2. That no inconveniences may arise from the changes in the Constitution of the Commonwealth and in order to carry the same into complete operation it is hereby declared that

This amendment shall be effective immediately upon its adoption.

Immediately upon the adoption of the amendment all County and court officers and employees paid out of the City treasury of Philadelphia shall become officers and employees of the City of Philadelphia and, until the General Assembly shall have otherwise provided, shall continue to perform their duties and be elected, appointed, compensated, and organized in such manner as may be provided by the Constitution and laws of the Commonwealth in effect at the time the amendment becomes effective; but elected County officers, if actually in office serving the term for which they were elected when this amendment becomes effective, shall be permitted to complete such terms.

Home Rule Provisions to be Added to Article XXVII
"Home Rule" in Senate Bill 204 (1943 Session)

Section 2705. Initiation of Proceedings by Electors. Amendments to this Act may be proposed by a petition filed with council setting forth the text of the proposed amendments and signed by registered electors of the city equal in numbers to at least twenty per centum of the total number of electors registered in the city at the preceding general or municipal election but in no case shall more than twenty-five thousand signatures be required. Upon the filing of such petition by electors council shall forthwith provide by ordinance for the submission of the amendments to this Act proposed by such petition to the qualified electors of the city for their approval or disapproval. Each elector signing a petition shall add to his signature his occupation and residence and the date of signing. Signatures to the said petition may be on separate sheets but each sheet shall have appended to it the affidavit of some person not necessarily the same person as on other sheets that to the best of affiant's knowledge and belief the signers are registered electors of the city that they signed with full knowledge of the contents of the petition and that their residences are correctly given.

Section 2706. Filing and Distribution of Proposed Amendments Initiated by Electors. Framing of Ballot Questions. The amendments proposed by a petition of electors shall be filed with council which shall thereupon cause said proposal or proposals together with the form of the question or questions hereinafter provided for to be printed in pamphlet form in sufficient number for general distribution. The said pamphlets shall be made ready for distribution at least seventy days before the election at which the proposals aforesaid are to be voted upon by the electors and the said proposals together with the said ballot questions shall also be advertised once a week for three weeks in two newspapers of general circulation in the city and in the legal newspaper if any of the county. Such advertisements shall appear during the three weeks immediately preceding the election at which the vote is to be taken upon said proposals. Each ballot question shall be framed in brief form of not more than seventy-five words by the electors proposing the amendments. The said questions shall be stated in the petition proposing said amendments. All such amendments to this Act shall be separately submitted. The said ballot questions shall indicate the nature of the proposal to be submitted to the electors. The clerk of council shall within five days after receipt of amendments to this Act proposed by the electors as hereinabove provided certify an exact copy of the text of such amendments together with the necessary ballot questions to the county board of elections. The county board of elections shall cause the said ballot questions to be properly printed on the ballots or ballot labels.

Section 2707. Submission of Amendments to Electors. The proposed amendments initiated by electors shall be submitted to the electors for approval or disapproval by the use of the ballot questions framed as aforesaid at the next general or municipal election occurring more than ninety days after the proposed amendments are filed with council.

Section 2708. Effect of Adoption of Amendments on Existing Laws. Any amendments to this Act thus proposed by the electors which are approved by a majority of the qualified electors voting thereon shall become the organic law of the city at such time as may be fixed therein and all courts shall take judicial notice thereof. So far as the same are consistent with the grant of powers and the limitations restrictions and regulations prescribed in this Act they shall supersede any existing charter and all acts or parts of acts local special or general as well as any and all ordinances affecting the organization government and powers of such city to the extent that they are in conflict therewith. All existing acts or parts of acts and ordinances affecting the organization government and powers of the city not in conflict with the amendments so adopted shall remain in full force.

Section 2709. Recording and Filing of Amendments. The clerk of the city council or other legislative authority of the city shall forthwith cause the said amendments as approved by the qualified electors to be recorded in the ordinance book of the city.

Transfer of Election Functions from County Commissioners to Registration Commission

There seems to be no valid reason for the present system of maintaining two distinct organizations, one to register the voters (the Registration Commission), and the other (the County Commissioners) to accept and count the votes. It is like having two conductors on every trolley car, one to receive the money and transfers, and the other to ring up the fares. The Registration Commission has five members, a special counsel, a year around staff of 135 employees, and an annual payroll of $382,500. The County Commissioners in their Bureau of Elections have a year around staff of 101 employees, and a payroll of $289,000, supervised by the three County Commissioners, aided by a special counsel. These figures do not include part time employees used during peak periods. In Philadelphia, therefore, the registration and voting of 1,050,000 voters requires the services of 236 permanent employees, aside from the five and three Commissioners and two special counsel, at an annual cost of $701,141, or sixty-seven cents per voter.

Permanent costs in Philadelphia are excessive. In Delaware County, Pennsylvania, there were some 181,000 registered voters in 1947, and the cost of the Registration Commission $58,000, and the County Commissioners' employees assigned to voting matters $26,000, a total of $84,000, or about forty-five cents a voter. New York City handles the registration and voting of three and a half million, with a very small permanent staff, at a total cost of $362,360, say ten cents a voter. In New York City, the Board of Elections handles both the registration and voting. Cleveland, Detroit and other large cities, through one agency, handle the registration and voting of their citizens with fewer permanent employees and at costs which vary from 30% to 50% lower than Philadelphia.

The merging of registration and handling voting lends itself to efficiency. Many of our large cities follow this plan, such as New York, Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit. The work of registration is done before and after elections, the work of handling the vote is, of course, done immediately around election day. In Philadelphia, the 101 "workers" assigned to election duties in the County Commissioners' Office have little to do after election day, other than to "guard" the voting machines, and a few of them service and maintain the machines. After the binders are closed ten to fifteen days before the election, for a period of several months there is little work for the staff of the Registration Commission.

We therefore recommend that the functions of registering and handling the vote in Philadelphia be combined.

Should the combination result in putting this work in the hands of the Registration Commission, the County Commissioners, or the Courts?

In favor of putting these functions in the hands of the Registration Commission may be cited the fact that this body has, or at least should have, knowledge of election matters and experience in handling them. After all, the handling of an election is merely getting the voter to utilize the system that Permanent Registration has made available for him, and counting the results. His right to vote is based on his registration. Whether only those entitled to vote have voted is a matter which the law requires the Registration Commission to check. The counting of the vote is an easy matter for a body which has previously registered and tabulated all who have the right to vote.

There would seem to be no reason for putting these functions in the hands of the County Commissioners. It is true that this plan is recommended in the Evans "Demand for Action," but it is suggested that the County Commissioners serve no real need anyway and should be abolished and, consequently, it is a mistake to add to their duties. The County Commissioners are a sort of catch-all department of unrelated duties handling Weights and Measures (a law enforcement function which should be turned over to the Department of Public Safety), various functions pertaining to Veterans and children (which belong to the Department of Welfare), and voting. Instead of having voting handled as one of a number of unrelated duties, it would seem preferable that this be handled by a body specializing in electoral matters already, and having no other duties to perform. In the event of the merger of the City and County of Philadelphia, the need of County Commissioners is even less apparent, and to assign additional duties to this body is merely to augment the few reasons for retaining them.

There is some argument that the Courts be given charge of registration and voting, and that it be handled under a special master who would relieve the Courts of everything except supervisory duty. It is thought by some that turning over a function to the Courts removes the likelihood of political interference and of course voting is something that should be zealously guarded from such interference. At the present time, the Courts do participate in election matters, in that they hear appeals from the action of the Registration Commission and County Commissioners, count the vote in elections where County Commissioners are to be voted for, hear cases involving election frauds and the opening of ballot boxes, and try those persons indicted for offences against the Registration Act and Election Code. While handling registration and voting is a subject involving detail and the maintenance of quite a staff, still under a competent supervisor there would be little more for the Judges themselves to do than they do now, just as the Prothonotary, although responsible to the Courts, actually requires little supervision.

There are two reasons, however, why the suggestion of turning all election matters over to the Courts should not be accepted. The important reason is that it involves abolishing the Registration Commission. While this Commission has not shown efficiency or diligence in the performance of its duties, and is a costly arm of the government, nevertheless, if its employees are placed under the Merit System there is no reason why it could not operate efficiently and more economically. Another reason is that no important community in the United States follows the plan of having the Courts handle the election machinery, and all new ideas are difficult to sell.

The Registration Commission is appointed by the Governor, who is usually somewhat above the present sordid level of municipal politics. It is likely, therefore, that with all election matters concentrated in this office, we may secure better administrators through appointment rather than election, as is the case with the County Commissioners. Minority party representation can be better assured through appointment by the Governor from lists submitted by the minority leaders than by the present ineffective method of electing a minority County Commissioner more or less by default. Experience has shown that first-class individuals are willing to accept appointment as Registration Commissioners, although unwilling to stand for office as County Commissioners.

Suggested Draft of an Act to Authorize the Governor to Institute Certain Examinations and Inspections With Respect to Counties and Cities

(Based in part on the New York "Moreland Act")

1. The Governor is authorized, either in person or by one or more persons appointed by him for the purpose, to investigate (a) the official conduct of any county or city officer, whether elected or appointed, or (b) the management and affairs of any department, office, board, bureau or commission of any county or city, whenever he deems such investigation necessary or appropriate to determine whether any person has violated or is about to violate any law of this Commonwealth, or to aid in the enforcement of any law of this Commonwealth, or in obtaining information to serve as a basis for recommending legislation concerning the government of counties or cities, or classes thereof. The Governor and the investigators so appointed by him are empowered to subpoena and enforce the attendance of witnesses, administer oaths and affirmations, take evidence, and require the production of any books, papers or other records deemed relevant or material to the inquiry. Any such examination or investigation, if the Governor so directs, may be conducted under the supervision of one or more judges of any Court of Common Pleas of any county of the Commonwealth, and/or may be conducted before a Grand Jury.

2. Whenever any investigator so appointed shall not be regularly in the service of the Commonwealth, his reasonable compensation for such services shall be fixed by the Governor, and said compensation, as well as all reasonable expenses incurred in the conduct of any investigation herein authorized, shall be a charge against the county, or against the city, as the case may be, but may be paid, in the first instance, from the treasury of the Commonwealth out of any appropriations made for the purpose, upon the order of the Governor, and the warrant of the Auditor General. The body of the county or city invested with the power to make appropriations, on the requisition of the Governor, from time to time, shall forthwith appropriate such sum as shall be needed to pay such expenses, or to reimburse the Commonwealth therefor, and after such appropriations have been duly made, the fiscal officer of the county or city, as the case may be, shall pay such sum in the same manner and by the same authority as other county or city charges are paid.

3. In case of contumacy by, or refusal to obey a subpoena issued to, any person, the Governor and the investigators appointed by him may invoke the aid of the Court of Common Pleas of any county within which such investigation is being carried on, or where such person resides or carries on business, in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books, papers and other records. And such court may issue an order requiring such person to appear before the Governor or the investigators appointed by him, there to produce records, if so ordered; or to give testimony touching the matter under investigation; and any failure to obey such order of the Court may be punished by such Court as a contempt thereof.

4. No person shall be excused from attending and testifying or from producing books, papers or other records pursuant to such subpoena on the ground that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to subject him to criminal prosecution; but no individual shall be criminally prosecuted for or on account of any act, transaction, matter or thing concerning which, pursuant to this Act, he is compelled to testify or produce evidence, after having claimed his privilege against self-incrimination, except that such individual so testifying shall not be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying.

SENATOR WALKER:

Would you turn to page three of your pamphlet to the paragraph headed (E). Where are those departments now? Are they city departments?

MR. CLARK:

Yes, they are city departments under the present charter. The Evans Charter shuffles them around to some extent, and the draftsmanship in the Evans Charter is not beyond reproach.

SENATOR WALKER:

All city department heads are appointed by the mayor.

MR. CLARK:

That is right. We have a Department of Public Utilities and a Department of Public Works. This city property, port, commerce and industry are new phrases for the consolidation of existing departments. That, however, is largely a matter of draftsmanship.

SENATOR WALKER:

Another thing I am still confused about is the party raiding bill. If you had a primary election for mayor of the City of Philadelphia, certain people would file on the Republican ticket, certain people on the Democratic ticket under the present law:

MR. CLARK:

You would also have a political body which would nominate on its own.

SENATOR WALKER:

You mentioned the city charter and home rule. Are you suggesting that the legislative committee draft this charter or that we have a city commission so that the home rule people here can draft their own charter.

MR. CLARK:

My point is that we have had so much milling around with charter drafting—we know what we want except for the matter of details. I am in favor of a legislative charter and home rule bill so if we don't like the legislative charter we can amend it or change it.

SENATOR WALKER:

I am talking about drafting the charter. Would it be better to have a charter commission of Philadelphians to draft the Philadelphia charter?

MR. CLARK:

The charter is already drafted. It is in this pamphlet. These are the suggestions for amending it. If you came down and held public hearing you wouldn't have much trouble with unanimity.

SENATOR WALKER:

If you will notice, perhaps you do not read in Philadelphia a newspaper called "The Evening Bulletin," this newspaper has an editorial on how we worked out unanimity in Pittsburgh. Very frankly, we get a little irked at all of the political parties in Philadelphia airing political beliefs. Here, what we are trying to do is to get a common meeting ground for solving a municipal problem. Frankly, we are trying to be nonpartisan and non-political about it.

MR. CLARK:

You can't.

SENATOR WALKER:

We can if you play the rules we are supposed to observe. If you make a political football out of it that is the end of Philadelphia. I don't think you should say this is a Republican program or a Democratic program, or a Walker program or a Smith program. You say the election bureau should not be put in the hands of the county commissioners. Was it your suggestion that they couldn't handle it?

MR. CLARK:

They wouldn't handle it properly. I think most organizations will agree the Registration Commission could handle the problem.

SENATOR WALKER:

If you put all elections under the Registration Commission, what would you do with it in the charter?

MR. CLARK:

It would remain as the Registration Commission. It should be under civil service. I would be afraid of either political party controlling the election machinery. I would be in favor of continuing appointment by the Governor.

SENATOR WALKER:

In Allegheny County we are trying to do just the opposite. We have a registration commission there appointed by the Governor. We are trying to work it back the other way again. I refer to home rule. The local folks are the ones who select the registration commission.

MR. CLARK:

They are on the level out there.

SENATOR WALKER:

I can't understand where it is a legislative problem. It sounds like a ministerial problem.

SENATOR DENT:

I still think that the legislature will have to draft a charter for no two people have agreed on what they want or how to do it. The advice of certain groups ought to be taken, but if Philadelphia is to have any relief whatsoever, it ought to come from the General Assembly.

MR. ANDREWS:

Have any of the representative citizen organizations here in Philadelphia been inclined to criticize the methods of registration?

MR. CLARK:

Yes they have. However, in view of the alternatives before us, the registration commission would be the better place. You can make a rather substantial savings. If you are going to have effective registration and elections, you have got to have the employees under civil service.

MR. ANDREWS:

I want to know whether the steps you have outlined would likely to be effective in the absence of such legislation as the Moylan (phonetic) bill?

MR. CLARK:

In my judgment you won't get far enough. If you don't put the whole program in, you have got to have number two at least.

SENATOR DENT:

May I make this observation. I don't know whether I catch the significance here of the recommendations being made up to this point, but it seems to me that some master minds have the idea that if this committee recommends to the legislature the consolidation of the registration commission and the county commissioner office that the ills of Philadelphia are going to be cured. I hope this committee doesn't fall into that trap.

SENATOR BARR:

Our registration commission is a pretty high-class outfit now.

MR. CLARK:

I have got some friends on it. I think it is pretty good. The trouble is that all of their investigators are Republican committeemen. That is not fair.

SENATOR BARR:

Mr. Walker and I put registration under one commission in Allegheny County.

MR. ANDREWS:

You could not see any reason why a party organization here in Philadelphia should resent the interference of a Governor of the same party in their election troubles?

MR. CLARK:

I should think they would welcome it. Thank you gentlemen.

SENATOR HEYBURN:

Our next speaker is Mr. Richardson Dilworth.

MR. DILWORTH:

We represent a very substantial group. Our Philadelphia Committee will be very glad to furnish a list of some forty members we have at the present time. The committee is continuing to grow quite rapidly. As of today we have almost as many registered Republicans on the committee as Democrats. I know you gentlemen are reaching the end of the day. However, when you say that in Allegheny you have unanimity in civic and political interests as to what is for the good of the community and that in Philadelphia you don't have the same situation I want to point out to you how far we have come along that road. You remember when you were down here in July the Republican City Committee, in spite of the urgings of both newspapers and of all civic groups, flatly refused to appear or be heard. Today you have heard Mr. Meade and Mr. Meehan in a fighting mood and Mr. Watson, Mr. Harris (former city chairman of the Republican Committee), and Mr. Schwartz is certainly as quick on his feet as any councilman of Philadelphia, whereas at the last meeting no one was present from the Republican City Committee.

First, as to Mr. Meade's program, I think Mr. Clark's observations on that are completely fair. There is this degree of unanimity—there is not a single organization appearing here today, with the exception of the Republican City Committee, that doesn't favor this program. Here is the program we favor—city-county consolidation and a new city charter. We eventually hope to have a modern city government along these lines toward which every other big city is progressing—that the elected officers should simply be policy officers or watch-dog officers. In other words, every group here today will agree that the elective officers should be confined to those and will also agree that, at the most, the elective officers should be the mayor, the council, the district attorney, and the controller. I don't think there is any group that appeared here today or will appear here today that wants any other officers elected. There is a good deal of danger in combining the office of the coroner with the sheriff. Those having business with the sheriff's office would have trouble distinguishing from the and the deputies in there.

Now that is your over-all general situation. In other words, every group that has appeared before you today wants that kind of a city government except the Republican City Committee. Why has Mr. Meade suddenly gotten religious. Well, obviously, the storm has been so great in this city—both the "Bulletin" and the "Inquirer" have come out for every one of the reforms we are advocating, including a legislative charter. Why is this course being pursued by Mr. Meade? He is bending before the wind. He hopes, if the proposition is not analyzed too carefully, they will get away with this. They will have half as many offices to fill and twice as many people, and when you go to the mayor he will again tell you "I don't have anything in the world to say about it," and when you go to see Meade, Meade is out. That is the history of the government of this city today. We wholeheartedly agree with what Senator Walker has said and with what Senator Dent also said. You are simply giving this city tools. It doesn't mean a rebirth in Philadelphia if we continue the present administration—it won't result in any benefit at all. However, it does mean if we do elect the city administration we believe we should have, then we will have good modern tools with which to operate, and people will know where to place responsibility. As for the city charter itself, I don't think again, except for the Republican City Committee, there is a bit of disagreement on any major principle. In city-county consolidation, as to exactly which department should go into another, there should be very little difference of opinion. However, if your group sat down with all groups here today, within two hours the entire drafting of a city charter could be worked out. As I see it, the situation has improved enormously in this city, namely, that, first of all, the Republican City Committee has been forced to take notice of your committee—at least forced to make some concession—and that every civic organization that has appeared here today is in agreement as to the general principle as to what should be brought about. I don't think there is even an disagreement as to other measures we are advocating such as watchers at the polling places, including a law permitting the Governor, on good cause shown, to appoint a commissioner who would be able to come into a county or municipality and subpoena witnesses, examine them and report back to the Governor and have a fair amount of those charges assessed to the county or municipality. If the State oppressed the county or municipality, they would have recourse to the courts as to what is fair and reasonable. All those things are important. We have been under the control of this one party for so long that we do have to have some outside aid before the people of this city can get on their feet and take care of themselves completely. We have to have some outside referee who will assure us of free elections for the kind of government we want. When that is done we are perfectly willing the State should withdraw in these particular functions. I think any time you want to you can get every single group that appeared here today, with the exception of the Republican City Committee, to appear with top men and, within two to three hours time, we could draft bills in a form agreeable to all. It would then be up to the committee to determine what bills the legislature should enact.

SENATOR WALKER:

You said "legislative charter."

MR. DILWORTH:

I mean a charter passed by the State Legislature. As I see it, the Republican City Committee has a wonderful slogan—home rule, give it to us and we the people of Philadelphia will draft a charter. But suppose you give them the power—who has got complete control of the machinery of this city—the very administration which has opposed every reform. We lost the battle, but we are winning the war as a result of losing that battle. That election was fought entirely on the ground that we needed these legislative reforms in addition to a new set of faces in City Hall; and the only reply we could get was that only long-haired men and short-haired women were interested in legislative reforms. If you enact a home rule bill, those very gentlemen are the ones who will be appointing a charter commission who will be deciding when it is to be submitted for a vote, and the same thing will happen that happened in 1938. To give us a start, we need to get a start from the legislature.

SENATOR WALKER:

You are not in favor of a charter commission.

MR. DILWORTH:

If the legislature would appoint a charter commission that might be something else—if it would be really a bipartisan charter commission.

SENATOR WALKER:

Doesn't this Committee of 70 or 15 have a charter drafted?

MR. DILWORTH:

The Committee of 15 never got to that. At one time the Committee of 15 stated that they were going to wind up their duties by recommending, among other things, a complete legislative program. They have decided not to do it—it is outside the scope of their authority.

SENATOR WALKER:

I am assuming these committees are composed of non-partisan, civic-minded individuals.

MR. DILWORTH:

That is right.

SENATOR WALKER:

I thought they were working out a charter.

MR. DILWORTH:

I think the charter every group would agree to use as a basis is the Evans' Charter. I think the Committee of 15, a substantial number of members would agree, five councilmen would not, but men like Mr. Binns, Colonel Sawyer, Mr. Tole, and several others of that type would agree exactly with what Mr. Clark said.

SENATOR WALKER:

Wasn't there also a report filed by a municipal study group at the University?

MR. DILWORTH:

That report was filed at the request of your committee. They said they didn't think they ought to release it to us until the meeting today. We have not seen anything but what was in the newspapers. I have read the summary. It doesn't vary in any great detail from what Mr. Clark recommended this morning, and what Mr. Clark recommended would be agreed to by every organization except the Republican City Committee.

SENATOR WALKER:

Mr. Clark's recommendation is from the Evans' report.

MR. DILWORTH:

That is correct. Nearly all the men at the Institute now are men who participated in the drafting of the Evans' charter.

SENATOR WALKER:

If a charter bill were introduced predicated on the Evans' report and on the report from the University of Pennsylvania that would expedite the thing you are talking about, is that correct?

MR. DILWORTH:

Yes.

SENATOR WALKER:

That would have the business of having more study.

MR. DILWORTH:

Of course there are a lot of details of drafting, that is about all. There is no disagreement on the general principles.

SENATOR WALKER:

What about having some commissioner empowered to investigate municipal problems—that was a suggestion.

MR. DILWORTH:

It has to be on good cause shown.

SENATOR WALKER:

Doesn't the Attorney General function that way if the Governor so directs?

MR. DILWORTH:

Yes, but the tremendous limitation on that is that in the first place he has to operate under grand jury procedure. The Supreme Court ruled that you can't have a sweeping investigation. They were going to investigate the magistrate's court. It was thrown out. The grand jury could investigate only specific charges.

SENATOR WALKER:

This commissioner that was suggested, after he takes testimony, would he have the power of subpoena?

MR. DILWORTH:

Yes.

SENATOR WALKER:

Then what happens? What would be the next legal step? Would they have to present that to a grand jury?

MR. DILWORTH:

No, because you would have your case really in shape.

SENATOR WALKER:

Are you suggesting the Attorney General wouldn't have it in shape?

MR. DILWORTH:

I am saying the Attorney General has not been able to give a general investigation; and, if called before you, he would say the same thing.

SENATOR DENT:

Mr. Walker hasn't any political interests.

SENATOR WALKER:

You missed the though senator.

MR. DILWORTH:

He is a very fine attorney general. Your grand jury, in the first place cannot have that kind of sweeping investigation. In addition, the Supreme Court has held that at the end of a month, if they are continued, they can't return indictments. They have also held that at the end of a month every witness who appears or is subpoenaed cannot be examined under oath until sworn publicly and in open court. The Attorney General has no funds unless the legislature votes them to him to conduct this kind of investigation, and the legislature holds, very properly, in these cases, why should we spend the money of the citizens of various counties to clean up the City of Philadelphia. Why shouldn't Philadelphia pay for that itself. Under this law the Governor can assess the fair cost of such an investigation and such investigation can then be effectively conducted.

MR. BRUNNER:

I think the greatest difficulty this committee will have when the hearing is concluded is separating the facts from the political statements. What about proportional representation? This question has not been posed in the city charter setup.

MR. DILWORTH:

As a purely theoretical matter I believe in it, but it has come into such bad repute it would be hopeless to ask for it. I can't speak for the newspapers—even newspapers like the "New York Times" in New York have turned against proportional representation. We want to get what can be gotten in the way of good government, and it is difficult enough to do that without getting into as controversial a subject as proportional representation.

MR. ANDREWS:

Would your group recommend state supervision of elections?

MR. DILWORTH:

I would be in favor of it for the next four to five years. The referee should be the Governor of the State, and I would like to see whatever the board of elections is to be appointed by the Governor for the time being. Eventually we ought to grow up to the stage where we will be able to handle our own elections.

SENATOR HEYBURN:

Mr. Maurice S. Berison (phonetic), representing the Legislative Committee of the Progressive Party of Philadelphia.

MR. BERISON:

Thank you, senator, and members of the Commission for this opportunity to be heard. I would like to ask a question by way of starting my presentation. Is this the last and only opportunity for programs of legislative reform to be offered to this Commission before the session convenes?

SENATOR HEYBURN:

I should think this certainly would be the last public hearing the Commission would have because the legislature convenes January 4th.

MR. BERISON:

The reason I asked the question was because the members of my committee and the Progressive Party have, as you know, done a herculean job in simply getting on the ballot in the short time allotted before election and have not had time to prepare a full legislative program. There are certainly qualified, true and tried committees who are better qualified and offer concrete programs, and they have done such a job here today. This Commission has sat in an atmosphere, I must say, of impartial justice. It is really a tribute to the American spirit of fair play in listening to all minority and majority opinions. Our party is not concerned much with being elected in the next election. It kind of leaves us in the advantageous position of taking a more honest perspective of how good these reforms are going to be and how immediately we are going to get relief. I say "immediately" advisedly because from most of the programs offered today it seems, in a sense, they are long-range programs which require two sessions of the legislature in most cases before the City of Philadelphia can get relief so badly needed. There is some relief the legislature can provide to the long-suffering population of Philadelphia. I don't come here as a lawyer or qualified student of political economy. I am a traveling salesman, and it gives me, personally, a unique perspective. I am more than a citizen of Philadelphia. I am a citizen of the State. Wherever I go—Reading, Harrisburg, and Pittsburgh—I like to talk to people, and I am always shocked at the low regard in which Philadelphia is held by cities throughout the State. In spite of what some of you representatives and senators have said in the course of the proceedings in which you hold up your own localities and cities as being either as bad or worse than Philadelphia in the matter of corruption and graft, I insist that we in Philadelphia bow to nobody, and that is a disgraceful admission to make; so I say, therefore, the relief we get must be immediate and soon so we ask you to lay down any thought of your own political expediency of your own party requirements. As I said before, the atmosphere is fair here. Let us continue to carry it back to the session in Harrisburg when they convene and try to bring to Philadelphia some relief immediately. Let's clean up the condition whereby political drones can hold office and carry on political activities and continue themselves in power. In off-the-cuff conversation with some of the members of your Commission this morning the view was held that this hearing would only end in frustration. In a sense it is a smoke screen. It sounds terribly cynical, but I can see where such a thing might happen. That would mean the work of all the committees, the civic bodies, the years they have spent in planning and presenting plans, would go for naught. What a crime that would be. A few weeks ago we had a demonstration that the people of this country are more politically mature than many of the politicians thought they were, and I say that unless we carry that idea back to the legislature and try to bring about reforms immediately this year, why the political parties as they exist today will be completely upset, and you will see a new face on the ticket. Thank you gentlemen.

SENATOR HEYBURN:

Does anybody else want to be heard. If not, everybody has had his chance. That is it. Thank you very much for coming.

SUMMARY

As the Committee of Fifteen undertook the task imposed upon it under the resolution of City Council, we realized that it could not be completed within the time at our disposal.

In such a complicated problem as the task of house-keeping for the city and county of Philadelphia, there will always be weaknesses and shortcomings. No system under any political party at any level of government ever has been without fault. We are anxious to portray a well balanced and completely fair picture of Philadelphia's operating problems. In this report we wish to testify that there is good in the administration of the city and county. The majority of our city and county employees are faithful servants and, given capable leadership, can produce good results. We have found many of our political leaders and administrative officers to be earnest men, seeking diligently to serve. We particularly call attention to the following:

1. The Committee of Fifteen was given a free hand, and no department of the city or county government withheld from us any essential information. We have been courteously received, and all department records requested have been available for consultation and examination.

2. We should like to comment upon the achievement of City Council in balancing the 1948 and the 1949 budgets. At the beginning of the year, it seemed that the 1948 budget might be several millions of dollars out of balance. The remedial work done in the Receiver of Taxes office in stimulating income, the economies practiced, and the revision of collections from many sources have balanced the 1948 budget and left a surplus. This is an immense achievement, keeping many millions of dollars in the pockets of the taxpayers of Philadelphia.

We wish, however, to register our conviction that there should be an immediate change in policy and operation in the following respects:

1. In our report of March 1, 1948, we called for a "job audit." By a job audit we meant that an impartial outside organization should be retained to make an inventory of every employee on the city and county payroll, to the following end:

a. Verify that the employee in question did work a full working day on his or her job and has been doing so consistently.

b. Ascertain that the work required was in fact important and needful, and that the quantity of work performed could be reasonably called an honest day's work.

c. Determine if the employees were reasonably qualified to perform the tasks to which they were assigned.

This recommendation was aimed at eliminating from the payroll nonworking political appointees, commonly referred to as "drones." So far as we know, despite our repeated insistence, the controlling political leadership has not as yet made any move which seemed to prove affirmatively that there was any intention of following such a policy. There still remains an attitude on the part of some political leaders that city and county employees should be selected on the basis of political value rather than efficiency in the service of the taxpayers. Efficiency and service to the taxpayers will not be achieved until there is unquestioned allegiance to the proposition that no city or county employees shall be on the payroll unless they are qualified, work full business hours on the job, and do useful work. We urgently recommend to City Council, to the Mayor, and to all of the political leaders that this approach be adopted and followed relentlessly until every non-working employee is either removed from the payroll or put to work.

2. Our investigations and studies throughout the year have convinced us that ultimate responsibility must rest with a man. Deficiencies which may exist in departments under the Mayor must be the responsibility of the Mayor himself. There can be no evading the fact that the Mayor, as the chief executive, must assume and be held fully answerable for the failures of all departments under his control. We strongly urge that he reapproach the problems of qualified employees, observance of working hours, and efficient management of the departments under him.

3. We have been much concerned with what appears to be a clumsy personnel relationship between the city and its employees. There is no intelligent personnel policy in the city and county of Philadelphia. Without debating the merits or demerits of Civil Service, it is generally agreed that Civil Service in Philadelphia covers only a small area of the whole personnel management requirements. Elsewhere in this report there is discussion of the personnel problems. We note it here for emphasis. In our discussion early in 1948 with city and county employees, this lack of any uniform and intelligent policy was highlighted. At that time the Committee urged that salary standardization be revised. Looking toward this end, we recently suggested that City Council create a personnel advisory commission. An ordinance to achieve this was enacted. Unjustifiably, the political leaders have moved to repeal this ordinance. This weak and vacillating policy offers no promise of a foundation upon which a durable personnel relationship may be built.

For many months the Committee of Fifteen wrestled with the problems surrounding the office of the Receiver of Taxes. The many and acute difficulties stemming from them need not be discussed here. Our sole interest is getting the job done. In no single office in the city-county government are machine methods and scientific business procedures so urgently needed as here. The office presents vast physical problems in the billing and collecting of more than $100,000,000 per year from perhaps three and one-half million separate sources. We have urged reorganization, an abler leadership in the Receiver's office and team play among City Council, the Receiver's office, and other departments concerned to achieve these results. We urge that City Council continue indefatigably its efforts to rectify the conditions now existing in the tax-collecting methods. We still believe that appointment of a competent top executive as a Chief Deputy Receiver of Taxes would be the most immediate practical solution to the problem. In addition thereto, it would probably be necessary to call in expert management engineers to assist in the reorganization of the Receiver's office. The outcome of the impeachment proceedings under way against the Receiver cannot be foretold. There is a question whether the ultimate step—creation of the Department of Finance recommended elsewhere in this report—can be consummated in time to meet our needs in 1949, since it requires State legislation. Reasonable men of good will can, in a spirit of co-operation, solve this problem.

The Committee of Fifteen has made a number of other major recommendations, many of which have been adopted. They are listed on Pages 17 to 20 of this report.

STATEMENT BY JOSEPH A. McDONOUGH

It is impossible for me to sign the report of the Committee of Fifteen. While I believe that the members of the Committee were sincere, I believe that the report lacks courage. The facts have been glossed in polite language. There is the risk that the irresponsible political elements responsible for the evils could utilize the recommendations made in the report as their "whitewash."

The Committee of Fifteen came in like the proverbial lion. It departs like a lamb. The Committee failed to publicly and vigorously protest the fact that all of their important recommendations have been or are on their way to the wastepaper basket.

Our investigations proved that Philadelphia suffers from malignant cancer. To cite just one outstanding example: The Office of Receiver of Taxes where the taxpayer's money is collected. The Official entrusted with the responsibility of this office now faces impeachment charges. Promises and political maneuvers have not corrected the chaos in the Receiver of Taxes Office. The Report omits the fact that no one has yet been found who would accept the job of Deputy in the Receiver of Taxes Office under the conditions set by the Official facing impeachment proceedings.

The shirking of responsibility on the part of city officials to handle labor relations and personnel matters in December, 1947 created the Committee of Fifteen. The same bungling of labor relations, the utter refusal to institute correct personnel procedure still prevails at this time.

I have no confidence that the political leaders and the invisible political forces who make the policies of the city will do anything about the chaos exposed by the findings of the Committee of Fifteen.

THE COMMITTEE AND ITS WORK

Origin.

During hearings on the 1948 budget, the more than 22,000 city and county employees sought wage increases to meet the rising cost of living.

City Council thereupon passed a resolution creating a Special Committee on Finances. From the Committee's make-up—five councilmen and ten citizens representing business, industry, labor and other segments of civic life—it derived its popular name: the Committee of Fifteen.

The "Fifteen" was authorized to determine whether any wage demands were justified and, if so, whether the city could afford to grant them out of existing revenues. If the city was found to be incapable of paying increases that were deemed justified, the Committee was to recommend sources of new revenue.

The Problem.

When the Committee started its work in December, 1947, the 1948 budget was closed and the real estate tax rate was fixed. Granting of the wage demands—and of approximately $4,500,000 in departmental requests postponed by City Council—would have put the city more than $15,000,000 "in the red."

Since the budget had been passed, changes in the estimates of revenue and in the real estate tax rate were prohibited by the City Charter. This left the wage tax as the major potential source of added revenue. It is not surprising, therefore, that the Committee was promptly labeled "a stooge for a wage tax increase."

Method of Approach.

The Committee did not rubber-stamp such an increase, however. It first wanted to know the answers to these questions:

1. Is the city's tax dollar efficiently and honestly spent?
2. Is every tax dollar due the city being collected?
3. To what extent, if any, could wages and salaries be increased so as to be fair to both the employee and the taxpayer?

To obtain the answers to these questions, the Committee immediately centered its investigation on two places—the Receiver of Taxes office, where the money is collected, and the office of Supplies and Purchases, which is charged with spending a large part of it. These initial probes uncovered chaos. The Director of Supplies and Purchases resigned at the request of the Mayor, and impeachment proceedings are now under way to remove the Receiver of Taxes. Neither official was found to be dishonest in any way. The Committee found that the management of the two offices was unbusinesslike and inefficient—a by-product of the age-old spoils system. Both official requested, and obtained, a Grand Jury investigation of their offices.

Subsequently a city worker's suicide note confessed dishonesty and named other parties, and the State's Attorney General intervened in the Grand Jury investigation. All findings by the Committee of Fifteen of a criminal nature were referred to the District Attorney and the State's Attorney General. The Committee continued to work towards its main objective—a more businesslike administration of the city and county for the benefit of the citizens and the taxpayers.

Wage Demand Settlement.

In seeking the solution to the original problem of wage demands, the Committee of Fifteen formed sub-committees responsible for the answer to the questions:

1. Is a wage increase justified?
2. If so, how much of an increase?
3. Where is the money coming from?

In its explorations, the Committee received invaluable help from the Philadelphia Committee of the Pennsylvania Economy League, the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, and the Bureau of Municipal Research, as well as from experts loaned by various industrial and business firms.

As a result of its studies, the Committee concluded that approximately $5,000,000 could be made available for pay increases from existing tax sources. A series of conferences with the representatives of the city and county workers resulted in the acceptance of this figure, rather than the $10,500,000 that had been asked. These increases totaling $5,000,000 were designed to correct, as far as possible, the inequities resulting from two previous across-the-board raises for employees receiving less than $5,000 a year.

The necessary increase in revenue to take care of this $5,000,000 pay boost could be supplied, the Committee found, by improving the collection of existing taxes, particularly of the enormous delinquencies in wage taxes and water rents. The Committee also discovered that a large group of individuals who pay their personal income tax directly to the city were not required by existing legislation to pay as they earned. It recommended, and obtained through City Council, a change in legislation which put this group on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Based solely on these findings, the Committee decided that justified pay raises could be granted with no increases in taxes. The Committee's estimate of the situation has since been fully substantiated, although not all the steps for improved tax collection have been taken, because of the chronic lack of organization in the Receiver of Taxes office.

Term Extended.

The Committee's studies of the efficiency, or lack of efficiency, in spending the tax dollar were not conclusive, but considerable evidence was gathered to show that substantial improvement could be made in this direction.

By March 1, 1948, when the work of the Committee was scheduled to end, its findings and the obvious need for further investigation resulted in a resolution by City Council extending the life of the "Fifteen" through December 31, 1948. It was urged that the volunteer and unpaid Committee and its agencies work with the Mayor and City Council in an effort to balance the 1949 budget.

From March into June, the Committee concerned itself principally with matters of efficiency and economy in the city and county government. These studies resulted in the resignation and replacement of the Director of Supplies and Purchases, the start of impeachment proceedings against the Receiver of Taxes, and the uncovering, through investigation by the City Controller, of defalcation by employees in these two departments.

Budget Research.

It became apparent in June that the rate of progress made by the Committee would not enable it to make the recommendations necessary to improve administrative operations and, further, that little or no effort was being made to establish a budget research group as recommended by the Committee in its report of March 1. The Committee therefore decided to undertake this research work itself.

Financing.

Originally, City Council appropriated $10,000 to the Committee of Fifteen to pay the expenses of its work from the middle of December through March 1. For expenses during its extended life of 10 months, the Committee requested an additional $50,000 from City Council. On June 25 City Council passed an ordinance appropriating this amount and outlining the expanded duties of the Committee of Fifteen. These may be described as studies of the operation and personnel of the city and county government, recommendation of methods to improve their efficiency and economy, and investigation and improvement of the revenue collection agencies.

From this point on, the Committee's work was accomplished by its own research and budget staff, volunteer services and, whenever the need arose, paid consultants from outside firms.

It should not be necessary to point out that a full year's work on the part of the Committee and its agencies has cost the taxpayer less than $60,000. The immediate financial return to the taxpayers has been upwards of $1,000,000 through the co-operation of the City Controller and the inauguration of improved collection methods recommended by the Committee of Fifteen. It is important to point out that the volunteer services of outside agencies that have helped the "Fifteen" involved the work of 100 specialists, which could be valued at no less than $500,000.

Work On the Budget.

Previous studies made of the city and county departments by the committee of Fifteen served as a basis for the work undertaken by its budget staff.

The methods, procedures and forms used by the various departments and bureaus were examined and the utilization of personnel analyzed. Supported by these findings, revisions were suggested that would give the taxpayer the benefits of a well-managed city. Every attempt was made to enlist the co-operation of the administration heads concerned with the reports, and in most cases their aid and participation made possible many of the accomplishments of the Committee.

The drafting of the 1949 budget, so that it would accurately reflect the requirements for adequate public service, was the Committee's principal aim. Working together, the department heads, the finance clerk of City Council, the Mayor's budget secretary, and the staff of the Committee of Fifteen, drafted the budget that was submitted to City Council by the Mayor. In the period between the submission of the budget to Council and its final passage on December 14, it was modified as a result of continued analysis by the Committee of Fifteen and City Council.

As this report is submitted, the budget for 1949 is in balance.

Accomplishments

In the long run, the major accomplishment of the Committee of Fifteen has been the stimulation of the citizens' interest in the administration of their government.

The Committee's sole power was that of making recommendations, many of which were put into effect. Its principal recommendations follow:

1. Increases in salaries and wages of city and county employees, retroactive from March 1, 1948 to January 1, 1948. These increases, which were authorized by City Council, ranged from 6 per cent upward.

2. Creation of a Budget Survey Commission to prepare a city budget each year that would be based on demonstrable needs. This budget commission, consisting of three city employees and five volunteer citizen experts, was created by ordinance of City Council—and later given a probable death sentence by the introduction of a repealer ordinance. This repealer would retain the three paid city employees and eliminate the five volunteer advisers.

3. Creation of a Personnel Advisory Commission to reclassify employees by providing accurate job evaluation. This commission, composed of five non-paired personnel managers and two city officials, was established by ordinance of City Council. Shortly thereafter, representatives of the city and county workers were informed that no pay increases would be granted and no jobs reclassified until the commission had completed its survey, which would take a year to 18 months. A few days later, a repealer was introduced in Council which, if passed finally, will eliminate for the present all chance of giving a competent city employee a fair day's pay for a fair day's work.

4. Transfer of employees from so-called "sunshine" jobs to essential work. Elimination of these jobs in the Police Bureau put 314 patrolmen back on regular police duty. Approximately 100 janitresses were removed from unnecessary jobs in the fire stations and 50 of them given necessary work in hospitals. The others were pensioned, or resigned. Ten employees of City Council were found to be unnecessary. They were not removed from the public payroll, but transferred to the offices of the Receiver of Taxes and the City Controller. Their usefulness in those departments has not been determined by the Committee.

5. Revision of the wage tax ordinance so that: (a) returns are made quarterly instead of annually by individuals whose tax is not withheld from their pay, and (b) returns by employers of withheld taxes are made quarterly instead of monthly.

6. Inauguration of a campaign to speed up collection of delinquent real estate and wage taxes and water and sewer rents.

7. A new water rate ordinance to be substituted for one proposed by the Administration increasing the water rate a flat 20 per cent. The Committee agreed that an increase in rates was needed to make necessary improvements to the water works and keep the system self-supporting.

It found, however, that the proposed flat increase was inequitable. Accordingly, the Committee submitted a new water structure designed to correct the inequitable basis of charges to small users, and to bring the charges in closer relation to the actual consumption. This new rate structure was adopted.

8. Freezing of vacancies in 1948 in the Police Bureau pending determination of their personnel needs.

9. Increased fees for licenses and permits secured from the city, to bring them in line with the actual cost of the services rendered. It is estimated that these increased fees will bring approximately $700,000 additional revenue to the city.

10. Initiation, by order of the Mayor, of a minimum 5½-day, 40 hour work week for city and county employees. This order has been reasonably well carried out in the departments under the Mayor, but not in others.

11. Transfer of licensing of domestic oil burner installers from the Office of the Fire Marshal to the Division of Housing and Sanitation, and the transfer of inspection of new domestic oil burner installations from the Office of the Fire Marshal to the Bureau of Building inspection. Ordinances providing for these two departmental improvements were introduced in City Council but failed of passage. The only votes in favor of the ordinance were cast by the Councilmanic members of the Committee of Fifteen.

12. Audits, at the source, of taxes paid the city. These audits, suggested by the City Controller, originally were confined to the amusement and wage taxes, but were extended to other levies, including the real estate tax, Council appropriated to the Controller the money necessary to employ private auditors, and work has been under way about six months.

13. Creation of the post of Chief Deputy Receiver of Taxes with full power to reorganize that department. The Committee recognized that the impeachment proceedings against the Receiver would be protracted for many months. To expedite reorganization of the office and avoid the possible loss of monies due the city, the Committee recommended this step after being assured by counsel for the Receiver that such a deputy would be given full administrative control of the office. City Council deferred passage of an ordinance creating the new post, pending the naming of a candidate and his approval by the political leadership. Under these circumstances, the Committee discontinued its efforts, the ordinance creating the new post was passed, and an appointment was offered and accepted. The Receiver then repudiated the commitment made by his counsel, the appointee withdrew, and an ordinance abolishing the position was introduced.

14. A plan to break the bottleneck in the sale of delinquent real estate, now representing almost $10,000,000 in uncollected revenues. The Committee found an inordinately long time was required to process such transactions. Through the co-operation of the City Solicitor, the Receiver of Taxes and the Sheriff, a program looking toward increasing the sales from the then 50 per month to at least 100 per month was established. The worst part of the bottleneck—processing of paper work in the Solicitor's office—was broken through the Solicitor's office—was broken through the Solicitor's suggestion that seven assistants in his office be supplanted by nine clerical employees. The Committee of Fifteen recommended, and Council authorized, this change. Council appropriated the money necessary for advertising and other costs incident to the accelerated program. As a result, the average number of sales doubled in the last six months and will undoubtedly reach 200 per month next year.

15. Reorganization of the Department of Supplies and Purchases, including appointment of a qualified purchasing agent, abolition of the misused revolving cash fund, expediting the payment of invoices, and protection of warehouse stock.

16. Filling the post of Assistant Director of Public Works. Because the salary was too low to attract a competent man, this position was vacant—a serious handicap to the administration of the city's second largest department. The Committee recommended an increase in salary, which was approved by City Council, and the post was filled.

17. Discontinuance by the Recorder of Deeds of a bank account for city receipts. This recommendation was adopted, and these monies are now turned in daily to the City Treasurer.

18. Creation of the post of Automotive Engineer in the Department of Public Works. This move will keep the city's rolling stock "on the street" through the establishment of a sorely needed preventive maintenance program.

Improvement in the operation of the Police Bureau, including: discontinuance of the Schuylkill River Patrol, reduction of Vice Squad personnel, creation of the position of Assistant Superintendent in charge of traffic, replacement of the clerical personnel of the Traffic Summons squad by civilians, reduction in the number of motorcycles and their replacement by automobiles, changes in traffic ticket forms, an enlarged Accident Investigation Squad, the filling of clerical jobs by civilians, and consideration of a plan to reduce the number of district police stations.

ADMINISTRATIVE LEADERSHIP

A basic concept of management is that one must pay for, and obtain, top administrative leadership.

Philadelphia's government needs more capable leadership in a number of its departments. Administrative authority of the city is shared with City Council, its legislative body. Council establishes policies in caucus, and at times is subjected to the influence of the city's political leaders.

Thus, no individual responsibility is fixed, and the city is administered under continually changing policies. This condition inevitably reacts to the detriment of competent management.

Although executive responsibility rests ultimately with the Mayor, he is, under existing conditions, at once a part and a victim of the political system. The present City Charter, moreover, renders him completely powerless so far as the county offices are concerned.

Administration of the county is impaired by the fact that its elected officers are independent of any control except the financial check maintained by City Council. The Committee has observed, however, that some of these county officers demonstrate a leadership that probably could not be surpassed even if city-county consolidation were to supplant the functionally unsound division now in existence.

Among both city and county officials, the Committee found a wide range in caliber and performance. At one extreme are men who, in spite of many handicaps, have been able to serve the people well by demanding qualified personnel and regular work. At the other end of the scale are some whose performance is so poor that they constitute a serious drag upon the welfare of Philadelphia.

In addition to these two classes, there are officials who devote too much of their time to private business or political activities, while continuing to accept salaries for which they should give a larger portion of their time and effort to the city.

This mixed quality of leadership and the underlying lack of fixed responsibility have inevitably manifested themselves in a spotty record of municipal service. Taxpayers are merely acting like human beings when they take the good for granted and make themselves heard only when confronted with discourtesy, inefficiency, and evidence of down-right dishonesty on the part of their public servants.

With a view to correcting the chief evils in our administrative setup, the Committee of Fifteen recommends:

1. Administrative and political leaders should take steps for the orderly replacement by competent officials of those who are performing inadequately. They should insist that candidates for election as heads of departments be drawn from qualified men with substantial administrative experience.

2. Orders should be issued to ward and division leaders to desist from their demands for job-placing services not dictated by sound administrative policy. When such demands are made they should be ignored.

3. Salaries of professional personnel and administrative heads should be made commensurate with those of industry.

4. The Mayor should utilize the advice of his departmental heads to a greater degree, in order to effect sound and correlated administrative policies.

PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT.

Compared to a well-managed industry, Philadelphia's government is not doing a good job of personnel management.

Little or nothing is being done to improve labor relations, to determine a policy on working hours, vacations and leaves, or to protect the safety and welfare of employees.

In the places where personnel management is being applied (primarily the areas of selection, placement, promotion and hearing of grievances,) it is found that a poor job is being done. A number of studies bear out these conclusions.

Selection, Placement and Promotion.

The foundation of any private business is the personnel which runs it. And the selection, placement and promotion mechanisms are the means of obtaining the personnel best qualified to operate it efficiently, effectively, and to financial advantage. Government is not different in this matter.

In Philadelphia, selection and promotion examinations are the responsibility of the Civil Service Commission for approximately 18,000 employees of departments under the Mayor. In the courts, and in departments not under the Mayor, the responsibility lies solely with the administrator, and selections are made primarily from politically-sponsored candidates.

In general it may be said that city employees are freer from political sponsorship and selected more on their qualifications than are county employees, but there is no doubt that many city employees are not those best qualified for their positions. There are many ways that the candidate who may not be the best qualified is placed:

1. Exemption from Civil Service examination.
2. Appointment of temporary employees, followed by their examination in tests which the administrative head, in many instances, helps to prepare.
3. Refusal to appoint from a list until the name which is wanted appears.
4. Failure to investigate qualifications of an applicant.
5. Transfers to competitive positions from the labor class without change in status.

These loopholes impair the effectiveness of Civil Service in the selection of the best qualified persons. This is by no means entirely the fault of the Civil Service Commission, although there is little doubt that a stronger commission could do much to correct the situation. The Director of Public Works, for example, pointed out that his payroll carries 311 "displaced persons" (those hired in non-competitive positions but working in competitive jobs). The Director attempted to correct the situation in the 1949 budget, but his proposal would have meant the removal from the payroll of many incumbents and it was turned down by City Council. The Civil Service Commission knows of the situation and should correct it.

Salaries and Wages.

Salaries and wages of some city employees in the lower brackets are commensurate with, or higher than, their counterparts in private business. This contrasts sharply with the status of Philadelphia's other employees, particularly professional workers and administrative heads.

The City's salary and wage situation was responsible for the creation of the Committee of Fifteen. Prior to the salary increase granted in March on the recommendation of the Committee, two increases (1943 and 1947) of $400 across the board to employees receiving less than $5,000 (or fraction to bring them to $5,000) had been granted. It is obvious that this type of increase aggravated the situation materially, since no investigation had been made of the merits of the employee requests—another indication of the lack of administrative direction of labor relations.

The Committee of Fifteen's study indicated that percentage increases were more desirable and it so recommended, except for per diem employees. Because employees with salaries over $5,000 had received little or no increase in previous adjustments, the largest percentage increase was recommended for them. Council adopted these recommendations.

To some extent the salary and wage situation was rectified. Many of the City's employees have received increases since 1942 which are equal to, or greater than, the cost-of-living increase.

However, the last salary increase has by no means corrected inequities among employees, since it was applied to existing salary standardization tables. Many of the inequities between grades and within grades remain. For example:

A licensed fire boat engineer receives only a hoseman's pay.

A telephone operator is paid more than some secretaries.

There seems to have been little system in the establishment in 1943 of the grades and salary standardization scale, although the classification job was well done. There is urgent need for a complete job evaluation, classification and standardization study, with provision for personnel to keep it up to date in future years.

The Civil Service Commission is responsible for classification and grading, but has never had sufficient personnel to do the work. Responsibility must be set for the correction and maintenance of an adequate system of job classification, evaluation and salary standardization, if the City is to retain its good employees. The present situation has led to poor employee morale.

Retirement and Pensions.

The city and county are responsible under State law to maintain a pension fund for retired employees. Thus City Council holds responsibility for the retirement policy or for legislation pertaining to it.

Actually there is no real city retirement policy. However, the letter of the pension laws is complied with in the case of firemen and policemen by the city's backing of two private pension funds operated by each of these uniformed agencies. The city contributes nothing to the Fire Pension Fund (except a few firemen who work for and are paid by the fund and also by the city) since this fund received contributions from a State tax on foreign (out-of-State) fire insurance, and also earns money on its investments. The Police Pension Fund also receives State money from a tax on foreign casualty insurance, and has some investments, but the city contributes about $900,000 a year to this fund.

The remainder of the city employees belong to the Municipal Pension fund, which is the city's pension agency. Each fund sets the retirement age, length of service and other retirement provisions. Thus a fireman may retire at 45, a policeman at 50, but the others at 60, providing they have the required length of service. It can be seen that the city has no voice in the equity of retirement policies. A fire officer retiring today would receive much less than a police officer with the same age and service, and the city's only recourse for equity would be the payment of the difference, which has never yet been done.

There is at present no compulsory retirement age for city employees. The result is that many employees are too old to do a good day's work and the opportunity for promotion of younger employees is lacking. (Thirty per cent of the employees of the Bureau of Water, for example, are over 60 years old, and studies indicate that a large number of them should be retired.)

A plan for compulsory retirement seems needed, and some incentive—such as an increase in pension for longevity—be given for able employees to remain in service between the ages of voluntary and compulsory retirement.

Vacations, Leave and Hours of Work.

There is no top administrative policy on vacations, leave, sickness, hours of work or accumulated sick leave. This is an important area of administrative control and employee morale. Because it is left to the department heads, practices vary widely. Whereas there is justification for some variance, it is the belief of the Committee of Fifteen that a rational policy should be uniformly applied and strictly enforced.

Recommendations.

To correct the principal faults discovered in the field of personnel management, the Committee of Fifteen recommends:

1. Appointment of a Personnel Advisory Commission, with an appropriation for this needed work. The work which would be done by this commission on job evaluation, reclassification and salary standardization is vital to the employees' morale, and, therefore, to the effective operation of the city.

2. Establishment of a position of Personnel Director, under the Mayor, and provision for the necessary staff to insure a comprehensive personnel management program for the city and county. Responsibility should be vested in the personnel director and his staff for the negotiation of salary and wage demands, and for advising the Mayor and City Council on personnel policies pertaining to vacations, sick leave, hours of work, employee welfare and retirement policy.

3. That the Civil Service Commission should conduct routine checks on acting appointments to the non-competitive classes to insure that permanent transfers are not made to competitive classes, and prosecute violations of the Civil Service Act.

4. Inauguration of a program of compulsory retirement. A complete survey of the city's pension and retirement policy should be made with the objective of obtaining an equitable retirement policy for all employees of the city and actuarially sound pension funds.

FINANCIAL CONTROL.

Few cities in the United States have as many sources of revenue as Philadelphia, and few as little administrative control over the collection of revenues and the rate of expenditures.

Revenues are collected by the Receiver of Taxes and the City Treasurer, both elected officials independent of the Mayor. The real and personal property taxes are based on assessments fixed by an independent board, the Board of Revision of Taxes, and audits are made by the City Controller, an independently elected official.

Although a budget for the city and county is prepared by the Mayor, he is not staffed to analyze expenditure needs, but bases estimates largely on the expenditures of past years. The Mayor's budget may be either increased or decreased by City Council, thus giving the Councilmen decision on administrative needs in addition to accepting or curtailing the city's financial program. There is no comprehensive capital expenditure budget or program of equipment replacement or building renovation.

Philadelphia is not as greatly dependent upon the real estate tax as most other large cities. It has many other sources of revenue, most important of which are the earned income tax, personal property tax and amusement tax. Moreover, its water and sewer utilities are self-supporting through the collection of water and sewer rents. Although this gives Philadelphia a wide revenue base, it also complicates the mechanism of collection.

Real Estate Tax.

The real estate tax in Philadelphia has been levied at the same rate for 14 years. This can be attributed largely to resistance by interested parties to any increase in the rate.

Collection of current taxes in recent years has been good, averaging about 97 per cent. The backlog of delinquent real estate taxes has been slowly reduced from a peak of $35,000,000. There are still, however, delinquent real estate taxes amounting to about $10,000,000. More than half of these are on land, some of which would not cover the cost of sale (about $235 per sale for advertising, etc.), but there is a wide divergence in the assessment of properties, particularly in the case of residential properties, where the average assessed valuation is far below the sale value as reflected in recent transactions. Assessments are not made according to a uniform formula in Philadelphia, and there is real need for improved practices in this field.

Personal Property Tax.

The city and the school system each have a four-mill tax on tangible personal property. Personal property is assessed largely on reports made by the taxpayer. The practice followed when no return is made consists of setting an estimate and then revising it upward until the taxpayer protests, declares his holdings and proves them. A surprisingly small number of taxpayers (about 32,000) pay their personal property tax, amounting last year to a total of $2,826,000. The Committee of Fifteen made no final studies of the collection of personal property tax but is convinced that the revenue from this source could be greatly increased by adoption of improved assessment techniques.

Earned Income Tax.

The earned income tax, commonly known as the wage tax, is second only to the real estate levy as a revenue producer. Receipts from this source totaled $27,582,000 in 1947, and will reach about $31,000,000 in 1948.

The Committee of Fifteen made a number of studies of the collection of the earned income tax, and the principal findings were:

1. No audits were being made, at the source, of taxes withheld from the pay envelopes of employees. During 1948 these audits were started by the City Controller after the Committee recommended it in its report of March 1st.

2. Collections were very low from individuals who are liable for payment of the tax directly to the city, rather than through payroll deduction. It was found, for example, that about 72 per cent of the persons living in Philadelphia and working in Camden were not paying any wage tax.

3. There was a large backlog of known delinquents who had not been billed for their earned income tax, even though the Receiver of Taxes office had copies from the State and Federal governments of the taxpayers' W-2 income tax forms. Through activities undertaken this year at the recommendation of the Committee of Fifteen, the Receiver of Taxes collected $621,123.32 simply by billing these individuals. Since billings have not been completed, another $600,000 can be collected from this source next year.

4. The billing of small business liable for the income tax on profits is incomplete.

Amusement Tax

The Committee of Fifteen made no direct studies of the collection of the amusement tax, but collateral studies were made by the City Controller, following the suicide of the head of that division of the Receiver of Taxes office. These studies showed that control of receipts in this division was weak and permitted the defalcation of approximately $202,000. The principal control lacking was a check at the source. This check is currently being done by the City Controller, at the instance of the Committee of Fifteen.

Water Rent

Operation of the city's water works depends entirely upon the collection of water rent. Moreover, the city has not expended the full amount of the revenues upon maintenance and expansion of the water works. Studies by the Committee of fifteen show that a poor job has been done in the collection of both current and delinquent water rents in the following respects:

1. During the 20-year period ending in 1946, no survey was made of water fixtures, which are the basis for computing the rates for non-metered consumers. (About 50 per cent of the water connections in Philadelphia are not metered.) Such a survey was started in 1946 by the Receiver of Taxes office. Only 37 per cent complete by April of this year, the job was transferred to the Bureau of Water, at the insistence of the Committee of Fifteen. This transfer has already been justified by a substantial increase in revenues through the improved methods used by the bureau.

2. The rate of meter repair has been so slow as to be detrimental to the collection of water rent from metered users. The Committee of Fifteen recommended to the Receiver of Taxes that estimates should be made of excess water consumed when a meter is out of service. Adoption of this recommendation already has resulted in billings of $215,035.62 on water and sewer rents.

3. There is considerable evidence that many meters in the city were not read, or that the time interval between the readings was very irregular. The transfer of meter readers from the office of Receiver of Taxes to the Bureau of Water has corrected this situation to a great degree, and increased revenues can be expected.

4. The city's water rate structure was not well designed to assess the charges for water at the rate of use. A new ordinance, increasing the water rate a flat 20 per cent, was proposed by the Administration. The Committee agreed that increased revenues were indispensable, but found that the proposed flat raise in rates would perpetuate inequities. It accordingly recommended a revised water rate structure which would correct these inequities and tie the charges for water more closely to actual consumption.

Sewer Rent

Sewer rent in Philadelphia is charged as a percentage of the water bill. Since the collection methods for the sewer and water rents are interdependent, no special study was made of its collection.

Licenses and Fees

In common with practically every other governmental agency, Philadelphia has a great many licenses and fees, most of which were fixed years ago and have not been adjusted to the present cost of the services rendered by the city. The Committee of Fifteen studied the licenses and fees on the basis of recommendations by the administrative heads assessing them, and recommended many changes which would result in increased revenue to the city of about $700,000. There seems to be a real need for further study of the licenses and fees from the standpoint of costs, and the probable elimination of some nuisance fees. The greatest weakness observed is the absence of an adequate check to assure that all liable persons take out the necessary licenses. To better serve the public, there is a need for co-ordinating the issuance of all licenses and fees in one office.

Fines

Under the administration of the new Chief Magistrate, revenue from fines has been materially increased. The city has suffered from a revenue standpoint in the past through the fixing by politicians and city officials of a great many fines. The present Chief Magistrate has been able to tighten up the collection of fines, and the City Controller has taken steps to provide a more adequate audit of auto parking tickets used by the police. This work should be continued. In the last two months, revenues from fines have been almost double those of the same months last year.

The cafeteria court ticket now used for parking seems to be particularly applicable to good control, as it is not as easily "fixed" as others. Its extension to other minor offenses, such as bad rubbish setouts and traffic-lights violations, would seem desirable.

Summary on Collection on Revenues

It can be seen from discussion of these recommendations that there is much to be desired in the collection methods of all revenues and the accounting for receipts by the city. Political appointments in the office of Receiver of Taxes, the Board of Revision of Taxes and other offices have been injurious to the city and have resulted in loss of revenue. There are outstanding examples of inefficient collections of taxes, particularly of earned income tax and water rent.

Expenditure Control

An appropriation by City Council is an authority to spend without further reservation. It is true that controls are retained by the City Controller and the Department of Supplies and Purchases on the nature of expenditures. Only when an appropriation item runs out does the department head come back for more money. Seldom is an appropriation item reduced unless City Council is hunting for money for some other purpose, in which case surpluses are transferred. In other words, normal budget control, which one would expect in any large business, is lacking.

The Committee of Fifteen first recommended a Budget Director; later, when it became apparent that this post was not to be established, it undertook to assist in the budgetary analysis. This work by the Committee was of course far short of the functions which would be performed by a continuing agency.

Expenditure control functions which should be established in the city's administrative organization are:

1. Continuous supervision of the budget and spending program.

2. Review of revenue estimates and appraisal of necessary new revenues or adjustment in taxes.

3. Preparation of expenditure estimates that encompass the entire spending program correlated to specific services or standards of work output for such expenditures.

4. Development of a work program based on the timeliness and total of expenditures.

5. Development and maintenance of a system of work reporting.

6. Periodic review of actual and probable expenditures and receipts, with executive authority to curtail spending when revenue falls off.

Recommendations

A great many detailed recommendations were made in reports on financial control prepared for the Committee of Fifteen by the agencies serving it. Attention is invited particularly to the report submitted by Mr. James Mullikin, of the Philadelphia National Bank; the report of Mr. Leonard Drake, of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, on sources of additional revenue; the report of the Philadelphia Committee of the Pennsylvania Economy League on the Office of the Mayor; the report of the Bureau of Municipal Research on licenses and fees; the report of Mr. Charles Haydock, consulting engineer, on the Bureau of Water, and the report of Mr. Nathan Jacobs, of Morris Knowles, Inc., on the water rate structure.

The Committee of Fifteen calls particular attention to the following major recommendations:

1. The City Charter should be revised to provide a Department of Finance to administer all of the city's finances, except audits, which should remain under the City Controller. The Department of Finance should be a regular department of the city government headed by an appointed director. It is suggested that this department should contain a Bureau of the Budget, a Bureau of Collections, a Bureau of Accounting, and a Bureau of Machine Operations. The office of the Receiver of Taxes should be abolished. All of its collection functions and those of the City Treasurer should be performed by the Bureau of Collections. The Bureau of Accounting would perform all the accounting functions for the finance department, and, if and when city-county consolidation is a fact, should also take over the accounting work now done by the City Treasurer. The depository function of the City Treasury should remain in that office until city-county consolidation is achieved. There is great need for the establishment of a centralized Bureau of Machine Operations to do many functions with modern machine equipment which are now done by hand in many of the departments of the city and county, notably in the offices of the Board of Revision of Taxes and the Receiver of Taxes.

2. All water connections in Philadelphia should be metered, and full responsibility for the reading of meters and the assessment of water rents (but not the collection thereof) should be placed in the Bureau of Water.

3. Regular outside audits should be continued by the City Controller.

4. The Board of Revision of Taxes should install a modern program of property assessments.

DEPARTMENTAL OPERATION

The Committee of Fifteen made numerous detailed studies of the operation of City and County Departments. The recommendations that follow are the main conclusions reached.

Office of the Mayor

The Mayor's office is charged with the numerous ceremonial duties for a city of 2,000,000 and the manifold executive duties in the administration of departments with personnel totaling about 18,500 and an annual expenditure of about $62,000,000. To assist him with detail in the performance of these duties, he has an office staff of 12 persons.

The Mayor's budget secretary is responsible for the important work of budget preparation, but is unable to do the continuous, year-round budget analysis required for adequate expenditure control. A considerably larger staff is required for this important function. The best answer to the problem lies in creation of a Department of Finance, as recommended in this report.

The Mayor has a small office for the issuance of licenses, a function not properly a part of the city's principal executive office. It is recommended that this function be transferred to the new Department of Safety Inspection, proposed in this report.

The Mayor has issued no annual report since 1938, and former reports were too detailed. It is planned to issue a popular annual report for 1948, for which provision was made in the 1948 budget, at the suggestion of the Committee of Fifteen. It would also be desirable to have informative departmental reports issued regularly.

Greater utilization by the Mayor of interdepartmental committees, as suggested under the section, "Administrative Leadership," would produce a more cohesive general policy.

City Planning Commission

The City Planning Commission has for its objective the formulation of policies and programs for the physical development of the City.

The organization and operation of the City Planning Commission was found to be effective. Efficient use is made of its personnel and only when its staff is unable to supply a needed service are outside consultants retained. All projects and operations are submitted to thorough cost analysis. An expanded information program is needed and could best be handled by a public relations director under the office of the Mayor. The public should be kept informed of the status of improvement and the city's ability to carry out its program.

City Architecture

This department has responsibility for the control and administration of the City's architectural interests.

The operation of the Department of City Architecture is adequate, but there is basis for criticism because not all architectural design for the city is passed on by this agency as required by law. In view of the city's large improvement program, much of which is the responsibility of the Department of Public Works, this condition appears unavoidable.

Department of Public Safety

Office of the Fire Marshal. The main functions of this office are fire prevention and the investigation of fires of suspicious origin.

Efficient operation of this office is severely hindered by the absence of personnel trained in modern fire prevention methods. This inefficiency makes a thorough analysis of plans and specifications impossible and contributes to superficial and incomplete inspections. Division of inspectional activities among various city departments also contributes to the lack of a coordinated fire prevention program and the inefficient use of personnel. To correct this situation the following recommendations are made:

1. Passage by Council of a fire prevention code.
2. Transfer the licensing of installers of oil burners from the Office of the Fire Marshall to the Division of Housing and Sanitation.
3. Transfer the inspection of new oil burner installations from the Office of the Fire Marshal to the Bureau of Building Inspection.
4. Require fire marshals and assistant fire marshals to have experience in modern fire prevention methods.
5. Provide in-service training for inspectors.
6. Release the 40 uniformed men from the Fire Marshal's office and replace them with trained civilian inspectors; increase the civilian force from 11 to 14.
7. Transfer inspection of apartment houses and fire escapes to the Division of Housing and Sanitation.

Bureau of Police. This bureau is responsible for the enforcement of laws, protection of persons and property, and the apprehension of offenders.

Although many of the technical advances such as use of patrol cars and two-way radios have been adopted by the Bureau of Police, there still remains other areas in which it should modernize its practices. Philadelphia appears to operate a large number of district stations through a popular conception that police stations afford police protection. Many stations have not been adequately maintained, and afford poor facilities for their present primary functions of prisoner retention and housing of boys' clubs.

The full utilization of police personnel is diluted by special duty "sunshine jobs"—the assignment of patrolmen to non-police duties. These positions should be filled by civilians—or abolished.

Major recommendations on the operation of the police bureau are:

1. Establishment of a program of modernization of police district stations, with full consideration given to a reduction in their number.
2. Planning of a central police headquarters building.
3. Study of the form and reporting methods used by the bureau in order to bring them into line with those approved by the F.B.I.
4. Elimination of special duty and non-police assignments; replacement of personnel of the Traffic Summons Squad with civilians and of the City Hall detail with a smaller number of guards.
5. No increase in the number of patrolmen in 1949.
6. A study of the value of boys' club programs in police stations.
7. A resetting of quotas of police so that equalized protection is given all sections of the City, commensurate with their problems.
8. Creation of the position of Assistant Superintendent in Charge of Traffic, and the elimination of the position of Traffic Inspector.

Bureau of Building Inspection. The bureau issues permits for the construction, alteration and removal of buildings and inspects all construction operations. It also enforces the building code and licenses some crafts.

A commendable job has been done by the Bureau of Building Inspection in protecting the public and gaining the cooperation of contractors. Its main problems arise from the adaptation of modern standards to old construction. This can be solved by the adoption of a new building code. Until inspectional activities are coordinated, the bureau could take preliminary steps toward more efficient and convenient service through the distribution of information to the public on the procedure for obtaining permits and by simplifying the processing of applications.

Department of Public Works

Bureau of Water. The Bureau of Water operates, maintains and improves the water supply and distribution system of the city.

Although Philadelphia water is safe and adequate, the condition of the water works is generally unsatisfactory because it has not been well maintained. The present improvement program has largely been necessitated by past difficulties in maintenance.

Lack of a proper accounting system, and the mingling of the revenues of the water works with the general fund of the city, have contributed to the difficulties of operating the bureau on a business-like basis. Production and distribution of water is a utility and should be operated as such.

Many of the personnel in the bureau are not qualified to render satisfactory service. Thirty per cent of the employees are over 60 years of age, many unfit to perform their duties.

Major recommendations for improvement of the management are:

1. Separate operation of the water works from direct city control by one of several methods; (1) lease to private company; (2) transfer to a municipal authority, or (3) segregate the water rent revenues from other revenues and earmark them for the sole use of the Water Bureau.
2. Appropriate sufficient money to maintain the water works adequately and continue the improvement program until a high quality water, adequate in quantity and pressure and free from objectionable tastes and odors, is provided for all consumers.
3. Reorganize the entire meter-reading and billing system with competent clerical services; reorganize the meter department so that meter repair can progress on an assembly line basis.
4. Adopt a program of universal metering.
5. Assume responsibility for the repair and replacement of meters and make an annual charge for such service.
6. Install an accounting system recommended by the Pennsylvania Public Utilities Commission.

Zoning Division. This division administers the city zoning ordinance by issuing permits for changes in use or zoning. Elimination of some duplication of effort, and separation of clerical work from technical duties, would facilitate more efficient operation. Revision of the zoning ordinance, as recommended by the Committee of Fifteen, will affect the work load and the procedures of this division, thus necessitating a further study of the personnel requirements.

Bureau of City Property. The main responsibility of this bureau is maintenance and repair of city property assigned to it by ordinance and operation of city markets. Studies made by the Committee of Fifteen covered only the maintenance of City Hall and City Hall Annex, which includes janitorial services administered by several agencies other than the Bureau of City Property.

The level of maintenance and repair of these two buildings is not as high as that of any well-run office building. Lax supervision of employees and the absence of a program for preventive maintenance cause the down-at-heel appearance of the city's main administrative headquarters. The number of employees is excessive.

The Committee of Fifteen recommends:

1. Placing the operation, maintenance, repair and cleaning of City Hall and City Hall Annex under the supervision of a general superintendent in the Bureau of City Property, aided by assistants in charge of each building.

2. Creation of a preventive maintenance plan.

3. Reduction of the present cleaning staff from 167 men and 43 women to 134 men and 7 women; provision of modern cleaning equipment and adequate supplies.

Bureau of Mechanical Equipment. The Bureau of Mechanical Equipment was organized to serve as a central agency in charge of the repair of all city-owned mechanical units.

The bureau, however, has never been able to assume the repair of all city-owned equipment. Chief among the reasons for this are insufficient personnel, large numbers of very old pieces of equipment, and inadequate shop and garage facilities. Fleet operators consider it desirable to have one mechanic (or helper) for every 10 vehicles, but the city has only one for every 28—a striking disparity. It is not surprising that other bureaus have been compelled to establish their own repair shops. War-caused difficulties in obtaining new equipment and repair parts, aggravated by failure to plan for replacement of vehicles, are responsible for the fact that almost one-third of the city's equipment is more than 10 years old.

Little attention has been given to standardization of equipment or to cost- and time-saving methods such as the unit replacement system.

It is recommended that:

1. Appointment be made of an automotive engineer to supervise the sorely-needed replacement and preventive maintenance programs.

2. Creation of an interdepartmental automotive equipment committee consisting of those in charge of automotive operations in various city departments for the purpose of co-ordinating their repair activities.

3. Introduction of cost accounting and cost control methods to show the actual expense of operating each vehicle.

Bureau of Aeronautics. This bureau supervises the operation of North Philadelphia Airport and Philadelphia International Airport.

The city airports operate at a deficit in operating cost alone of $80,000 annually at North Philadelphia and $75,000 annually at Philadelphia International. The use made of North Philadelphia Airport raises the question whether its operation at its present level is justified. Formulation of plans for increased uses of North Philadelphia are needed. The administration should give consideration to the alternate recommendations made in the Bureau of Municipal Research report on the Bureau of Aeronautics.

Terminal facilities and revenue-producing concessions at Philadelphia International Airport should be developed to place it on a self-supporting basis.

Department of Public Health

Because of its inability to obtain the specialized investigators essential to an adequate analysis of the Department of Public Health, the Committee of Fifteen confined its studies of this department to the Bureau of Hospitals.

Philadelphia General Hospital. The hospital is overcrowded and understaffed, but in spite of these handicaps, it offers the citizens excellent medical service for little or no charge.

Many of the staff do double duty; for example, nurses serve as food preparers and housekeepers, dietitians as cooks and housekeepers, and the principal social service worker as head of the out-patient department. This represents an uneconomical use of trained personnel.

Lack of trained personnel curtails many activities that should be carried on, such as rehabilitation and therapy programs, dental care for children, and several essential laboratory and record services. If suitable personnel is to be recruited, improved working and housing conditions must be effected. The condition of some parts of the hospital's physical plant, because of age and inadequate appropriations, is at a low level. The lighting is poor and the plumbing system constitutes a threat to sanitation. The physical plant of the hospital kitchen should be replaced.

The quantity of nursing care is not up to recommended levels because of insufficient staff and the consequent doubling up of duties, but the quality is excellent.

There is severe overcrowding in the hospital, particularly in the departments of obstetrics, psychiatry and tuberculosis.

Philadelphia Hospital for Contagious Diseases. This physical plant also requires immediate improvements. The same inadequate protection from plumbing backflow into the water distribution system that prevails at Philadelphia General is apparent, as well as antiquated kitchen equipment. The number of nurses is insufficient, and many of them are required to do work more economically performed by non-professional personnel.

Recommendations for the Bureau of Hospitals are detailed in a report prepared by Dr. E. T. Thompson, of the U. S. Public Health Service, and the Committee of Fifteen generally endorses them. The Committee specifically recommends that the city:

1. Create an eight-man advisory board to be appointed by the Mayor to assist in co-ordinating activities at the two city hospitals and in establishing long-range administrative policies.

2. Provide the additional personnel necessary to insure that adequate charges for medical services are collected from patients financially able to pay them. There is evidence that a number of patients capable of pay are not now doing so.

3. Create the post of Superintendent of Services at the Philadelphia Hospital for Contagious Diseases to take charge of the physical plant, and create a department of housekeeping at both hospitals.

Expand the number of personnel, both professional and non-professional and obtain needed equipment.

5. Establish a 150-bed unit at Philadelphia Hospital for Contagious Diseases to relieve overcrowding at Philadelphia General Hospital.

6. Reorganize the dietary department at Philadelphia General.

7. Construct a new tuberculosis unit at Philadelphia General and employ a full-time medical director for it; increase the staff of tuberculosis units at both hospitals.

Department of Public Welfare

Despite difficult problems, the staff of this department is accomplishing a worthwhile job. The physical plant shows care; personnel is well controlled and operations are generally efficient and economical.

Office of the Director. The director and a small staff provide the over-all administrative service as well as manage the institutional districts. Two former poor district properties which are under the jurisdiction of this office should be utilized constructively, after minor repairs, or sold. In either case, custody should be given to the Bureau of City Property, an improvement which the director said would be made.

Bureau of Personal Assistance. The major duty of this bureau is the care of dependent children. An inadequate investigation staff makes it impossible for thorough collection to be made of monies owed in the form of individual payments and veterans' payments. It is estimated that through collection would result in additional revenue of $100,000 a year.

The City of Philadelphia is caring for a large number of mental defectives who belong in State institutions which are unable to take them because of overcrowded conditions; thus, Philadelphia is bearing the burden of State obligations at a yearly expense of $260,000. It is suggested that the city determine if it can recover the difference between the costs of local and State care, or increase Philadelphia's quota in State institutions.

Bureau of Recreation. The Bureau of Recreation directs the use of the city's recreational facilities as well as related social activities.

The buildings and grounds of the 43 recreation centers and 17 separate swimming pools are in good condition, but the toilet facilities are inadequate. One recreation center (Westmoreland) and some small shelter buildings are exceptions to the generally good condition prevailing at the majority.

The recreation facilities offered by the bureau overlap those of schools, Fairmount Park and the Police Bureau. A study of the city's over-all recreation program is advisable to eliminate duplication and to determine actual needs for personnel and facilities.

To bridge the gap between the chief of the bureau and the project level (29 persons are directly responsible to the chief), the position of zone supervisor should be created.

Bureau of Charities and Correction. Management of the House of Correction and the Home for the Indigent, both on the same property, is the primary function of this bureau.

Two new positions are required for efficient delegation of responsibility: those of Assistant Chief in Charge of Service Activities and Operating Engineer in Charge of Maintenance Activities. All business matters should be placed under the chief clerk and all medical service under the senior physician.

The expansion of the bureau's farm activities should result in an annual saving of $14,000 and provide productive activity to those detained in the House of Correction.

Department of Supplies and Purchases

The Department of Supplies and Purchases is the central purchasing agency for all city and some county departments. Its principal functions are: (1) purchasing, (2) inspection, (3) warehousing, and (4) auditing.

As a result of the analysis made of this department, serious defects in procedures as well as considerable negligence were revealed. These have been substantially corrected by the replacement of the department head with a competent purchasing agent and the reorganization along lines suggested by the Committee of Fifteen.

Delays in processing invoices and vouchers previously cost the city at least $40,000 a year in discounts. The State law requiring advertising of all orders of more than $500 was circumvented by "splitting" orders. This practice not only removed competitive bidding, but raised the cost of items to the city.

Before its reorganization, the department did not take advantage of such generally recognized purchasing methods as the assignment of buyers to certain classes of commodities and the use of commodity purchase records. Warehouse control was very loose. (A test check showed discrepancies of 22.6 per cent between the stock actually on hand and stock on record.)

A few of the recommendations of the Committee of Fifteen have not yet been acted on. They are:

1. Revision of the invoice processing procedure.
2. Standardization of goods and quantity purchasing by the department.
3. Assignment of specialist buyers to certain classes of commodities.

Department of City Transit

The Department of City Transit regulates all transit facilities operated by the city.

The department is effectively operated, and little opportunity exists for economies in budget funds. Development of the city's incomplete Locust Street subway to a revenue-producing status should receive early attention.

Recorder of Deeds

The Recorder of Deeds is a county department which records all instruments that may effect title to real estate, as well as many other documents presented for recording, and retains them for public examination.

The organization and administration of this department is outstanding for the antiquity of its methods. Modern techniques such as microfilming of records and the use of loose-leaf binders and time stamps have passed virtually unnoticed in this department, perhaps because of the reduction in staff they would bring in their train.

The fees, unchanged since 1921, are no longer commensurate with costs of recording. The "Cash Book" and "FAIR Book", which contain handwritten entries, give virtually the same information. Some records, which are not the property of the Recorder, have been retained for nearly 150 years.

Among the many recommendations made for this department, the most urgent are:

1. Purchase of modern photostatic equipment which should reduce the number of employees by 18, at a saving of $60,000 a year.

2. Purchase of microfilming equipment, if the State law will permit the use of microfilmed copies of records in court; and the microfilming by contract of 733 deed books, some of which date back to the year after the founding of Philadelphia by William Penn. These deed books cover the period from 1683 to 1850.

3. Installation of loose-leaf binders and a time stamp for certification should cut personnel requirements by five men at a saving of $19,000 a year.

4. A disposal plan for the 175 bundles of undelivered instruments.

5. Revision of fees charged for recording, to bring them in line with the present costs of services.

Philadelphia County Prison

The Philadelphia County Prison comprises two units: The Reed Street Prison (Moyamensing) and the Holmesburg Prison. They are administered by the Board of County Prison Inspectors.

The superintendent and staff of the county prisons are doing an excellent job under extreme handicaps, the most dangerous being the shortage of custodial personnel. The lack of a counselor to supervise rehabilitation programs and the complete inadequacy of the work and recreation facilities make it difficult to educate and direct prisoners.

The operation of both prison units is hampered by space limitations, an important result of which is to make impossible the segregation of first offenders from hardened criminals, and the untried from the sentenced.

These steps are recommended:

1. Reorganization of the administration by creating the post of assistant superintendent to be responsible for Holmesburg.

2. Creation of the post of a chief counsellor to direct a prisoner rehabilitation program.

3. Addition of eight more guards at each prison, and two matrons and a captain of the guards at Reed Street Prison. This has been provided for in the 1949 budget.

4. Extension of the farm program and housing for the workers.

County Commissioners

Municipal Court. Municipal Court has wide jurisdiction in branches of the law in which social investigations and findings of physical and mental examinations, in addition to regular qualifications, guide the decisions of the judges. Its area of jurisdiction includes juveniles, desertion, criminal cases, misdemeanors and adoptions. The care of dependent and neglected children, including investigation and commitment to institutions and foundling homes, is one of the major functions of the court. Its chief administrative officer is the President Judge.

Findings of the Municipal Court study were available at the time of the adoption of the 1949 budget but the complete report, which is being prepared under the direction of the Philadelphia Committee of the Pennsylvania Economy League, is not yet available. The President Judge of the Municipal Court took office a little over a year ago and has made a great many changes for the betterment of the administration of the Municipal Court. He welcomed the investigation made by the Committee and adopted most of the suggestions and recommended others for adoption in the 1949 budget. Savings recommended by the Committee and adopted by the Court totaled about $73,000 and involved a personnel reduction of 29 employees. It was also found that probation officers should have their salaries increased to a minimum of $2,500 to be commensurate with those paid in other large cities. The Court also is taking action on the Committee's recommendation for the utilization of about 43,000 square feet of unused space in the Municipal Court Building at 18th and Vine streets by granting its use to other departments. This move should permit a substantial reduction in properties now rented by the city.

County Board of Elections. The County Board of Elections arranges and supervises primary and general elections and is entirely separate from the Registration Commission, which registers voters.

The board has 101 employees used primarily for election and administration—a number which seems extravagantly large, considering their responsibilities and the seasonal nature of their work. Fifteen of them are assigned to an office storehouse for election paraphernalia. Fifty-five laborers are assigned to maintenance of the City's 2400 voting machines.

Recommendations proposed by the Committee of Fifteen are:

1. Reduce the number of employees assigned to maintenance of machines to 20.

2. Move the office storehouse for election paraphernalia from rented quarters to City Hall. Voting machines are not involved in this proposed removal.

Bureau of Weights and Measures. The work of the Bureau of Weights and Measures is divided into inspection to insure accurate equipment and containers, and inspection to correct unfair selling and weighing practices.

Despite the rather high level of training and personal fitness necessary for inspection work of this nature, the personnel of this bureau, which is not under Civil Service, does not generally meet the requirements.

Economy of operation could be effected by a change from the traditional two- and three-man crews to one- or two-man crews on certain types of inspection. Although the degree of coverage by inspections in Philadelphia is comparable to, or better than, most other cities, the work load per man could be increased.

In order to co-ordinate the city's inspectional activities, it is recommended that the Bureau of Weights and Measures be transferred to a new Department of Safety Inspection.

Registration Commission. The Registration Commission is a five-man board responsible for the registration of voters.

Despite passage of legislation simplifying the work of the commission and the installation of key-punch and sorting machines, the number of inspectors has increased. It is the general feeling of the Committee of Fifteen, however, that the commission is rendering improved services.

Civil Service Commission. This commission is responsible for the supervision of the city's recruitment, selection and promotion policies.

Personnel activities of the city have already been discussed under the heading of "Personnel Management", so that only the operation of the commission will be treated here.

Replacement of commissioners coincident with a change in City Council, which results at present from the four-year term of commissioners, does not encourage the independence of the commission. It has never carried out the authority it possesses, though it lives up to the letter of the law. It has an inadequate staff.

Certain basic modifications are indicated for the commission:

1. Change the term of office of the Civil Service Commissioners from four to six years and stagger the terms.
2. More adequate staffing of the mental examination and investigation divisions.
3. Modernization of business procedures and record-keeping systems.
4. Installation of scientific techniques for the recruitment and selection of personnel.

Board of Revision of Taxes

The Board of Revision of Taxes makes assessments on real and personal property, maintains records of assessments, and conducts hearings on valuations. It is an independent board of seven members appointed by the Board of Judges. It has a staff of 150 and an annual payroll of about $700,000.

The report on the operation of the Board reached the Committee of Fifteen less than two weeks before the Committee went out of existence, and proper consideration could not be given to recommendations contained therein. It is therefore transmitted to the Mayor and the President of City Council with only two observations.

1. The report apparently contains much worthwhile information on machine operations to supplant hand methods. It is urged that this change be made, which the Committee believes will result in very substantial savings.
2. Full consideration should be given to other recommendations in the report.

PROTHONOTARY

The report on the Prothonotary's office also reached the Committee too late to be given the consideration necessary to make valid recommendations. The Committee transmits it without comment.

REQUIRED STATE LEGISLATION

Throughout its life, the Committee of Fifteen used its best business judgement to guide the elected and appointed leaders of Philadelphia toward more efficient management and improved service to the people.

The Committee is convinced that much can be done to improve management within the city's existing organizational framework, if the leadership is willing. At the same time, the Committee is convinced that there are several legislative changes which would facilitate effective operation of the city. The following program is one which the Committee considers to be basic to the desired improvement.

City-County Consolidation

Effective government of the geographic area of Philadelphia can best be obtained by a single municipal corporation under strong administration. Toward this goal the Committee recommends passage of a constitutional amendment which would:

1. Abolish the County of Philadelphia as a political entity separate from the City of Philadelphia.
 2. Provide that all functions of the city and county and of the Philadelphia courts, except those of the judges, be performed by officers of the city.
 3. Provide that all officers of the city (but not judges and magistrates) be appointed or elected as the Legislature may decide. There are now 11 county officers, including the City Treasurer and the City Controller, who must be elected.
 4. Make it possible for all officers and employees of the city to be subject to the same merit system. This means that all not popularly elected could be forbidden to engage in political activity, not that all must be chosen by competitive examination.
 5. Provide that, except as the Legislature might otherwise decide, the city's tax-levying body shall be master of the City Treasury. This does not mean that the Legislature could not give mandatory powers to courts and other agencies, but does mean that unless the Legislature gave such powers, they would not exist.
- The committee feels that it is not prepared to recommend in detail what the ultimate organization of the city should be after consolidation, but urges that a study of the needed charter revisions to incorporate county functions most effectively be made upon adoption of the necessary constitutional amendment. The value of consolidation cannot be appraised in dollars and cents, but there is no question that great opportunities for economy, management control and improved services are offered by city-county consolidation. There is no reason why the improvement of local governmental organization should be inhibited by the State constitution.

Home Rule

The Committee of Fifteen believes that the third largest city in the nation should have autonomy in local affairs. It makes little sense, as well as being a needless distraction to the State Legislature, for the city to await action of the Legislature on matters which are purely local in character. The Committee recommends, therefore, the passage in the 1949 Legislature of an act granting to cities of the first class (Philadelphia) the right to frame, adopt, amend and revise their charters, with the exception of those powers which are primarily State-wide in nature.

Debt Stabilization

The city's planned program of improvements should be coupled with a plan of financing. The policy of spending to the limit when the debt limit is high has left the city in a helpless position during periods when its debt limit is low—the very period when improvements could be made at low cost. The present debt limit of 10 per cent of the combined assessments on personal and real property for any year is a capricious limitation which does not permit regular improvements. The stabilization of the debt limit would take much of the gamble out of the city's estimates of what programs it can financially support. The bill passed in the last legislature for the stabilization of the debt limit by basing it on 12½% per cent of the average assessed valuation of real estate during the last 10 years is fundamentally sound, with the exception of the 10-year base span, which seems too long compared to that used in other cities. The Committee recommends that it be amended to a 5-year span.

Although this amendment would delay adoption of the necessary constitutional amendment by two years, the Committee feels this change is desirable in order to continue with badly needed improvements which the city was unable to make during the war. Any further delays in adoption of debt stabilization would endanger the city's entire financial program.

Future programs should be developed with the adoption of a debt stabilization law in mind. An increased amount of recurring improvements should be paid for from current revenues, and improvements which can reasonably be deferred should be postponed until costs are lower.

Charter Changes

Studies made by the Committee have indicated situations which require remedial State Legislation that would revise the City Charter to provide that:

1. A Department of Finance be created and the Office of the Receiver of taxes be abolished. The department should be a regular department of the city government headed by an appointed director. All collection functions now vested in the Receiver of Taxes and in the City Treasury should be incorporated in this department. Complete authority for expenditure controls, as suggested in that section of this report, should be vested in a Bureau of the Budget in this department. All accounting functions incidental to the collection of revenues and the expenditure of funds should be performed in this department and provisions made for a centralized operation of modern machine records equipment. Pending completion of city-county consolidation, the function of a depository for the city's revenue now performed by the City Treasury should be left with this department and the assessing functions left with the Board of Revision of Taxes. The audit of city finances should be left entirely independent and remain under the City Controller.

2. A Department of Safety Inspection be established and all inspections and licensing not strictly a function of public health or fire prevention be transferred to it, including the following:

- a. Complaint inspections from the Electrical Bureau, Department of Public Safety.

- b. All the duties of the Bureau of Building Inspection, Department of Public Safety.

- c. All the duties of the Zoning Division, Department of Public Works.

- d. All duties of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, under the County Commissioners.

- e. Those duties of the Department of Public Health which are not strictly health functions.

- f. All examining functions of departments which pertain to the qualifying of craftsmen, contractors and others for licenses to pursue a trade.

3. Legislation to permit consolidation of the Division of Housing and Sanitation and the Milk, Food and Livestock, Meat and Food Division of the Bureau of Health into a new Bureau of Sanitary Inspection of the Department of Public Health, thus permitting more efficient use of inspectors.

4. The term of office of the Civil Service Commissioners be changed from four to six years, the terms to be overlapping, with one commissioner chosen every two years.

5. A personnel director serve under the Mayor and be selected by him. This personnel director, a fully qualified and experienced personnel manager, should be in full charge of the city's personnel program.

The following additional legislation is urged to remove impediments to sound management:

1. A law to permit first-class cities to liquidate properties with one sale only, with provision for redemption by the owner within one year. An expensive delay is involved in carrying sheriff's auctions through two sales.

2. A law providing that microfilmed copies of official records be competent evidence.

3. A law permitting the Recorder of Deeds to divest himself of undelivered documents after reasonable time and permit him to charge for storage.

4. A law extending use of triplicate forms with Summons attached which are now used for parking violations to use for vehicles in motion. Consolidate forms.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The work of the Committee of Fifteen would have been impossible without the contributions of a great number of persons both of regular staff and volunteers from civic agencies and from business and industrial firms of the city. Throughout its entire work the staffs of the Bureau of Municipal Research, The Philadelphia Committee of the Pennsylvania Economy League, and the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, were key agencies. The Committee wishes to express its sincere appreciation to the members of these staffs and the many others who worked with them throughout the past year. The many reports listed in the appendix under these agencies is indicative of their productive efforts.

Work of the key agencies was supplemented by that of volunteers from business and industry, by consultants or extra staff workers paid by the Committee and by a few firms that worked for the Committee at cost. In addition there were a great many industrialists and business men in the city who served in advisory capacities to the key agencies in the preparation of reports. The Committee was also extremely fortunate in having the United States Public Health Service contribute the services of 7 consultants for the study of the city hospital.

Throughout its work the Committee had good cooperation from the administrative officers and many of their subordinates in supplying information required and in discussion of the Committee's findings. Many of these people contributed a lot of time to such work. We should particularly like to mention the outstanding work of Mr. Frank W. Short, Mayor's budget secretary and Mr. Edward P. Harris, clerk of City Council, who together with Mr. William A. Schellenberg, directed the entire work of budget analysis and did a splendid job. Mr. William W. Felton, Clerk of Council, and a number of the members of his staff were extremely helpful in arranging for meetings and assisting in the business of the Committee.

RESOLUTION OF CITY COUNCIL

Authorizing the appointment of a Special Committee to survey the possibilities of obtaining additional revenue for the City of Philadelphia for the purpose of providing additional compensation for employees of the City and County of Philadelphia.

Whereas, Requests have been made for additional appropriations and increases in salaries for City and County employees of Philadelphia for 1948;

And Whereas, In order to grant these requests it will be necessary to obtain additional revenue for the City of Philadelphia; therefore

Resolved, By the Council of the City of Philadelphia, that the Mayor and the President of City Council, jointly, are hereby authorized to appoint a Special Committee of Fifteen, comprised of members of City Council, representatives of labor, industry, commerce, finance, civic and business organizations, for the purpose of reviewing the finances of the aggregate possibilities of revenue to be derived out of existing taxation, and for the purpose of recommending legislation whereby new revenue may be obtained, together with any other legislation, so as to insure an increase in compensation for employees of the City and County of Philadelphia, retroactive to January 1, 1948.

Resolved, That said Special Committee shall submit its report and recommendations to City Council on or before March 1, 1948.

Adopted December 4, 1947.

RESOLUTION OF CITY COUNCIL

Requesting and authorizing the Special Committee on City Finances to continue its review of the finances of the City of Philadelphia.

Whereas, City Council, by resolution adopted December
4, 1947, authorized the appointment of a Special Committee on City Finances to survey the possibilities of obtaining additional revenue for the City of Philadelphia for the purpose of providing additional compensation for employees of the City and County of Philadelphia, and it was provided in said resolution that a report and recommendations shall be submitted to City Council on or before March 1, 1948, which report has now been received,

And Whereas, It is the desire of City Council that the activities of the said Special Committee on City Finances shall be continued, in order that its review of the finances of the City of Philadelphia shall be further proceeded with and enlarged; therefore,

Resolved, By the Council of the City of Philadelphia, that the Special Committee on City Finances, appointed pursuant to resolution adopted December 4, 1947, is hereby requested and authorized to continue its review of the finances of the City of Philadelphia, whereby it shall be enabled to make further reports to the City Council from time to time during the remainder of the year 1948; and that it shall conclude its deliberations and investigations at or about December 31, 1948; and shall furnish to City Council its final and complete report and recommendations on or before December 31, 1948.

Adopted March 1, 1948.

ORDINANCE

Authorizing and requesting the Special Committee of Fifteen on City Finance to make investigations, studies and recommendations in relation to the finances and methods of operation of the Philadelphia City and County government.

Whereas, Under authority of a resolution adopted
December 4, 1947, the Mayor and the President of City Council, acting jointly, appointed a Special Committee of Fifteen on City Finances "for the purpose of reviewing the finances of the City of Philadelphia for the year 1948, in order to fully ascertain the aggregate possibilities of revenue to be derived out of existing taxation, and for the purpose of recommending legislation whereby new revenue may be obtained together with any other legislation”;

And Whereas, On March 1, 1948, the said Special Committee submitted its report containing valuable studies and recommendations relating thereto;

And Whereas, By resolution adopted March 1, 1948, the Special Committee was continued and was “requested and authorized to continue its review of the finances of the City of Philadelphia, whereby it shall be enabled to make further reports to the City Council from time to time during the remainder of the year 1948; and that it shall conclude its deliberations and investigations at or about December 31, 1948; and shall furnish to City Council its final and complete report and recommendations on or before December 31, 1948”; therefore,

Section 1. The Council of the City of Philadelphia ordains, That the Special Committee of Fifteen on City Finances be authorized and requested to perform the following functions and duties.

1. To conduct an investigation and study into the departments and agencies of the City and County government to determine the qualifications and efficiency of the employees therein.

2. To make an investigation and study of the said departments and agencies as to their methods of operation and expenditures as compared with methods of operation and expenditures by private industry and business.

3. To prepare and submit a plan for the installation of methods that will increase the efficiency of these operations and will effect efficiency and economy in the expenditures and cost of operation of the City and County government.

4. To make investigations and studies of the methods employed in the collection of taxes, rents and other charges due the City and to recommend the improvement of the system relating thereto and more efficient operation of the revenue collecting agencies.

5. To make investigations and studies of the personnel and equipment used in the various departments and agencies and to recommend such changes in methods, assignments and equipment as will provide for the more efficient operation of the City and County government.

6. That from time to time during its investigations and studies and upon completion thereof to report to City Council its findings and recommendations in relation to the above matters.

Section 2. That the said Committee be further requested to submit to City Council from time to time a schedule of the amounts required by it for personnel and other costs for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of Section 1, together with recommendations as to the times and amounts of appropriations desired by it for the said purpose.

Adopted June 25, 1948.

PREFACE

Pursuant to the request of the Joint State Government Commission of Pennsylvania, the Institute of Local and State Government of the University of Pennsylvania submits herewith a plan for specific, desirable structural changes in the government of the City and County of Philadelphia under a complete consolidation of the city-county government.

The Institute has observed the generally accepted principles of good administration. For example, it has grouped closely related functions in the same department; brought under the direct control of the chief executive all departments whose primary function is to aid him in carrying out his policies rather than to check upon his performance; eased the chief executive's task of coordination by keeping the number of administrative departments within reasonable bounds; equipped the chief executive for his managerial task by providing him, within his own department, with needed staff and auxiliary aids. Recognition has been given also to the generally accepted rule that for new functions and for functions which involve determination of broad policies or the hearing of appeals, a board is desirable, and that for the execution of policies a single executive is to be preferred.

The Suggested Plan in Brief

Chart 2 shows the board outlines of the suggested plan. This may be compared with Chart 1 which pictures the existing one. It will be noted that only two of the elective county officers are retained, the Controller and the District Attorney. As the Controller has the duty of checking the legality of proposed expenditures, and of serving as the city's auditor, it seems proper that he should remain independent of the city's chief executive. The District Attorney, too, as the chief prosecuting officer, should be independent of other officials and therefore, might well be continued as an elective officer. But the other elective county officers—the County Commissioners, the City Treasurer, the Coroner, the Recorder of Deeds, the Register of Wills, the Sheriff, and the Clerk of Quarter Sessions—have no duties not appropriate for appointed officers. It will be noted also that the elective office of Receiver of Taxes is discontinued and its functions, together with those of the City Treasurer and the Board of Revision of Taxes, all of which are closely related, are transferred to a new department of finance. With a further view to bringing closely related functions together, there are suggested: (1) a new elections commission, for the elections duties of the County Commissioners and the registering of voters now done by the Registration Commission; (2) a department of recreation and parks, for the recreation and parks functions of the Fairmount Park Commission, the Bureau of Recreation of the Department of Public Welfare, and the Bureau of City Property of the Department of Public Works; (3) a department of transit and aviation, for the functions of the Department of City Transit and the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Department of Public Works; and (4) a department of records, to absorb most of the functions of the Recorder of Deeds and the Register of Wills. An appointed clerk of courts takes the place of the Prothonotary and the present elected Clerk of Quarter Sessions. The functions of the Inspectors of County Prisons are transferred to the Department of Public Welfare. Finally, the Office of the Mayor is expanded into a department, with separate bureaus for the managerial service and control functions now reposed in the Department of Supplies and Purchases, the Civil Service Commission, and the Budget Secretary to the Mayor.

Gains to be Expected from Suggested Plan

What gains may be expected from this plan? The following may be mentioned:

1. By removal from the ballot of nine county offices and one city office, none of which has major policy-determining functions, the voters' task would be simplified and they would be better able to concentrate their attention upon the choice of the important elective offices.
2. Administrative responsibility would be more fully centralized in the city's chief executive, the Mayor. It is axiomatic that better administrative results can be obtained where responsibility is concentrated than where it is diffused.
3. Coordination of related activities would be facilitated, especially in the fields of elections, recreation and parks, and finance. This will yield dividends in better service and low unit costs.
4. The Mayor would be better equipped to perform his managerial functions.
5. Although a better administrative mechanism will not of itself produce more efficient and more economical governments, it will make it easier for officials striving to give such service to succeed in their endeavor.
6. The structural changes suggested would themselves effect immediate economies, though of relatively small amount, instead of requiring initial net increases in expenditures.

SUMMARY OF SUGGESTED CHANGES

If, by an appropriate amendment to Pennsylvania's Constitution, the State Legislature is given a free hand to reorganize Philadelphia's city-county government, there will be an opportunity to modernize the structure of that government, bringing it more into conformity with generally accepted principles of good administration. In its study, the Institute has sought to devise a plan of reorganization which would conform to these principles. Under this plan, the present functions of county and city agencies (not including the Board of Education or the courts) would be distributed as follows:

County Agencies

1. The County Commissioners, an elected body, would be abolished and their functions transferred as follows:
 - a. Those relating to elections, to a new elections commission which would perform also the functions of the present Registration Commission.
 - b. Those relating to weights and measures, to the Department of Public Safety.
 - c. Those relating to welfare, to the Department of Public Welfare.
 - d. Those relating to the administration of oaths, to the Department of Law.
 - e. The disbursing functions, to a new department of finance.
2. The elective office of City Controller, a county as well as a city office, would remain as it now is.
3. The elective office of City Treasurer, a county as well as a city office, would be abolished and its functions transferred to the new department of finance.
4. The elective office of Coroner would be abolished and its functions transferred as follows:
 - a. The making of autopsies and control of the city morgue, to the District Attorney.

b. The control of the city burial ground, to the city's Department of Public Welfare.

c. The field investigations of the causes of death, to the District Attorney.

5. The elective office of Recorder of Deeds would be abolished and its functions transferred to a new department of records.

6. The elective office of Register of Wills would be abolished and its functions transferred in part to the new department of records, in part to the new office of clerk of the courts, and in part to the new department of finance.

7. The elective office of District Attorney would remain as it now is, except for the functions transferred to it from the Coroner.

8. The elective office of Sheriff would be abolished and its functions transferred as follows:

a. Those relating to the maintenance of peace and the custody and transfer of prisoners, to the Department of Public Safety.

b. Those relating to the selection of jurors, to the new clerk of courts.

c. The serving of processes for the courts, to the new clerk of courts.

9. The elective office of Clerk of Quarter Sessions would be abolished and its functions transferred to the new clerk of courts.

10. The Prothonotary, an officer appointed by the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas, would be abolished and his functions transferred to the new clerk of courts.

11. The Inspectors of the County Prisons, a board now appointed by the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas, would be abolished and its functions transferred to the Department of Public Welfare.

City Agencies not under the Mayor

12. The Commissioners of Fairmount Park, a body composed of ex-officio members and persons appointed by the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas, would be abolished and its functions transferred as follows:

a. The policing functions, to the Department of Public Safety.

b. The construction and maintenance of highways, to the Department of Public Works.

c. The maintenance and supervision of parks and recreation, to the new department of recreation and parks.

13. The Board of Revision of Taxes, an appointive body, would be abolished and its functions transferred to the new department of finance.

14. The elective office of Receiver of Taxes would be abolished and its functions transferred to the new department of finance.

15. The Civil Service Commission, a body elected by City Council, would be abolished. Its appellate and rule making functions would be performed by a personnel board appointed by the Mayor and attached to a bureau of personnel, itself attached to the office of the Mayor.

16. The Commissioners of the Sinking Funds, a body consisting of the Mayor, the City Controller, and a person elected by the City Council, would remain as it now is, until all sinking fund bonds have been retired.

17. The Registration Commission, a body appointed by the Governor, would be abolished and its functions transferred to the new elections commission.

18. The Free Library of Philadelphia, a semi-private institution, would remain as it now is.

19. The Commercial Museum, Exhibition and Convention Halls would remain as they now are.

City Agencies under the Mayor

20. The Art Jury, a body composed of the Mayor and the Director of the Department of City architecture serving ex-officio, and eight other persons appointed by the Mayor, would remain as it now is.

21. The Office of the Mayor of which the Mayor is the head, would be expanded into a department of the Mayor, to include, in addition to its present functions, the following:

a. The functions now performed by the Department of Supplies and Purchases, to be placed in a bureau of supplies and purchases.

b. The functions now performed by the Civil Service Commission, to be placed in a bureau of personnel, and a personnel board attached thereto.

c. The present functions of the Budget Secretary would be expanded and placed in a budget bureau.

22. The Department of City Architecture, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would remain as it now is.

23. The Department of Public Safety, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would remain as it now is, except for the addition to its present functions of the inspection of weights and measures now performed by the County Commissioners; the maintenance of the peace and the custody and transfer of prisoners now responsibilities of the Sheriff; and the policing of the parks now under the Fairmount Park Commission.

24. The Department of Public Works, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would remain as it now is, except for the following changes in its functions:

a. It would be given the additional function of constructing and maintaining the highways now under the jurisdiction of the Fairmont Park Commission.

b. The public squares under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of City Property would be transferred to the new department of recreation and parks.

c. The functions now performed by the Bureau of Aeronautics would be transferred to a new department of transit and aviation.

25. The Department of Public Health, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would remain as it now is.

26. The Board of Health, which consists of the Director of Public Health, who serves as its president, and two other persons appointed by the Mayor, would remain as it now is.

27. The Department of Public Welfare, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would remain as it now is, except for the following changes in its functions:

a. It would have as additional functions those now performed by the Inspectors of County Prisons, and the control of the city burial ground now a responsibility of the Coroner, and the welfare functions now performed by the County Commissioners.

b. The functions now performed by its Bureau of Recreation would be transferred to the new department of recreation and parks.

28. The Department of Wharves, Docks, and Ferries, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would remain as it now is.

29. The Department of Supplies and Purchases, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would be abolished and its functions transferred to a bureau of purchases and supplies in the department of the Mayor.

30. The Department of Law, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would remain as it now is, except that to its present functions would be added that of administering oaths now performed by the County Commissioners.

31. The Department of City Transit, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would be abolished and its functions transferred to a new department of transit and aviation.

32. The City Planning Commission, which consists of nine members appointed by the Mayor, would remain as it now is.

33. The Philadelphia Housing Authority, which consists of five members, two appointed by the Mayor, two by the City Controller, and the fifth chosen by the first four, would remain as it now is, except that the five-member board would be appointed solely by the Mayor.

34. The Redevelopment Authority, which consists of five members appointed by the Mayor, would remain as it now is.

New Agencies

35. There would be an elections commission, appointed by the Mayor, to perform the functions now performed by the Registration Commission, and the elections functions now performed by the County Commissioners.

36. There would be a clerk of courts appointed by the Judges of the Courts of Common Pleas and the Orphans' Court, to perform the following functions:

a. Those now performed by the Clerk of Quarter Sessions and the Prothonotary.

b. Those functions which the Register of Wills now performs as Clerk of the Orphan's Court.

c. The serving of processes for the courts and the functions relating to the selection of jurors now performed by the Sheriff.

37. There would be a department of recreation and parks, the head of which would be appointed by the Mayor, to perform the recreation and parks functions now performed by the Fairmount Park Commission, the Bureau of Recreation of the Department of Public Welfare, and the Bureau of City Property of the Department of Public Works.

38. There would be a department of records, the head of which would be appointed by the Mayor, to perform the functions now performed by the Recorder of Deeds and the Register of Wills, except for the latter's functions as Clerk of the Orphans' Court, and his function, as agent of the Commonwealth, of collecting the collateral inheritance tax.

39. There would be a department of transit and aviation, the head of which would be appointed by the Mayor, to perform the functions now performed by the Department of City Transit and the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Department of Public Works.

40. There would be a department of finance, the head of which would be appointed by the Mayor, to perform the following functions:

a. Those now performed by the City Treasurer and the Receiver of Taxes.

b. The assessing function now performed by the Board of Revision of Taxes. (There would be a separate board of appeals to be appointed by the Mayor.)

c. The collection of the collateral inheritance tax now performed by the Register of Wills.

d. The disbursing functions now performed by the County Commissioners.

41. There would be a department of the Mayor consisting of the present office of the Mayor expanded to include the following component units:

a. A bureau of supplies and purchases, to perform the functions now performed by the present Department of Supplies and Purchases, except that it would service all the administrative agencies instead of only part of them.

b. A bureau of the budget, to perform the budget functions now performed by the Mayor's Budget Secretary.

c. A bureau of personnel, to perform the administrative personnel functions now performed by the Civil Service Commission, except that it would service all administrative agencies instead of only part of them.

d. A personnel board, to perform the rule-making and hearings functions now performed by the Civil Service Commission.

OF PHILADELPHIA'S GOVERNMENT *

SUGGESTED ORGANIZATION
OF PHILADELPHIA'S GOVERNMENT *

FUNCTIONAL ANALYSIS, BY AGENCIES

In the following pages are shown for each agency of the city-county government (a) how it is constituted, that is, how its head or governing body is chosen; (b) the functions now performed by the agency; (c) the suggested redistribution of its functions if the agency is to be abolished or materially changed; and (d) the direct savings, if any, that would result from the abolition of the agency and redistribution of its functions. By direct savings is meant only those savings that would result immediately from the legislative act of abolition and redistribution; not also those which may result later from improved administration under a better governmental structure. The direct savings obviously would be relatively small, for they would occur only on the top level of management, at the narrow apex of each administrative pyramid, not at its broad base.

As for the savings that may accrue later from improved administration, whether they are expressed in the form of reduced expenditures or in that of more and better service, these will depend upon the use made of the better administrative mechanism by the public authorities. It is to be presumed, however, that, just as workmen can produce more and better products with better tools, so our public authorities will be able to give more and better service, or the same service at least cost, when they are provided with a better administrative mechanism. The structural changes herein suggested for Philadelphia's government are designed to provide those authorities with a better administrative mechanism.

COUNTY AGENCIES

County Commissioners (Known Also as City Commissioners)

Section 1

How constituted

Under the Constitution of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, in common with other counties in the state, has three County Commissioners who are elected by the people for four-year terms. Their powers and functions, however, are less extensive than those of county commissioners in the other counties, many of the powers and functions formerly possessed by the Philadelphia Commissioners having been transferred to the City Council or to administrative agencies of the city by the Consolidation Act of 1854 and later legislation. For example, the power to levy taxes for county purposes, vested in other counties in the county commissioners, in Philadelphia is in the City Council; and the maintenance of county highways, which in other counties is the responsibility of the county commissioners, in Philadelphia is a duty of the city's Department of Public Works.

Existing Functions

This body has the following functions:

Elections

- (1) To prepare for and conduct all elections, except for the registration of voters.

Weights and measures

- (1) To make proper tests of all weighing and measuring devices.

Welfare

- (1) To provide support for children under 16 years of age who have been committed by the Juvenile Court as charges upon the county.

- (2) To arrange for the reception and maintenance at state institutions of indigent insane persons and convicts.

- (3) To approve all bills on account of such inmates of state institutions and draw warrants upon the City Treasurer for their payment.

- (4) To pay to the Civil War Home and the National Guard Armories the gratuities or donations provided by the City Council.

- (5) To pay not more than $75 each of the expense of burial of veterans or widows of veterans.

- (6) To pay not more than $75 each for head stones for graves of veterans; and to see that the graves and tombstones of veterans receive proper and fitting care.

- (7) To obtain and keep a complete record and registration of burial place and time of death of each veteran buried in Philadelphia County.

- (8) To assist war veterans and their families in securing their rights as such in matters relating to their person, property, and care of family under laws of the United States and the State of Pennsylvania.

- (9) To pay for the maintenance of at least 84 blind men, beneficiaries of Pennsylvania Working Home for Blind Men, at Philadelphia.

Administration of oaths

- (1) To administer oaths to all subordinate employees in every municipal department who are required by law to take an oath of office.

Disbursing

- (1) To disburse payrolls for:

- (a) the courts of Philadelphia city and county

- (b) the consolidated trial lists

- (c) the various sub-divisions of the County Commissioners Office except that of the Bureau of Weights and Measures

- (2) To pay bills for:

- (a) the House of Detention

- (b) the Courts

- (c) the Division of Children's Agents and Investigators

- (d) the Bureau of Elections

- (e) the Bureau of Weights and Measures

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous, under city-county consolidation, to abolish the County Commissioners and transfer their functions as follows:

- (1) Those relating to elections, to a suggested new elections commission

- (2) Those relating to weights and measures, to the existing Department of Public Safety

- (3) Those relating to welfare, to the existing Department of Public Welfare

- (4) The one relating to the administration of oaths, to the Department of Law

- (5) The disbursing functions, to a new department of finance

Direct savings

By the abolition of the County Commissioners and the transfer of their functions to other agencies, there would be effected direct annual savings of the salary and overhead costs of the three County Commissioners.

City Controller
Section 2

How constituted

Under the Constitution of Pennsylvania, the City Controller of Philadelphia, who is also the County Controller, in common with controllers of the other counties of the state, is elected by the people for a four-year term.

Existing functions

This officer has the following functions:

- (1) To prescribe the form of reports and accounts to be rendered to him.
- (2) To have entire charge and supervision of the accounts of city departments and trusts.
- (3) To control and supervise all employees engaged in keeping any books of accounts which form part of the city's bookkeeping system.
- (4) To audit all accounts in which the city is concerned.
- (5) To submit annually to City Council a report of the accounts of the city.
- (6) To keep separate accounts for each specific item of appropriation.
- (7) To see that no appropriation is overexpended or is used for a purpose not provided for by City Council.
- (8) To countersign contracts and to charge them against the proper appropriations.
- (9) To prepare for the "Mayor's Budget" the annual estimates of receipts and expenditures and the annual statement of the city's borrowing capacity.
- (10) To act as "School Controller."
- (11) To furnish to the magistrates information regarding bail secured by real property and to issue bail certificates.
- (12) To act as bail approval commissioner for all courts.
- (13) To act as Mayor in case of the latter's death or resignation.
- (14) To act as Controller of the County of Philadelphia.

No change suggested

As the City Controller's functions include those of checking the legality of proposed expenditures and of serving as auditor of the city's financial transactions, it seems desirable to preserve his independence of other officials by retaining his office as an elective office. No change in his functions is suggested.

City Treasurer
Section 3

How constituted

Under the Constitution of Pennsylvania, the City Treasurer of Philadelphia, who is also the County Treasurer, in common with treasurers of the other counties of the state, is elected by the people for a four-year term.

Existing functions

This officer has the following functions:

- (1) To demand and receive from the proper officers all moneys payable to the city from whatever source.
- (2) To pay all warrants or checks duly issued and countersigned.

(3) To keep the accounts arising from the several sources of revenue and income separate and distinct from one another.

(4) To make daily deposits of all moneys received.

(5) To make specific reports daily to the City Controller of all receipts and deposits and of all moneys withdrawn from the treasury.

(6) To act as an agent of the Commonwealth in the collection of certain state taxes within the city.

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous, under city-county consolidation, to abolish the elective office of Treasurer and transfer its functions to a new department of finance.

Direct savings

As there would need to be in the new department of finance an appointive official to perform the duties now performed by both the City Treasurer and the Receiver of Taxes, no direct annual savings would be effected, in addition to those mentioned in the section on the Receiver of Taxes. (See Sections 14 and 40.)

Coroner
Section 4

How constituted

Under the constitution of Pennsylvania, the Coroner of Philadelphia, in common with coroners of the other counties of the state, is elected by the people for a four-year term.

Existing functions

This officer has the following functions:

- (1) To hold inquests before a jury of six, to determine the cause of death.
- (2) To investigate deaths of a violent, sudden, and suspicious nature.
- (3) To supervise and control the city morgue.
- (4) To supervise and control the city burial ground.

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous, under city-county consolidation, to abolish the elective office of Coroner and transfer its functions as follows:

- (1) The making of autopsies and control of the city morgue, to the District Attorney.
- (2) The control of the city burial ground, to the city's Department of Public Welfare.
- (3) The inquests and field investigations of the causes of death, to the District Attorney.

Direct savings

By the abolition of the office of Coroner, and the transfer of its functions to other agencies, there would be effected a direct annual saving of the salary and overhead costs of the Coroner.

Recorder of Deeds
Section 5

How constituted

Under the Constitution of Pennsylvania, the Recorder of Deeds of Philadelphia, in common with recorders of deeds of the other counties of the state, is elected by the people for a four-year term.

Existing functions

This officer has the following functions:

(1) To record, file, and index real estate transfers, mortgages, ground rents, and bonds of county officers, and to furnish certified copies of the same.

(2) To collect from individuals and to disburse to the proper agencies the fees incident to the above.

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous, under city-county consolidation, to abolish the elective office of Recorder of Deeds, and transfer its powers and functions to a new department of records.

Direct savings

(See Section 6, on the Register of Wills, and Section 38, on the new department of records.)

Register of WillsSection 6*How constituted

Under the constitution of Pennsylvania, the Register of Wills of Philadelphia, in common with registers of wills of the other counties of the State, is elected by the people for a four-year term.

Existing functions

This officer has the following functions:

As Register of Wills:

(1) To probate wills and testaments.

(2) To grant letters testamentary and of administration, and to collect the state tax $.50 on such letters.

(3) To pass and file executors', administrators', and guardians' accounts.

(4) To certify official papers, such as bonds, inventories, and accounts.

(5) To notify corporations of bequests made to them.

As Clerk of the Orphans' Court:

(1) To keep a record of all the proceedings of the court and of all accounts filed and all estates settled.

As agent of the Commonwealth to collect the collateral inheritance tax:

(1) To keep account of the amount of these taxes and of the estates on which they were collected.

(2) To make a monthly return of the amount to the Auditor General of the state.

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous, under city-county consolidation, to abolish the elective office of Register of Wills and transfer its functions as follows:

(1) The functions performed as Register of Wills, to the new department of records.

(2) The functions performed as Clerk of the Orphans' Court, to the new clerk of courts.

(3) The collection of the collateral inheritance tax, to the new department of finance.

Direct savings

By the abolition of not only the office of the Recorder of Deeds, but also that of the Register of Wills, and the transfer of their functions to the new department of records, and other agencies, there would be effected direct annual savings of the salary and overhead costs of either the Register of Willis or the Recorder of Deeds.

District Attorney
Section 7*How constituted

Under the Constitution of Pennsylvania, the District Attorney of Philadelphia, in common with district attorneys of the other counties of the state, is elected by the people for a four-year term.

Existing functions

This officer has the following functions:

(1) To conduct the prosecution of all criminal cases in the Courts of Philadelphia.

(2) To present evidence before the Grand Jury, unless superseded by the Attorney General.

(3) To draw up indictments.

Increase of functions

As the District Attorney is the prosecuting officer for the community, it seems desirable to preserve his present independent status as an elected officer.

It is suggested that to his present functions be added, by transfer from the office of the Coroner, the following:

(1) The making of autopsies and control of the city morgue.

(2) The inquests and field investigations of the causes of death.

Sheriff
Section 8*How constituted

Under the Constitution of Pennsylvania, the Sheriff of Philadelphia, in common with sheriffs of the other counties of the State, is elected by the people for a four-year term.

Existing functions

This officer has the following functions:

Maintenance of peace and custody and transfer of

(1) To convey every convict sentenced to either the county prison or the penitentiary to those institutions.

(2) To transfer to the Western Penitentiary persons sentenced to death on warrants issued by the Governor fixing the date of execution.

(3) To convey all prisoners between places of detention and places of trial, and to guard them at each of those places. Once a person is held for court, he is entirely in the charge of the Sheriff until he is finally lodged in the institution to which he has been committed.

(4) To maintain the public peace within the county as long as the civil authorities are in control. In theory, the Sheriff is the principal county peace officer until martial law is declared.

Section of jurors

(1) To select grand and petit jurors and summon those selected for service.

Serving of processes

(1) To execute processes addressed to him by the courts.

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous, under city-county consolidation, to abolish the elective office of Sheriff, and transfer its powers and functions as follows:

(1) Those relating to the maintenance of peace and the custody and transfer of prisoners, to the Department of Public Safety.

(2) Those relating to the selection of jurors, to the new clerk of courts.

(3) The serving of processes for the courts, to the new clerk of courts.

Direct savings

By the abolition of the elective office of Sheriff, there would be effected direct annual savings of the salary and overhead costs of the Sheriff.

Clerk of Quarter Sessions

Section 9

How constituted

Under the Constitution of Pennsylvania, the Clerk of Quarter Sessions (who also serves ex-officio as Clerk of the Criminal Division of the Municipal Court) is elected by the people for a four-year term.

Existing functions

This officer has the following functions:

(1) To record, index, and file all indictments returned by the Grand Jury.

(2) To prepare and issue subpoenas for defendants and witnesses in bail and non-bail cases.

(3) To perform miscellaneous work in condemnation of liquor, autos, and slot machines.

(4) To receive all petitions for insane persons committed to Norristown.

(5) To issue petitions for constables and private detectives.

(6) To issue all writs of habeus corpus.

(7) To receive petitions for appeals from the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board.

(8) To receive motions to quash indictments.

(9) To remit forfeitures.

(10) To verify appointments of election officers, changes in polling places, and additional voting machines.

(11) To receive petitions to appoint a jury of view from the Board of Revision of Taxes.

(12) To protect 49,000 naturalization records (1802 to 1914).

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous, under city-county consolidation, to abolish the elective office of Clerk of Quarter Sessions and transfer its functions to the new clerk of courts appointed by the Judges of the Courts of Common Pleas and Orphan's Court. The duties performed by the Clerk of Quarter Sessions for the Municipal Court might be transferred to an appointee of the Municipal Court.

Direct savings

By the abolition of the elective office of Clerk of Quarter Sessions, and the transfer of its functions to the new clerk of courts who would perform also the duties of the Prothonotary, and some of the duties of the Register of Wills, there would be effected direct annual savings of the salary and overhead costs of the Clerk of Quarter Sessions. (See also Sections 6, 10, and 36).

Prothonotary

Section 10

How constituted

Under the Constitution of Pennsylvania, the Prothonotary of Philadelphia is appointed by the Judges of the Courts of Common Pleas.

Existing Functions

This officer has the following functions:

(1) To fix the seals of the respective courts to all writs and processes.

(2) To take bail in civil actions.

(3) To enter judgment at the instance of the plaintiffs, upon the confession of the defendants.

(4) To sign all judgments (Entered and Satisfy judgments).

(5) To take acknowledgement of satisfaction of judgment or decrees entered on the records of the respective courts.

(6) To administer oaths and affirmations in conducting the business of these respective offices.

(7) To certify monthly every divorce, annulment of marriage, adoption or annulment of adoption decreed by any court to the Pennsylvania Department of Health.

(8) To receive certified copies of the orders of arbitration boards appointed by the Governor to settle labor disputes in public utilities, and to maintain a complete record of each case. The Prothonotary must also notify the Governor and the parties to the proceeding of the order entered by any court in appeals from the order of the board of arbitration.

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous, under city-county consolidation, to abolish the office of the Prothonotary and transfer its functions to the new clerk of courts.

Direct savings

(See Sections 9 and 36.)

Inspectors of the County Prisons

Section 11

How constituted

Under a special act of the State Legislature, the Board of Inspectors of the Philadelphia County Prisons consists of eleven members appointed for one-year terms by the Judges of the Courts of Common Pleas of Philadelphia. The members of the Board serve without salary.

Existing functions

This Board has the following functions:

(1) To supervise the care and management of the Reed Street and Holmesburg Prisons, and the Prison Farm at Byberry.

(2) To exercise certain powers necessary to implement the above function, including the selection and supervision of personnel, and the determination of such rules for the internal government of the prisons as are not inconsistent with the principles of separate or solitary confinement.

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous, under city-county consolidation, to abolish the Board of Inspectors of the Philadelphia County Prisons and transfer its functions to the Philadelphia Department of Public Welfare.

Direct savings

There would be no direct savings.

CITY AGENCIES NOT UNDER THE MAYOR

Commissioners of Fairmount Park
Section 12

How constituted

The Fairmount Park Commission is not a county agency, but neither is it an ordinary city agency. It was created by a special act of the Legislature prior to the adoption of the Constitution of 1874, which prohibits such special legislation. This act gave the Commission unusual powers and a more independent status in the structure of the city government than is possessed by ordinary city agencies.

Its membership consists of ten persons appointed for five-year terms by the Judges of the Courts of Common Pleas of Philadelphia, and five ex-officio members consisting of the Mayor, President of City Council, Chief of the Bureau of Water, Chief of the Bureau of City Property, and the Chief Engineer and Surveyor. All serve without compensation as members of the Commission.

Existing functions

The Commission has entire and exclusive control of Fairmount Park, its grounds, its works, its maintenance, its improvement, its expenditures, its business, its officers and employees together with every other function of government relating to control of the Park. Besides managing Fairmount Park itself, the Commission supervises the care and management of numerous smaller parks and squares. The area under its supervision totals more than 7,000 acres, which contain a large variety of recreational facilities. In order to implement these functions, the Park Commissioners are authorized to employ, equip, and pay a Park police force, adequate to maintain good order. The Commissioners also have exclusive control over the construction and repair of all roadways within the parks.

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous to abolish the Commissioners of Fairmount Park, and transfer their functions as follows:

- (1) Their policing functions, to the Department of Public Safety.
- (2) Those relating to the construction and maintenance of highways, to the Department of Public Works.
- (3) Those relating to the maintenance and supervision of parks and recreation to the new department of recreation and parks.

Direct savings

There would be no direct savings.

Section 13

How constituted

The Board of Revision of Taxes of Philadelphia consists of seven members appointed by the Judges of the Courts of Common Pleas for six-year terms.

Existing functions

This Board has the following functions:

- (1) To appoint the real and personal property assessors.
- (2) To divide the county into assessment districts and to assign assessors to each district.

(3) To establish real property assessment records, including a complete survey of each parcel of ground and its improvements.

(4) To issue annual precepts to the assessors and to examine the returns made by the assessors.

(5) To revise assessments so that they will conform to the laws of the Commonwealth.

(6) To hear and dispose of appeals from assessment.

(7) To exercise certain powers necessary to implement the above functions.

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous to abolish the Board of Revision of Taxes and transfer its functions to the new department of finance. Attached to a bureau of assessment in that department would be a board to hear appeals from property owners on their assessments.

Direct savings

There would be direct annual savings to the extent of the difference between the salaries of the members of the present Board, and those of the members of the new board of appeals, whose duties would be less time-consuming than those of the present Board.

Receiver of Taxes
Section 14

How constituted

The Receiver of Taxes is elected by the people for a four-year term.

Existing functions

This officer is charged with the duty of receiving and collecting taxes and funds derived from loans, licenses, water rents, water-pipe frontages, permits, and rents from markets, landings, wharves, and other public property, and of turning the moneys collected and received over to the City Treasurer daily.

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous to abolish the elective office of Receiver of Taxes, and transfer its functions to the new department of finance.

Direct savings

By abolition of the elective office of Receiver of Taxes, and the transfer of its functions to another department, responsibility for these could be entrusted to a second level official at a lower salary.

Civil Service Commission
Section 15

How constituted

The Civil Service Commission consists of three members elected by the City Council for four-year terms.

Existing functions

This Commission administers the city's merit system, and serves as the city's central personnel agency for most of the departments under the Mayor.

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous to transfer the functions of the Commission to the department of the Mayor, in which there would be a bureau of personnel headed by a personnel director appointed by the Mayor, and a personnel board also appointed by the Mayor.

The personnel director would perform all the administrative functions, and the board would serve as a rule-making and hearings body.

Direct savings

While the members of the suggested personnel board would have less responsibility and less demands on their time than the members of the present Civil Service Commission, and therefore might be paid smaller salaries, any savings thus realized would probably be absorbed by the salary of the personnel director whose responsibilities would be greater than those of the present executive officer of the Commission, the Chief Examiner. Hence, there would be no direct savings.

Commissioners of the Sinking Funds

Section 16

How constituted

The Sinking Fund Commission consists of the Mayor and the City Controller, who serve ex-officio, and a person elected by City Council.

Existing functions

This body serves as trustee of the sinking funds established for the payment of the city's bonds upon their maturity.

No change is suggested, but if the city continues in the future to issue only serial non-sinking fund bonds, this body would not be needed after the retirement of the last outstanding sinking fund bonds.

The Registration Commission

Section 17

How constituted

The Registration Commission consists of five members appointed by the Governor for four-year terms.

Existing functions

This body is charged with the duty of administering the system of permanent registration of voters in Philadelphia.

Redistribution of functions

It would be administratively advantageous to abolish the Registration Commission and transfer its functions to the suggested new elections commission, thus bringing all elections functions into the same department where they can be more readily coordinated. (See also Sections 1 and 35.)

The Free Library of Philadelphia

Section 18

How constituted

The Free Library of Philadelphia is a semi-private institution managed by a board of twenty-two trustees. Two of these trustees, the Mayor and the President of City Council, serve ex-officio, and the others are named, as vacancies occur, alternatively by the Mayor and by the board.

Existing functions

This body has the management of the free library system of Philadelphia.

No change suggested

The Commercial Museum, Exhibition, and Convention Halls

Section 19

How constituted

The Commercial Museum, Exhibition, and Convention Halls are managed by a board of nineteen trustees, of whom seven serve ex-officio, six are appointed by the Mayor, and six are elected by City Council.

Existing functions

This body has the management of the Commercial Museum, Exhibition Hall, and the Municipal Auditorium, popularly known as Convention Hall.

No change suggested

CITY AGENCIES UNDER THE MAYOR

The Art Jury

Section 20

How constituted

The Art Jury consists of the Mayor and the Director of the Department of City Architecture serving ex-officio and eight other persons appointed by the Mayor.

Existing functions

This body passes upon the design and proposed location of every work of art intended to be made city property. It also passes, before erection, upon the design of buildings, bridges, arches, gates, fences or other structures for which the city is to pay or for which a public authority is to furnish a site. A third function is to pass, before erection, upon proposed structures or fixtures to be erected on or to extend over any highway, stream, lake, square, park, or other public place within the city, and to pass upon all buildings to be erected within 200 feet of the Parkway.

No change suggested

The Office of the Mayor

Section 21

How constituted

The Mayor of Philadelphia is elected by the people for a four-year term.

Existing functions

The Mayor is the city's chief executive.

Among his powers and duties is that of preparing the annual budget of the city and submitting it to City Council for its consideration and action. On his staff is a Budget Secretary to assist him in this task.

Suggested changes

It is suggested that the Office of the Mayor be expanded as outlined in Section 41.

Department of City Architecture

Section 22

How constituted

The director of this department is appointed by the Mayor.

Existing functions

Under the City Charter, this department has "the care, management, control, inspection and administration of the city's architectural interests."

No change suggested

The Department of Public Safety
Section 23

How constituted

The director of this department is appointed by the Mayor.

Existing functions

Under the City Charter, this department has "the care, management, administration, and supervision of the police affairs and all matters relating to the fire and police forces, electrical service (except electric lighting) erection of fire escapes, and the inspection of buildings . . ." Included in it are the following major administrative units:

Bureau of Police
Bureau of Fire
Electrical Bureau
Bureau of Building Inspection
Bureau of Traffic Engineering

Suggested changes

It is suggested that to the present functions of this department be added the following:

- (1) By transfer from the County Commissions, the inspection of weights and measures.
- (2) By transfer from the Office of the Sheriff, the functions of maintaining the peace and the custody and transfer of prisoners.
- (3) By transfer from the Fairmount Park Commission, the policing of the parks under its jurisdiction.

Department of Public Works
Section 24

How constituted

The director of this department is appointed by the Mayor.

Existing functions

Under the City Charter, this department has "the care, management, administration, and supervision of water-works, gas works . . . owned or controlled by the city, the supply and distribution of water and gas, the grading, paving, repairing, cleaning, and lighting of streets, alleys, and highways, including footways, the construction, protection, maintenance, operation, and repair of public buildings, bridges, and structures of every kind for public use, public squares, real estate . . . surveys, engineering, sewerage, drainage, and all matters and things in any way relating to or affecting the highways or footways of the city."

Included in the department are the following major administrative units:

Bureau of Engineering, Surveys and Zoning Bureau of Highways and Street Cleaning Bureau of Water
Bureau of Lights and Gas
Bureau of City Property
Bureau of Mechanical Equipment
Bureau of Aeronautics

Suggested changes

It would be administratively advantageous to make the following changes in the functions of this department:

- (1) Transfer to the department, from the Fairmount Park Commission, the construction and maintenance of highways now under the jurisdiction of the Commission.

- (2) Transfer from the department, to the new department of recreation and parks, the care of the public squares now under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of City Property.
- (3) Transfer from the department, to the new department of transit and aviation, the functions now performed by the Bureau of Aeronautics.

These suggested changes would bring closely related functions together in the same agency, reduce somewhat the size of the large Department of Public Works, and bring the small Department of City Transit under the same roof with another closely related administrative unit.

Section 25

How constituted

The director of this department is appointed by the Mayor.

Existing functions

Under the City Charter, this department has "the care, management, administration and supervision of city activities relating to public health, including hospitals and control of housing and sanitation, . . ."

Included in the department are the following major administrative units:

Bureau of Health
Bureau of Hospitals

No change suggested

Board of Health
Section 26

How constituted

The Board of Health consists of the Director of Public Health, who serves as its president, and two other persons appointed by the Mayor. It is attached to, and a part of, the Department of Public Health.

Existing functions

Under state law, this body has power to make general rules and orders for protection from contagious diseases, nuisances prejudicial to public health, regulation and cleaning of cesspools, the sale of meat and milk, the operation of private maternity hospitals, the regulation of house drainage, and other matters essential to sanitation and the preservation of public health.

No change suggested

Department of Public Welfare
Section 27

How constituted

The head of this department is appointed by the Mayor.

Existing functions

Under the City Charter, this department has "the care, management, administration and supervision of all charitable, correctional, and reformatory institutions, and agencies (including the House of Correction, but not including hospitals) the control or government of which is entrusted to such city" other than those under the Board of City Trusts. It has also the management of playgrounds, recreation centers, bathing beaches, recreation piers, and other recreation facilities or grounds of the city not under the School District of Philadelphia, the Fairmount Park Commission, or the Bureau of City Property of the Department of Public Works.

Included in the department are the following major administrative units:

- Bureau of Charities and Correction
- Bureau of Recreation
- Bureau of Personal Assistance

Suggested changes

It would be administrative advantageous to make the following changes in the functions of this department:

- (1) Transfer to the department, the functions now performed by the Inspectors of County Prisons.
- (2) Transfer to the department, from the office of the coroner, the control of the city burial ground.
- (3) Transfer to the department, from the County Commissioners, the welfare functions now performed by that body.
- (4) Transfer from the department, to the new department of recreation and parks, the functions now performed by the present Bureau of Recreation.

Department of Wharves, Docks and Ferries
Section 28

How constituted

The director of this department is appointed by the mayor.

Existing functions

Under state law, this department has charge of the building, maintenance, and leasing of municipal wharves, piers, and other harbor structures; the preparation of plans for port development; the issuance of permits and licenses for private water-front improvements; the supervision of private docks; the dredging of docks and approaches; the bulkheading and dredging of the Schuylkill River; and the operation of ice boats.

No change suggested

Department of Supplies and Purchases
Section 29

How constituted

The director of this department is appointed by the Mayor.

Existing functions

Under the City Charter, this department has "the care, management, direction, control, and administration of the purchase and supply of all articles of personal property" for the use of the various city agencies, including the City Controller and City Treasurer.

Suggested changes

It would be administratively advantageous to transfer the functions of this department to a bureau of supplies and purchases in the department of the Mayor and to give this bureau jurisdiction over all agencies of the consolidated city-county government.

Department of Law
Section 30

How constituted

The head of this department, the City Solicitor, is appointed by the Mayor.

Existing functions

Under the City Charter, the City Solicitor serves as the legal adviser and is attorney for the city and for all departments and officers of the city.

Suggested change

It is suggested that the services of this department be extended to all administrative units of the consolidated city-county government, and that to its present functions be added the administering of oaths now performed by the County Commissioners.

Department of City Transit
Section 31

How constituted

The director of this department is appointed by the Mayor.

Existing functions

Under the City Charter, this department has "the care, management, administration, and supervision of any and all transit facilities purchased, leased, located, constructed or otherwise acquired, equipped, owned, maintained, used or operated by such city."

Suggested change

As the Department of City Transit is a small unit and is its functions are closely related to those of the present Bureau of Aeronautics of the Department of Public Works, it would be administratively advantageous to transfer the functions of this department to a new department of transit and aviation which would include as bureaus both the present Department of City Transit and the present Bureau of Aeronautics.

City Planning Commission
Section 32

How constituted

Under the City Charter and an ordinance of City Council, the City Planning Commission consists of nine members appointed by the Mayor.

Existing functions

This body makes studies and prepares plans for the information and guidance of the Mayor and City Council and of the public in regard to the physical needs and the future development of the city.

No change suggested

The Philadelphia Housing Authority
Section 33

How constituted

Under an act of the State Legislature, the Philadelphia Housing Authority consists of five members named as follows: The Mayor appoints two, the City Controller appoints two, and the four thus appointed select the fifth member.

Existing functions

This body is charged with the administration of the state "Housing Authorities Law" in Philadelphia.

Suggested change

It is suggested that all the members of the Philadelphia Housing Authority be appointed by the Mayor.

The Philadelphia Redevelopment Authority
Section 34

How constituted

Under an act of the State Legislature, the Philadelphia Redevelopment Authority consists of five members appointed by the Mayor.

Existing functions

This body is charged with the administration of the "Urban Redevelopment Law" in Philadelphia.

NEW AGENCIES

Elections Commission

Section 35

How to be constituted

The members of this commission would be appointed by the Mayor.

Suggested functions

This commission would perform the present functions of the Registration Commission and the elections functions of the County Commissioners. Thus the two closely related functions of registration of electors and of conducting elections would be brought within the same administrative unit and could be more readily coordinated.

Clerk of Courts

Section 36

How to be constituted

The new clerk of courts would be appointed by the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas and the Orphans' Court.

Suggested functions

In this office would be brought together the closely related functions now performed by the Clerk of Quarter Sessions (except those performed by him as clerk of the Municipal Court), those performed by the Prothonotary, those performed by the Register of Wills as Clerk of the Orphans' Court, and the serving of processes for the courts and the functions relating to the selection of jurors now performed by the Sheriff.

Department of Recreation and Parks

Section 37

How to be constituted

The head of this department would be appointed by the Mayor.

Suggested functions

In this department would be brought together, so that they may be more readily coordinated, the recreation and parks functions now performed by the Fairmount Park Commission, the Bureau of Recreation of the Department of Public Welfare, and the Bureau of City Property of the Department of Public Works.

Department of Records

Section 38

How to be constituted

The head of this department would be appointed by the Mayor.

Suggested functions

In this department would be brought together the functions now performed by the Recorder of Deeds and those now performed by the Register of Wills, except the functions performed by him as Clerk of the Orphans' Court and as agent of the Commonwealth for the collection of the collateral inheritance tax.

Department of Transit and Aviation Section 39

How to be constituted

The head of this department would be appointed by the Mayor.

Suggested functions

In this department would be combined the functions now performed by the Department of City Transit and those performed by the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Department of Public Works.

Department of Finance

Section 40

How to be constituted

The head of this department would be appointed by the Mayor.

Suggested functions

In this department would be brought together the closely related functions now performed by the City Treasurer, the Receiver of Taxes, and the Board of Revision of Taxes. The functions of the latter unit would be performed by a bureau of assessment attached to which there would be a board to hear tax appeals. This department would perform also the disbursing functions now performed by the County Commissioners, and the functions now performed by the Register of Wills as agent of the Commonwealth for the collection of the collateral inheritance tax.

Department of the Mayor

Section 41

How to be constituted

This department would be an expansion of the present Office of the Mayor.

Suggested functions

It would retain all its present functions.

To strengthen the Mayor for the performance of his managerial functions, there would be in his department the following bureaus:

a. A bureau of supplies and purchases, to perform the functions now performed by the Department of Supplies and Purchases, except that this bureau would service not only the administrative units now serviced by the Department of Supplies and Purchases, but also all other agencies of the city-county government.

b. A bureau of the budget, to perform more fully the budget functions now performed by the Mayor's Budget Secretary.

c. A bureau of personnel, to perform the administrative personnel functions now performed by the Civil Service Commission, except that this bureau would service not only the administrative units now serviced by the Civil Service Commission, but also all other agencies of the city-county government.

d. A personnel board, to be attached to the bureau of personnel and to perform the rule-making and hearings functions now performed by the Civil Service Commission.

The heads of these bureaus and the members of the personnel board would be appointed by the Mayor.

APPENDIX

Philadelphia now has a degree of city-county consolidation. Since 1854, when the Consolidation Act was enacted by the State Legislature, the city and the county have had a common legislative body, and the City Treasurer and City controller have served also as County Treasurer and County Controller. Under the Constitution of Pennsylvania, however, the County of Philadelphia still remains as a separate legal entity, and most of the county functions are still required to be performed by elected county officers. The integration of these functions into a unified governmental structure for both the city and the county therefore must wait upon the adoption of an appropriate amendment to the Constitution of the State.

Other large cities which perform county functions under plans of consolidation are:

The Institute of Local and State Government was established July 1, 1937, at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, through a generous grant by the Samuel S. Fels Fund, the founder of which has long been interested in the improvement of municipal and state government. It is governed by a board composed of administrative officers of the University and of persons prominent in Pennsylvania civic affairs, and is housed in one of the buildings of the University.

The Institute engages in training, assistance, consulting, and research.

The training program is for:

1. college graduates who wish to become local or state government officials;
2. officials and employees already engaged in governmental service who desire to extend their training, on a part-time basis, either through regular university courses or special subject short courses; and
3. undergraduates in the University, who study government as part of their liberal education.

The municipal assistant service aids local governments in a variety of ways, including help in the preparation of administrative reports and general advisement on management and public works problems. Thus service is free. When practicable, the work is performed through supervised student laboratory assignments.

The governmental consulting service carries out specific contracts with local and state governmental agencies and related organizations on a cost basis. These services include installation of procedures, formulation of city and rural plans, preparation of municipal annual reports, making of zoning and other surveys, framing of charters, analysis of financial and administrative conditions, and similar activities.

The research activities of the Institute are usually connected with its training and service programs, but occasionally long-range studies are made which are not immediately applicable to a specific situation.

In pursuing its various objectives, the policy of the Institute is to service government officials in a unique way, and to avoid duplicating the work of other governmental service associations, leagues, and bureaus in this area. The Institute leaves the promotion of public economies, the exposure of official wrongdoing, the advocacy of controversial measures, and the military type of over-all reform to existing organizations, and tries to achieve supplementary objectives. It strives to help incumbent public officials to do the job that is to be done. In this helping process, however, the staff of the Institute endeavors to discover improvements in techniques and to advance the science and art of governmental administration, especially at the local level.

HOW TO MODERNIZE PHILADELPHIA GOVERNMENT

Lets' Put an Up-to-Date Chassis Under the Rolls-Royce Motor

FOREWORD

On July 19, 1948, a sub-committee of the Pennsylvania Joint State Government Commission conducted a hearing in Philadelphia to receive suggestions and recommendations as to remedial changes in Philadelphia's governmental structure. Members of the subcommittee who were present included:

Senator Weldon J. Heyburn, chairman
Senator J. H. Dent.
Senator J. M. Walker.
Representative H. G. Andrews.
Representative C. H. Brunner.
Representative Baker Royer.

The heads of five Philadelphia civic organizations and their key staff members also attended the hearing. They were:

Bureau of Municipal Research
James Allen Montgomery, Jr., President.
Robert J. Patterson (staff).

Chamber of Commerce of Philadelphia
Clement V. Conole, general manager.

Leonard A. Drake, economist.
Paul A. Howe, assistant manager,
Civic Development Bureau.

Wilfred Jordan, manager, Civic Development Bureau,

Citizens' Council on City Planning
Allen Mitchel, president.

Walter M. Phillips, former president.
S. B. Zisman, executive director (staff).

Committee of Seventy Walter P. Miller, Jr., chairman.
Sidney B. Dexter, treasurer.

Harry K. Butcher, executive director (staff).

Philadelphia Committee of Pennsylvania Economy League

Alexander Biddle, chairman.

Dr. Charlton F. Chute, executive director (staff).

Because these organizations were unanimous in agreeing on four fundamental objectives, they united in making a common presentation. Arthur C. Kaufmann, president of the Chamber of Commerce, made a joint statement in behalf of the group. These were the recommendations made at that time:

1. Consolidation of the City and County of Philadelphia. This essentially means transferring the present county functions to the city administration by making city officials out of county officials.

2. Home rule to be granted to Philadelphia by the Legislature.

3. Stabilization of Philadelphia's debt limit (its borrowing power) by eliminating personal property values from the base and using an average of real estate assessments over a long period of years.

4. Consolidation of the election machinery by the Legislature through merger of the existing Registration Commission and the County Board of Elections.

It was stated at the hearing that while this four-point program did not represent a complete outline of what the various groups necessarily thought should be done to enable Philadelphia to operate more efficiently, the four points, nevertheless, were basic revisions essential to the governmental structure of our city.

Without these four changes, the functioning of government in our city is not unlike the operation of a Rolls-Royce motor on a Ford chassis. What we mean is that the motor symbolizes the tremendous driving force that presently exists among the thinking people of this community in the direction of modern and economical city government. But without the proper chassis—or framework—the motor can accomplish relatively little.

It was announced at the time of the hearing, in response to questions from the members of the sub-committee, that the program of governmental reorganization which was outlined would be later supplied in greater detail. This booklet is an attempt to satisfy this promise and give the reasons why the program was advocated.

It is only in the interests of businesslike government, therefore, that we propose to place these four matters before the Legislature at the coming session:

I. City-county consolidation.

II. Home rule.

III. Debt stabilization.

IV. Consolidation of the Registration Commission and County Board of Elections.

Chapter I

CITY-COUNTY CONSOLIDATION

Pennsylvania's constitution does not require that a single officer of any city be chosen by popular election and, at the department-head level, only one Philadelphia officer, the Receiver of Taxes, is elected. But by constitutional requirement, 11 county officers, whose combined expenditures account for only about a tenth of the city-county budget, must be chosen by the voters.

Popular election of these 11 county officers puts them in a position to resist the Mayor and Council, who are chosen by the voters to be the responsible heads of the local government. The county officers are on the team, but since their authority comes from as high a source as the captain's, they feel no strong obligation to obey any signals but their own. For the Mayor and Council, not to speak of the voters, they are an unwieldy and unresponsive load.

The city side of Philadelphia's government would be comparable with the county side if the City Solicitor, the three Civil Service Commissioners, and the Directors of Public Works, Public Safety, Public Health, Public Welfare, City Transit, City Architecture, Supplies and Purchases, and Wharves, Docks and Ferries were elected.

Nobody would argue that such an arrangement would make the city government responsive to the public's wishes; nobody would expect much from it in the way of concerted effort for the city's welfare.

Unfinished Business. Is the city-county consolidation now proposed for Philadelphia a radical departure from the past, possibly a hazardous venture?

No. It would simply add some necessary finishing touches to a unification of city and county governments put into effect by the State Legislature almost a century ago.

Since 1854 the city and county of Philadelphia have had the same boundaries, and within them many important functions of county government have been performed by city officers.

City Council levies the taxes, borrows money, and authorizes expenditures for county as well as city purposes. The funds are pooled, and at no point are they accounted for separately as city and county. City and county have one tax collector, one treasurer, one treasury, one auditing office.

City administrative departments render many services performed by county officers in other parts of the state. The activities of local government with which the public has its day-to-day contacts are practically all in charge of city officers.

City-county consolidation is not an untried experiment. So far as it has gone, it has been a big success. Unfortunately it was never completed.

County Officers Get the Breaks. Philadelphians choose at the polls a County Treasurer (who serves as City Treasurer), a County Controller (who serves as City Controller), a Sheriff, a Coroner, a Recorder of Deeds, a Register of Wills (who is also Clerk of the Orphans' Court), a Clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions, a District Attorney, and three County Commissioners. The constitution provides that a twelfth county officer, the Prothonotary, shall be appointed by the Common Pleas Judges of Philadelphia.

The constitutional county officers have always been dealt with very generously by the Legislature, City Council, and the courts.

They are not subject to the merit-system provisions of the City Charter, and are free to hire and fire regardless of fitness for the work. The Charter forbids most city employes to engage in certain forms of political activity, but county jobs are continually handed out as a reward for political services. These offices, in consequence, easily degenerate to serving political factions rather than the general public.

Even the City Treasurer and City Controller are exempt from civil service because, despite their titles, they have the constitutional status of county officers.

Because numerous laws have withheld budgetary control of county offices from City Council, and there has been a carefully cultivated myth that the constitution denied Council power to refuse any appropriation demanded by a county officer, Council's budgetary control on the county side has always been weak and halfhearted. Legislation intended to give Council practically complete control of county payrolls was enacted in 1945 and 1947, but it has not yet been thoroughly tested in the courts. Since the adoption of the constitution of 1873 the courts have not smiled on legislation subjecting county affairs to city control.

The county officers are not obliged to do their buying through the city's centralized purchasing system.

The county offices are the big prizes of Philadelphia politics. But since not one of the county offices has power to decide any important question of public policy, the voters, in choosing between candidates, have nothing more important to decide than who is to enjoy the prizes. In a city the size of Philadelphia the voters can know very little about the qualifications of candidates for so many offices, and what happens has been aptly described as follows: The politicians tie the candidates in bunches, like asparagus, and the people vote them by the bunch. A voter has little choice but to pull a straight party lever and trust to luck.

Consolidation Objectives. It is sometimes said that complete consolidation is desirable for Philadelphia because city and county governments are wastefully duplicating each other's work. But duplication has never been a serious problem and is not now.

It is said also that consolidation would enable Philadelphians to discontinue some county functions that have outlived their usefulness. This is not correct either, for all the present activities of county officers would have to be continued.

What advocates of consolidation want is that all the functions of county officers be performed by city officers, and that as many as possible be performed by appointed city officers.

They want all agencies financed out of the city treasury to be subject to Council's budgetary control, to the city's centralized purchasing system, and to its merit system, including the prohibitions against political activity.

They realize that the Legislature may consider it to be the best interest of the state to grant some local agencies the right to act independently of the Mayor and Council, but they want it established beyond any possibility of contradiction that if the Legislature does not grant such rights they do not exist. They want to end the myth that county officers can override the Mayor and Council without authority from the Legislature.

The Courts. The consolidation amendment to the constitution that won a majority of the votes cast in Philadelphia in 1937, but was defeated by the rest of the state, was attacked as an effort to destroy the independence of the courts.

Despite propaganda to the contrary, the amendment did not seek to alter the method of selecting judges or magistrates, their terms of office, or their pay. It would not have touched the jurisdiction, organization, or procedure of any court.

Still, the courts might have been affected in several ways. They employ hundreds of workers who are not on the payrolls of any city or county officer and who, though paid from the city treasury, have not been subject to close city budgetary control and are exempt from the civil service provisions of the City Charter.

The 1937 amendment would have subjected court expenditures to as strict budgetary and merit system control as the Legislature chose to impose. This would have met the claim often heard that under the constitution the Legislature cannot subject the courts to such restraint.

How to Get It? Complete city-county consolidation cannot come so long as the state constitution withholds certain powers from the Legislature.

The most important constitutional obstacle is the provision that requires 11 county officers to be chosen by popular election.

The present constitutional ban on local and special laws to regulate cities and counties has also been anything but helpful. It has caused laws to be passed for Philadelphia either as a city or as a county. Such laws are not a neat fit for a partially merged city and county, and they do not promote the closer merging that is desirable. They emphasize differences between city and county which it would be better to minimize or extinguish.

Although the objectives of consolidation may not look very complicated, drawing the necessary constitutional amendment is a task for constitutional lawyers and skilled draftsmen.

County Functions Under Consolidation. When the Legislature has the necessary powers, how would it, or a home-rule charter commission, deal with the functions of the county officers.

That can hardly be predicted, but there are many possibilities, all backed by successful experience in one part of the country or another.

The charter-makers, one may be certain, would be reminded that the Mayor of New York City appoints (after civil service tests) the Sheriff, the Register of Deeds (Recorder in Philadelphia), and the Medical Examiner, an officer in the health department who performs the functions of Coroner; that since the most important powers of County Commissioners have been exercised by Mayors and Councilmen in Philadelphia since 1854, a simple transfer of the remaining responsibilities of the County Commissioners would make it possible to dispense with these three officials entirely; that the duties of the Register of Wills, Prothonotary, and Clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions might be given to one appointed clerk, who still would not have a very arduous job; that a city with a Treasurer doesn't need a Receiver of Taxes; that Cincinnati's Treasurer is appointed by its City Manager; and that if the Federal Government can get along with an appointed Treasurer, Philadelphia certainly could do so, too.

What to do about the Controller and District Attorney would be more puzzling, since many would urge that these two officers need the kind of independence conferred by popular election. Nevertheless, the chartermakers would probably be reminded that Cincinnati does quite well with an Auditor appointed by its Mayor (the President of City Council), and that New Jersey does very well with District Attorneys appointed by its Governor; also that no Federal auditing or prosecuting officers are chosen by popular election.

Great Economy and Efficiency. How much money will consolidation save the taxpayers of Philadelphia.

This question is often asked, but in the form in which it is stated there is no answer. Nobody can predict the cost of the present government in a future year. Still less can anybody predict the cost of a government which at best could not be given legal form for several years. Attempts to say how much would be saved are necessarily pure guess work at this time.

But change the form of the question and the answer will be different. If one asks whether a given grade of service could be provided by a consolidated city-county government at lower cost than by the present form, the answer is that substantial savings would obviously be possible.

Any such simplification of organization and control as is proposed would make for more efficient use of the tax dollar. The improved efficiency could be expected in the city as well as county departments, since the county departments now tend to demoralize the whole city-county service.

Citizens backing consolidation are aware, of course, that there is no magic in any mere form of government. The best possible governmental structure will not yield efficient and low cost government automatically. It will be wasteful and inefficient if the voters are indifferent.

The point is that a poor structure, such as Philadelphia now has, will balk the voters even when they are interested, and that nothing is so likely to make them lose interest as a structure which continually fails to translate their desires into action.

Supporters of consolidation want to give the voters a form of government that can be made as efficient as they want it to be.

Chapter II

HOME RULE

Home Rule has been defined as "those powers that are vested in cities by constitutional provisions, and more especially provisions that extend to cities the authority to frame and adopt their own charters."

Seven of the ten largest American cities now have operated under home rule charters for many years. They have given the home rule principle a thorough trial, and in every case have found the experience generally satisfactory. Not one of them is on record as abandoning home rule to return to the old system of city charters made and amended only by action of the State Legislature.

The facts are set forth in the table below:

| CITY | Estimated * Population 1948 | Date Home Rule Charter First Adopted | No. of Years of Operation Under Home Rule Charter |
|---------------------|-----------------------------------|--|--|
| New York | 7,871,000 | 1938 | 10 |
| Chicago | 3,600,000 | None | .. |
| Philadelphia | 2,115,000 | None | .. |
| Detroit | 1,921,000 | 1918 | 30 |
| Los Angeles | 1,921,000 | 1889 | 59 |
| Baltimore | 1,007,000 | 1918 | 30 |
| Cleveland | 963,000 | 1913 | 35 |
| St. Louis | 906,000 | 1876 | 72 |
| Boston | 826,000 | None | .. |
| San Francisco | 786,000 | 1899 | 48 |

* Population estimates are by the magazine "Sales Management."

For those interested in averages, it may be said that these seven cities have now operated under home rule charters for an average period of forty years each. Some of these cities have framed and adopted several home rule charters.

Philadelphians will notice, of course, that only two other very large cities, Chicago and Boston, are not operating under home rule. Chicago city officials have been seeking home rule for years; in fact, the 1940 Report of the City of Chicago Law Department was entitled "The Number 1 Municipal Law Problem: Home Rule."

A letter was written to the mayors of some large American cities asking whether their experience under home rule was generally more satisfactory than their experience under the older system of legislative control. The replies received to date, from officials directly involved, all indicate that home rule has been a practical success in their community. Excerpts from a few replies follow:

Detroit: "Detroit's experience under home rule charter extremely satisfactory. Believe I reflect feeling of 75% of Detroiters that home rule is better plan." (telegram).

Cleveland: "In answer to the inquiry in reference to Home Rule, Cleveland has enjoyed home rule for many years, and I believe it to be the ideal form of city government. Unfortunately, the Supreme Court, in recent decisions, has whittled away some of the cities' home rule powers."

Baltimore: "I am glad to know that Philadelphia is considering the home rule charter and certainly our experience here indicates that it is a desirable power to have not only for the City but for the legislature of your State. It means that the City will go less frequently to the legislature for local acts which the City itself can enact."

St. Louis: "On the whole we believe that our City government has been able to function more effectively under a home rule charter than would have been possible under a legislative charter."

San Francisco: "It has been so many years since we have been under any but the home rule charter that there is no practical experience to guide us. However, in comparison with other cities who have no charter and who operate under State law only, I believe that the charter form of government is better. It provides a flexibility that is not possible when operating under State laws only.

"I have no doubt but that the citizens of Philadelphia would much prefer the home rule charter form of government if it is given a trial. Properly drawn, to incorporate provisions for meeting the local problems which may be peculiar to Philadelphia and with proper provision for amendment thereof as conditions change, I believe you will have an instrument with which you will be much better satisfied than otherwise."

New York: "The cities of New York State are much better off since the adoption of the Home Rule amendment than prior to it."

Minneapolis: "Yes, the City of Minneapolis does operate under a home rule charter. I am convinced that the home rule charter is much more satisfactory than operating under legislative charters. I am sure that all political scientists would advocate the extension of the home rule principle to as many cities as possible. I heartily recommend it and trust that Pennsylvania will take the necessary steps to effectuate home rule charter government."

Kansas City, Missouri: "It would seem to me that a home rule charter is much to be preferred over a charter that is subject to amendment only by legislative action. It seems to me that the citizens of a particular city are far better qualified to determine the need and wisdom of charter changes than is a legislature composed of representatives from all over the State, most of whom can have little, if any, appreciation of the local needs of a given community."

Denver: "Briefly, I can say that Denver has been operating under the home rule charter for a great many years, and it has been considered to be a generally very satisfactory arrangement. The home rule charter in a very real sense is a protection to the interests of the people of Denver since our representation in the State legislature is not proportional to our population. This type of charter affords us a considerable degree of freedom of action. The problems of Denver are unique and it is entirely proper that the people of Denver have the right to make their own decisions concerning matters of local government and the legislative and executive branches of government be empowered to act without having to turn to State legislature for approval."

Seattle: "It comes as somewhat of a surprise to realize a city of the size of Philadelphia could still be operating under home rules and regulations prescribed by the legislature. Seattle has been a home rule city for a great many years, having operated under one home rule charter from 1911 until its repeal in 1946, when a new and more modern charter was adopted. The city's earliest experience with home rule goes back to the turn of the century. I do not believe there is any adequate substitute for home rule government of our city. Surely, if the people are competent to govern themselves in any sphere of government, it is at the municipal level. It would be unthinkable for this city to go back to the old type of government, dominated by the State legislature. I am sure public opinion here would not permit its consideration."

The precise meaning of home rule in any given State depends, of course, on the language of the constitution, the State statutes, the home rule charter, and the interpretations made by the courts in these matters when specific issues arise.

The main purpose of home rule is to permit the people of a community to determine for themselves their form of city government and the powers and duties of their city officials. At the same time it is commonly recognized that the State as a whole has a vital interest in certain matters which rise above purely a local interest.

For example, the people of the State as a whole are directly interested in honest elections in cities, because the choice of the Governor and other State officials is at stake. Because of this, it is believed that when the right to frame, adopt, amend and revise a home rule charter is granted to Philadelphia by State law, it should set forth certain restrictions of which the following are most important:

(1) Registration of voters and conduct of elections; (2) public schools; (3) certain subjects of taxation reserved to the State; (4) condemnation of property; (5) filing and collection of tax claims and sale of property for delinquent taxes; (6) limitations on the incurring of debt; and (7) public health matters affecting the welfare of adjacent communities.

Home rule charters customarily are amended either by submission of an amendment by the City Council to the city's voters, or the proposal of an amendment by a petition signed by a certain number of qualified electors of the city.

The advantages of home rule charters are as follows:

1. They relieve the State Legislature of the necessity of considering a multitude of controversial local issues, giving it more time to deal with problems of statewide importance.

2. The people of a city can adopt a form of government well suited to their needs.

3. Home rule encourages citizens to take a greater interest in their government. In their hands is the power to make needed improvements.

In 1922, the Constitution of Pennsylvania was amended by popular vote. The amendment reads in part "Cities, or cities of any particular class, may be given the right and power to frame and adopt their own charters and to exercise the powers and authority of local self-government, subject, however, to such restrictions, limitations, and regulations as may be imposed by the Legislature." To date, no law has been enacted by our General Assembly to grant home rule power to the City of Philadelphia.

In view of the fact that most large American cities operate under home rule charters, and that many years' experience under such charters has convinced the public officials in these cities that they are more satisfactory than the old legislative charter, it appears that now is the time for Philadelphia public officials and civic-minded citizens to consolidate their forces so as to obtain the right of home rule from our Legislature which meets next January.

To Sum Up: If Philadelphia now had a charter of the home rule type, the charter could be amended by a majority vote at a city election without the necessity, as at present, of going to Harrisburg or of trying to convince a great many State legislators who do not come from the area and who have many more important problems to solve than the purely local ones of the city of Philadelphia.

Chapter III

DEBT STABILIZATION*

High on any list of matters that are of great importance to the City of Philadelphia, and to its taxpayers, residents, and various business interests, is the subject of city debt.

Things That Should Be Prevented. Too much debt; too heavy a burden for interest and principal payments; excessive creation of debt in boom periods, when prices are high and labor is scarce; an exhausted general borrowing power in periods of business recession or depression, when prices are low and labor is plentiful—these are some of the things that should be guarded against, that should, if reasonably possible, be prevented from happening.

They Were Not Prevented. Unfortunately, all of these things have happened to Philadelphia. They have all happened in recent years, and taxpayers, residents, and business have paid, and will continue to pay, heavily for the lack of caution, wisdom, and foresight that brought them about.

An Orgy of Borrowing. In the 13 years 1920-1932 the city borrowed the huge sum of $428,830,500 through the issuance of bonds for new expenditures, a yearly average of $32,987,000. More than half of this was borrowed in the 4 years 1925-1928 alone, at an annual rate of $54,633,500.

No General Borrowing Capacity From 1932 to 1944. During that 13-year period of 1920-1932 the city went so heavily in debt, and authorized the issuance of such a large amount of bonds, that it found itself overboard on its general borrowing capacity in 1932. The city's general debt (meaning net debt for purposes other than self-supporting projects, like the water-works and the Frankford Elevated Railway) was so large that the city continued to be overboard until March, 1944. For 12 years the city was without power to authorize the issuance of bonds for general (non-self-supporting) public improvements. The most that it was able to do for such improvements was to issue $29,950,000 of bonds that had been authorized for specific purposes before 1930. (The city was able to do this much only because the courts have ruled that bonds once legally authorized may be issued even after the general borrowing capacity has been wiped out.) Besides these previously authorized bonds, the only bonds issued for public improvements were a $7,000,000 block of the $18,000,000 authorized in 1940 for the city's self-supporting water-supply system. Altogether, only $36,950,000 of bonds were issued by the city for public improvements in the 13 years 1933-1945—a yearly average of $2,842,000, just slightly over one-twelfth of the yearly average of the preceding 13 years.

Some of the Bad Effects. As a result of the excessive incurrence of debt in the boom years preceding the early 1930's the city was unable to undertake more than a tiny amount of public improvements during the 13 years 1933-1945. Accordingly, it was not able to take advantage of the low prices and the plentiful supply of labor available during most of that 13-year period; it was not in position to help more than a trifle to reduce the heavy unemployment or to soften the long depression that occurred in those years; nor was it able to secure its rightful share of federal grants for various public improvements, because it could not provide the money needed to met the city's required share of their cost.

Combination of Two Basic Faults Responsible. Now, this piling up of debt in times of prosperity, and having little or no borrowing power for use in times of recession, is the result of two things.

First, there is a strong tendency, and a rather consistent practice, for the city to borrow close to the legal limit when any borrowing capacity is available.

Second, the base upon which the general debt limit is calculated (the assessed valuation of taxable property, both realty and personalty) fluctuates widely, giving large, highly irregular increases in the city's general debt limit, or borrowing capacity, in boom periods, and reducing that debt limit by large, highly irregular amounts in periods of declining business and prices. Consequently, the city enters a recessionary period with little, if any, free general borrowing capacity, and decreases in the general debt limit resulting from declines in the debt limit base put the city deeper and deeper in the hole—more and more overboard on its borrowing capacity.

Change Needed in Debt Limit Base. How best to correct this bad situation is not simple. Yet correction is sorely needed. Some change in the debt limit base clearly is called for—some change that will greatly reduce the size of the annual increases and decreases in the general debt limit, that will flatten out the yearly fluctuations in that limit and thus make it more stable.

Beneficial Results of Proposals for Stabilizing City's General Debt Limit. Although none of the proposals for stabilizing the city's general debt limit that have merited serious consideration could insure that the city would have some general borrowing power every year, in depressions as well as in prosperous periods, all of them would tend to keep the debt limit down in periods of prosperity and hold it up in periods of recession. All of them would give the city a much more stable debt limit than it has had, or could have, under the present constitutional provisions; all would provide a much smaller spread between the maximum and minimum limits. Had any of them been in effect from 1920 on, the city would not have been able to create anywhere near as much debt in the 1920's as it did, and in the years following 1932 it would have been able to borrow much more money for public improvements than it was permitted to do.

The Present Debt Limit. Philadelphia's debt-incuring powers are governed by section 8 of Article 9 of the State constitution. That section, as last amended in November, 1920, and as interpreted by the courts, empowers Philadelphia to incur debt, as defined below, up to 10 per cent of the last assessed valuation of taxable property, both real estate and personal property.

This limit of 10 per cent (which is variously called the total debt limit, the total general debt limit, the electoral debt limit, the electoral general debt limit, or simply the debt limit or the general debt limit—also the total borrowing capacity, the total general borrowing capacity, the electoral borrowing capacity, the electoral general borrowing capacity, or simply the borrowing capacity or the general borrowing capacity) is a general debt limit, applicable to non-self-supporting debt. Self-supporting debt is not limited. The debt limit applies to the net amount of non-self-supporting debt—that is, to the gross amount of non-self-supporting debt outstanding, plus the gross amount of non-self-supporting debt authorized but not yet incurred, less any sinking-fund assets applicable to such gross amounts, and less any other funds available within the year for or toward the payment of such gross amounts.

Self-supporting debt (meaning debt outstanding, also debt authorized but not yet incurred, for completely self-supporting projects) is deductible from, or not included in, the debt chargeable against the city's debt limit. A completely self-supporting project is one that produces net revenue, over and above all expenses of operation, maintenance, etc., other than depreciation, equal to, or in excess of, the annual debt charges for principal and interest on the debt for such project (including, though sometimes with the help of estimated new or additional net revenues, the estimated debt charges on debt authorized but not yet incurred). The city's water-supply system, the Frankford Elevated Railway, and the city's sewerage and sewerage treatment system are completely self-supporting projects, so none of the debt for them, whether outstanding or merely authorized, is chargeable against the city's debt limit.

Fluctuations in the Debt Limit. Since the debt limit is a percentage of the last assessed valuation of taxable property, that limit moves up and down in direct proportion to the annual changes in the assessed valuation. In 1920, the valuation was $2,635,097,960.80 and, the debt limit was $263,509,796.08. In 10 years the valuation and the debt limit rose to their all-time high amounts of 1930, when the valuation was $4,787,602,031.42 and the debt limit was $478,760,203.14. Thus, from 1920 to 1930 the debt limit increased by $215,260,407.06, or 81.69 per cent. From the record high amounts of 1930, the valuation declined to $3,065,860,311.86 in 1945, and the debt limit of $306,586,031.18. The decrease in the debt limit from the peak figure of 1930 to the subsequent low figure of 1945 was $172,174,171.96, or 35.96 per cent. Some of the larger annual increases and decreases in the general debt limit since 1920 were the following:

|------|-------|----------|--------------|--------|
| 1921 | | increase | $20,962,000 | 7.95% |
| 1924 | | increase | $37,736,000 | 12.40% |
| 1925 | | increase | $20,788,000 | 6.08% |
| 1926 | | increase | $33,834,000 | 9.32% |
| 1927 | | increase | $23,446,000 | 5.91% |
| 1928 | | increase | $25,630,000 | 6.10% |
| 1929 | | increase | $20,970,000 | 4.71% |
| 1932 | | decrease | $27,266,000 | 5.72% |
| 1933 | | decrease | $33,381,000 | 7.42% |
| 1934 | | decrease | $25,374,000 | 6.10% |
| 1935 | | decrease | $18,524,000 | 4.74% |
| 1938 | | decrease | $16,863,000 | 4.65% |
| 1947 | | increase | $23,728,000 | 7.48% |

Means of Stabilizing the General Debt Limit. There are several ways in which the city's general debt limit could be made more stable. One way would be to base the debt limit on an average of the annual assessed valuations over a long period of years, for example, 10 years. Obviously, such a debt limit would fluctuate much less than one that moves up and down in direct proportion to the annual changes in the assessed valuations.

A further improvement would be to eliminate from the debt limit base the assessed valuation of taxable personal property, since that valuation fluctuates much more sharply than the valuation of taxable real estate does, and to make the limit a percentage of the average annual assessed valuation of taxable real estate over a period of, say, 10 years. To compensate for the elimination of personal property, a high percentage would be used for calculating the debt limit than would be used where both real estate and personal property valuations form the base.

A still greater degree of stabilization could be achieved if, in addition to basing the general debt limit solely on an average valuation of taxable real estate over a long period, a simple change were made in the provision for excluding revenue-producing debt from the percentage debt limit. Under the present constitutional provisions, debt for a project that is fully self-supporting is not chargeable against the general debt limit, but if a project ceases to be self-supporting, by even a small amount, the whole of that project's debt immediately becomes a charge against the debt limit. Thus, a small decrease in net revenue might cause a large amount of previously self-supporting debt to become chargeable against the general debt limit, and perhaps not only wipe out any existing borrowing capacity, but also put the city considerably overboard on its borrowing capacity.

Sudden fluctuations of this nature, or increased charges (for example, for water) to keep the debt self-supporting, could be avoided by making all revenue-producing debt deductible from the debt chargeable against the debt limit to the extent that it is self-supporting.

Chapter IV

CONSOLIDATION OF REGISTRATION COMMISSION AND COUNTY BOARD OF ELECTIONS

In Philadelphia our overlapping election machinery results in the highest annual cost per registered voter of any major city in the United States. We have two separate agencies to do the work that should be handled by one. The registration of voters in Philadelphia is considered a separate and distinct function beyond the jurisdiction of the County Board of Elections. This can be compared to having two conductors on every street car; one to receive the fare and pass out transfers and the other one to ring up the fare.

To register voters in Philadelphia, there is a Registration Commission of 5 members, a special counsel and a permanent staff of 141 employees. The Commission spends approximately $486,000 annually, including a $382,000 payroll.

To conduct elections we have a three-man board, a special counsel and a permanent staff of 80 employees with a payroll of more than a quarter million dollars. In every other large city in the country, the registration of voters and the conduct of elections are considered related functions and are handled within one department under the jurisdiction of a small commission.

New York City, for example, has approximately three and a half million voters. The Board of Elections handles the registration of voters, the conduct of elections and all other related duties with a staff of 73 permanent employees under the administration of a four-man commission. The total cost is $362,360.

In Philadelphia we support a three-man board, a five-man commission and 232 employees to provide the same services for approximately one million electors at an annual payroll cost of over $632,000. These figures, it should be pointed out, do not include the extra help that is used in both New York and Philadelphia during seasonal peak periods.

Since the work of registering voters and conducting elections in Philadelphia is seasonable and largely confined to short periods of time within the year, the consolidation of these duties under one administrative body would effect real economies through the year-round employment of a permanent staff of the now existing two boards.

For example, during the election season the County Board of Elections is largely concerned with the distribution and filing of nomination papers, watchers' certificates, etc., the delivery of election equipment to be used at the polling places on Election Day and the recount of the vote immediately after the election.

In the long period of time that lapses between elections there is little work to be done by this large permanent staff of 80 men.

Between the election periods the Registration Commission registers electors, corrects and prepares voting lists for the next election. It is apparent, therefore, that if these two large permanent staffs of employees were consolidated under one administrative body fewer would be needed and they could be kept busy throughout the year.

In addition to economies, better administration and enforcement of election and registration laws should result. Consolidation of these overlapping departments in our election system relates only to the City of Philadelphia and is an important part of the legislative program for 1940.

The Legislature can help solve this problem by consolidating these duties under a three-man Board of Elections or a Commission of Elections.

December 3, 1948

Senator Weldon B. Heyburn
Concordville
Delaware County, Pa.

Dear Senator Heyburn:

I note the proposed hearing by the Joint State Government Commission on remedial legislation for Philadelphia to be held on December 15th. As I shall be away on that date, I take the liberty of writing to you and sending a copy of this letter to the other members of the Commission and to enclose a copy of my book "Demand for Action" which proposes a schedule of essential legislation for the good of Philadelphia and includes actual drafts of the bills recommended. I might add that no other such drafts have been prepared, so far as I know, and that these drafts have been made as a result of ten years study and preparation, and are based initially on the work of the Philadelphia Charter Commission, of which I was Chairman, created by Act of the Legislature in 1937. The legalities have been approved by eminent counsel.

Permit me to make the following pertinent observations:

(1) That the Civil Service suggestions, I believe, are approved emphatically by the great majority of the people of the City of Philadelphia but that they are unalterably opposed, wrongfully, in my opinion, by both political organizations who obviously continue to desire patronage to support the organization in power regardless of the effect on the efficiency of public administration. It has been amply demonstrated that large responsibility for the inexcusable maladministration of the City and County governments rests on the unbridled use of public office to sustain the political organizations, without any compensatory reward to the public welfare.

(2) The same observations apply to the retention of the Registration Commission.

(3) There is no argument against City-County Consolidation. Opposition rests, in my opinion, entirely on this same patronage curse.

(4) The maladjusted government of the City and its misadministration can, in my opinion, be corrected by the reconstruction of the government proposed in this suggested program, including as one of the chief legs of the structure a new Home Rule Charter. As the Home Rule provisions of the proposed Charter constitute in themselves an enabling act under the home rule amendment of the constitution, the boon to the people of Philadelphia of a charter granted by the legislature and to be submitted to a referendum vote in the general election in November, 1949, should be the objective sought by the forces striving for good government.

As these matters are intricate in detail I have thought it might be of use to your Commission to have these studies and this point of view. I expect to send a copy of this book to every member of the legislature which will give an opportunity in the leisure before the legislature meets for the members to acquaint themselves more intimately with these problems.

Trusting that you will give consideration to these thoughts, please believe me,

Very sincerely,

THOMAS EVANS

Dear Mr. Evans:

I appreciate your sending me a copy of your book "Demand for Action" which I am reading with a great deal of interest. I regret that due to your absence from town it will not be possible for you to attend the hearing on the 15th.

With kind personal regards, I am

DEMAND FOR ACTION FOR A NEW PHILADELPHIA GOVERNMENT

Introduction

Then conquer we must, for our cause it is just . . .
The Star-Spangled Banner

Not that we love our present Philadelphia of "unmatched charm among the great cities of the nation" less, but that we would love it more with a reconstructed Home Rule government, and honest and efficient municipal administration. We have suffered from an abortive, wasteful, and unnecessary dual City-County government for more than three quarters of a century; we have squandered many hundreds of millions of dollars through the incompetence and dishonesty of many patronage-laden administrations and are at present in the vortex of a flood of disgraceful revelations of wholesale corruption, defalcations, mismanagement, and neglect of duty of a large number of public officials and employees of the City-County governments. It is scarcely believable that the people of our City can have tolerated and repeatedly elected high officials whose acknowledged conception of responsibility of public office as a public trust is limited to the avoidance of the actual commission of punishable crime. Not only is the efficiency and competence of the administration of our local government at a very low ebb, but a decent moral conception of duty owed to the public is sadly lacking.

This bad housekeeping is due in large measure to the badly worn and outmoded governmental machinery used. Loose and sloppy administration is one of the inevitable accompaniments of an archaic dual government and an overpatched Charter. "A new broom sweeps clean" is an axiom. But the broom must be a good one and the wielder must be reliable, trustworthy, and industrious.

FOR PHILADELPHIA TO HAVE GOOD GOVERNMENT THERE MUST BE A RECONSTRUCTED GOVERNMENT. The shocking revelations of the day call for the punishment of the guilty without doubt. But invoking the penalty of the law upon a few who have been guilty of crimes, and showing up the incompetency, incapacity, and failure in performance of duty on the part of many officials and employees of the dual government, are not enough. These wrongdoers, these people who have been neglected or misled and so failed in duty, have cast refection upon many thousands who would be faithful and conscientious public servants under a reconstructed and modernized government. These innocent but badly led civil servants should not suffer more from the misdeeds of the others, if they are willing to change bad ways and methods, which have been part of a bad system, to good ways and methods, which will follow the installation and administration of a good new system. Those parts and things in the present system of government which are good should not be and have not been changed in these suggested laws. Under a revised system the standard of administrative performance would perforce be tighter and more efficient. The holes and breaks in the present system would be closed so far as can be foreseen to prevent, as far as possible, maladministration under the new and improved framework of government.

To these ends and with these objectives the program suggested in this volume is submitted for the study, scrutiny, alteration, revision, and, it is to be hoped, adoption in such final form as may be agreed upon by the proponents of a new structure of government, for submission to the Legislature for enactment at the first session of 1949.

The preparation of this program with definitive drafts has been undertaken as a gratuitous task, partly because no one else has volunteered to do so but mainly because of a firm conviction on the part of the preparer and his friends and associates that it is essential to have actual suggested drafts of the four Acts included in the program which can be submitted to the consideration of representatives of the public at large, so that out of such material a large committee truly representative of the people of Philadelphia can present recommendations to the Legislature. Certainly fundamental laws of this import should spring from the mass of private citizens without self-interests to serve rather than directly or indirectly from holders of either public or party office.

For these reasons the undersigned has had the temerity to submit this report not only to the Philadelphia Committee on Public Affairs, of whose Committee for Philadelphia Governmental Reconstruction he is the Chairman, but also to the Chamber of Commerce, of which he is a member, and to other organizations, notably the Committee of Seventy, the Pennsylvania Economy League and the Bureau of Municipal Research, to the support of which organizations he has been a modest contributor, and to the public at large.

Much of the groundwork for this report was taken from the work done by the Philadelphia Charter Commission of 1937-40, of which the undersigned was Chairman. However, the pattern has been greatly changed to meet altered conditions and to allow for the lapse of time. The march of the years and the lessons taken from present revelations have induced such changes to make the program proposed as modern and up to date as possible.

CHAPTER I

Objective—Good Government for Philadelphia!

In our type of Municipal Government, policy is determined by the City Council on advice and approval of the Chief Executive, the Mayor, Administration is the task of the Mayor and the Departments and Agencies of the Government.

Administration is only as effective as the administrators are capable and efficient. A loyal, trained, devoted, and efficient personnel is the key to good administration.

For good government we must have an adequate and well-constructed framework of law, a capable legislature and executive and an efficient personnel under Civil Service. Unity of these elements produces truly government for the people by the people. It is said that good government rests on two pillars, consent of the governed and efficient management. Again good government has been epitomized in Sun Yat-sen's summarization of the Declaration of Independence:

The People shall own;
The People shall control;
The People shall enjoy.

For Philadelphia, therefore, to redeem the City from the chaotic mismanagement under which it now flounders so tragically, a new and modernized governmental structure is the first essential. To remedy wasteful, inefficient, and patronage-infested dual government of the City and County identical area an amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania merging the Philadelphia County government into the City government is required. This measure is termed City-County Consolidation. This merger, so long needed but vainly sought, requires the authority of two Legislatures before submission of the Amendment to a vote of the people of the State. It is possible, if the proposal be approved by the Legislature meeting in January 1949 and by the succeeding Legislature Meeting in January 1951, to submit the proposed Amendment to the electorate of the State at the first general election in 1951. If approved at the polls by a majority of those voting on the question, Consolidation would be an accomplished fact at long last after a useless and regrettable delay since 1874. During these seventy-four years the taxpayers of Philadelphia will have wasted on senseless duplication of government no less than one hundred and fifty millions of dollars.

At the same time that City-County Consolidation begins to grind through the legislative mill, the Legislature of 1949 should grant to the City a new Charter, modernizing and streamlining the now outworn Charter, and providing for the inclusion of the County functions automatically in the appropriate City Administrative Departments when the City-County merger becomes effective. Under the Home Rule Amendment to the Constitution, such a new Charter grant by the Legislature would become effective when approved by the voters of the City at the first General Election in 1949 or at a Special Election called for the particular purpose.

Just as essential to the creation of an adequate and sufficient reconstruction of the government of Philadelphia would be the passage by the Legislature of 1949 of Civil Service extension to the County offices and abolition of the useless and patronage-burdened Registration Commission, with a transfer of its desirable functions to the County Commissioners. These four measures would, when Consolidation finally completed the program, give to Philadelphia a reconstructed government of the latest model and of the last word in efficiency, judged by the best standards of Municipal Government in the United States.

Despite all banal generalities to the effect that government is no better than the men who administer it, obviously the framework of the government is a most vital first requisite to good administration. The best of personnel is fatally handicapped by having a loose-jointed and wobbly vehicle to administer, but even with feeble administration an excellent governmental structure greatly guards the public interest. Following the adoption of a splendid new structure of government itself, Philadelphia can and, after its near breakdown of government in recent years and the open scandals revealed in the last few months, no doubt will repudiate its present ne'er-do-wells and send to the posts in the new government men of high character and tested capacity. With the new machinery in good, competent, and reliable hands, Philadelphia may then look forward to an Era of Progress and Good Will such as it has never experienced in its history.

The stake at issue is the welfare of the people. The enemy is sloth, corruption, incompetence, and a monstrous political patronage at the expense of the public at large. A free expression of public opinion will indubitably compel prompt and favorable enactment of this legislative program of four essentials. The General Assembly can do no less than thus serve the people of the State's largest City. The traditions and history of our City loom large in the eyes of the world as representative of the birth and development of our great Republic. We must no longer be denied our right to enjoy the benefits of good local government. We must insist that our Legislature without further delay grant us these remedies for the manifold abuses which we have so long suffered and to which we are still subjected.

The good people of Philadelphia must be articulate and adamant in demanding such action from the Legislature and Governor. Ten years ago we begged the Legislature for this relief, but were denied. The answer to our plea was "Let well enough alone." It is glaringly apparent now that the corruption, inefficiency, incompetency, and betrayal of the public trust charged by the proponents of those remedial steps were only too true. The half had not been told.

Again let our plea to our elected lawmakers be in the words of the Apostle, "Or what man is there of you whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?"

The aims of these proposed measures are: to restore good and efficient government to Philadelphia; to correct current abuses and make a recurrence as difficult as possible; to revive the expiring merit system, not only to furnish a trained and capable personnel, but also to eliminate political favoritism and patronage; to simplify and straighten out along functional lines a topsy-turvy fungus-like departmental growth and confusion; to eliminate duplication and effect wholesome economies; and finally to bestow Home Rule and self-determination of local government on the community where national representative government had its birth; those are the chief objectives of this program.

True economy in the cost of government flows from the use of adequate governmental machinery by a capable local legislature—City Council—and by a competent manager—the Mayor—and, under the Mayor, by administrators equal to the task of reaching the highest standard of performance.

CHAPTER II

Legislative Program—1949

Legislation needed to reconstruct the government of Philadelphia, as has been suggested, is comprehended in four proposed Acts:

I. AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF PENNSYLVANIA MERGING THE COUNTY GOVERNMENT OF PHILADELPHIA INTO THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

II. GRANT BY THE LEGISLATURE OF A NEW CHARTER SUBJECT TO APPROVAL BY THE PEOPLE OF PHILADELPHIA AT A REFERENDUM ELECTION

III. A STOPGAP ACT TO SUBJECT THE COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA TO CIVIL SERVICE UNTIL CONSOLIDATION IS EFFECTED, AND THE CIVIL SERVICE PROVISIONS OF THE NEW CHARTER TAKE HOLD OVER THE UNIFIED GOVERNMENT.

IV. REPEAL OF THE REGISTRATION COMMISSION ACT AND TRANSFER OF ITS FUNCTIONS TO THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS, WHO WILL, UPON CONSOLIDATION BEING EFFECTED, BECOME CITY COMMISSIONERS.

These four measures are essential to the procurement of good government for Philadelphia. To omit either of the first two would be to defeat utterly the effort to replace the present outgrown and inadequate dual government with a modernized Home Rule unified structure of government for both City and County. To omit the imposition of Civil Service on County offices would be to invite a continuance of the misgovernment and abuses in administration which permeate both City and County governments at present. The disclosures of the past few months afford ample and convincing proof of such an assertion. Lastly the fourth suggested Act, which would dispense with a useless and expensive agency, the Registration Commission, would place the elections machinery where it properly belongs, in the hands of the County Commissioners. The present Commission is a glaring example of an unnecessary multiplication of agencies to perform one general function of government. It is in the nature of a supernumerary on the Ship of State and wastes a very substantial amount of tax money.

CHAPTER III

Arguments for the Program

In an examination of this suggested program two major questions present themselves. First—Does Philadelphia need this reconstructed government? and—second—If so, who should frame the reconstruction? Debate on the merits of these important points should be outspoken, fearless, and free of political partisanship.

As to the need for this remedial legislation, it would seem that the evidence is irrefutable in favor of the program. The record tells a sad story of incompetency, indolence, corruption, and the insolence of power on the part of the political organization which has ruled Philadelphia for several generations uninterruptedly. The record speaks with evidence of almost equal guilt on the part of the public conscience which has complacently shut its eyes and ears to this misgovernment and voted for a continuance of the same regime of control time after time, giving no later than last November what has been described by the present Mayor as a vote of confidence and a mandate of approval to the present administration, which is now struggling with half a dozen probes, each revealing almost daily new depths of dishonesty, carelessness, incompetence, and betrayals of the public trust. Let us hope that the public conscience can be purged of being a guilty accessory both before and after the crime by insistence that a system that permitted such lax administration be completely modernized and remodeled to prevent so far as possible a recurrence of these events and that the remodeling be done by persons not connected directly or indirectly with the maladministrators.

At the risk of over-reiteration our citizens should be reminded again of the findings of the Gates Commission in 1938, of the Philadelphia Charter Commission (1937-40), of the Economy League (Wolfe Report, 1945), of the Committee of Seventy on many occasions, and of publications such as "What Price Boss Rule?" (1945), "Our Fair City," etc., all of which attempted to rouse Philadelphia from its Rip Van Winkle sleep of decay and warn it of the virtual orgy of misgovernment going on under its very eyes. Verily, there are none so blind as those who will not see! But at long last the screen has been pushed aside sufficiently by the Committee of 15, by the Grand Jury, by the newspapers and others to reveal the cesspool of corruption, mismanagement, incompetence, and maladministration that exists in many of the City and County Departments. It is an amazing story of betrayal of public trust and has shocked and outraged the public. Still it is nothing new and has been going on a long time. Only those who run would not read?

The moral of this sordid story is that a loose system of dual City and County government, which permitted this state of affairs to exist, should be reconstructed at the first opportunity, and that first opportunity is at the session of the new Legislature in January 1949.

Nothing short of the program of the Four Major Acts described above can give us adequate relief. Following on this reconstruction of government so effected—it is the responsibility of the people to elect good, honest, competent, reliable, and capable officials to administer such a model new Municipal Government. Would that a great warning could be emblazoned at the Masthead of our Municipal Ship of State, constantly before the eyes of every citizen—"Constant Vigilance by the Citizens Is the Price of Good Government in Our Town of Philadelphia. Be Vigilant, Vote and Vote Intelligently."

Every effort will be made this Fall of 1948 to lull our public conscience into a coma of indifference about our City and County misgovernment. It will be argued that the Republican ranks must be closed, and that our Municipal house can be cleaned in the next year or two. There will be the fatal cry of Manana—Tomorrow! The cry that makes cowards of those who yield to its seductiveness! There will be many who will counsel delay and caution. Rome was not built in a day, they will say. Let us remember that Rome fell in a night to the Barbarians because it tolerated corruptions of its government. Others will advise a moderate program of revision of the present Charter and say that Consolidation and other changes will come later. Still others will excuse the administration, say that the present officials have been taught their lesson, and all will go well in the future. There will be a thousand and one impediments and objections and excuses and pleas for another chance, all seeking to delay and finally to defeat any real betterment in our structure of government and its administration. Most of this policy of Delay and Linger, Divided and Defeat, will have at the bottom one idea—the protection and preservation of political patronage and the same sort of maladministration we now suffer. It looked as though we would have government reconstruction in the Charter fight in 1939; the Gallup poll recorded more than 75 per cent of the people in favor, yet the cause was lost totally. Those who defeated it were those who have controlled and enjoyed political patronage during the intervening ten years, and who are responsible for the misdeeds and incompetency now being daily unfolded.

The public has been shocked particularly by the thefts and defalcations of public funds recently revealed, but there is no realization evident of the relative unimportance of these losses of many hundreds of thousands as compared with the huge and almost inestimable losses of tax moneys due to contracts awarded without fair competitive bidding, to payrolls padded with pay for drones, political henchmen, and nepotism, to skimmed performance of contracts for public works, and to many like frauds, of which there is the strongest moral probability although legal proof is exceedingly hard to produce. The pilfering of the people's pocketbooks is a moral certainty but has been covered up by experts. There is good reason to believe that even a power probe of the Seabury type could unearth only a fraction of the waste of the public's money by the politicians in the last twenty-five years. It has been estimated to exceed two hundred and fifty millions of dollars.

These stupendous losses are due to "those things which have been done which should not have been done" but do not take into account almost equal losses because of "things which have not been done which should have been done." The nature of these latter losses resides in such categories as taxes, fees, and rents which through incompetence or negligence or favoritism or crooked dealing have not been collected or have been rebated or compromised or defaulted, or if collected have been stolen. Huge losses in revenue have resulted from inequitable assessments and from plain neglect, indolence, and inefficiency of the agencies charged with such collection duties.

It would, of course, be greatly to the public interest to recover as much as possible of such losses, but the lapse of time, lack of evidence, and losses resulting from inefficiency and neglect of duty prevent substantial recoveries, unfortunately. Very much more important is the obligation and responsibility of the Legislature to grant this program of remedial legislation to prevent the recurrence of all of these losses. Much can be done by revamping the City's governmental system. Still more can be accomplished by setting up a governmental form which will bring about a vastly more efficient Civil Service personnel and encourage the election of better equipped men for the elective posts in the new government.

Let no one doubt that without the reconstructed government the ills and abuses of which we are now partly aware would soon take over again. The only way to regain good government is to sweep away the old system with its failures and shortcomings and put into its place the new remodeled government embodied in this program. The Legislature of 1949 cannot again postpone or deny this boon to the people of Philadelphia; they cannot permit such a tragic betrayal of Pennsylvania's largest and the nation's most historic City by failure to respond in full measure to this cry for justice and help in our great City's hour of need. The opportunity to express its will at the referendum vote on this program at the first General Election after the Legislature passes the suggested Acts will certainly give overwhelmingly unmistakable proof of approval of the Acts.

The most casual reader of the Philadelphia newspapers can have not even a shred of doubt that City-County Consolidation, a new Charter, simplification of administration, and Civil Service rehabilitation are absolute necessities to the institution of good government in Philadelphia. No person not interested in the perpetuation of political patronage in the government of Philadelphia can put up any defense of the present setup, can offer one sound argument for its continuance.

Now comes the time to answer the second query posed in this chapter—Who should prepare the terms of the remedial legislation suggested? Should the authors be those who have a selfish interest in ripping the heart and life out of the program, and in perpetuating the substance of the present system? No intelligent and honest person could take that position. Just as the Federal Constitution framers and those who have written the Constitutions of the States have been men selected primarily because of their unselfish and disinterested devotion to the cause of good government, so should the private citizens of Philadelphia who have no official positions or connections with the City-County governments or the political party organizations or with the State or National governments or State or National political party organizations consult together and agree on such a legislative program. Having so formulated recommendations to the Governor and Legislature, these citizens and citizens' good-government organizations should organize and press their cause upon the candidates for the new Legislature, and then upon the Governor and Legislature when it convenes in January 1949.

This is the cause of the private citizen and of the taxpayer and also may most properly be espoused by the public officeholder, but the framing of the Acts to be recommended to the Legislature should be done by citizens who are above suspicion of selfish or partisan interest. That's what was done by the Fathers in Philadelphia in 1787, and in Philadelphia in the Charter movement of 1919, and what should be done and can be done in Philadelphia in 1948. In 1939 the petitions of 125,000 citizens in favor of a grant of the new Charter, subject to referendum approval at a General Election in the City, were laid before the Legislature. This Fall there may well be double or triple such petitioners and then not represent more than a fraction of those who favor these reforms. There will be without shadow of doubt outpouring of support from every quarter for a program properly embodying the hopes and aspirations of our citizenry for good government.

This program is put forward as a suggestion flowing from civic interest, study, and careful preparation, as a recommendation to the citizenship at large, with a view to its adoption in substance by a great movement of public for submission in turn to the Legislature as a governmental reconstruction which the people of Philadelphia ask for from the Legislature and the Governor, and, in the case of the City-County Amendment, from the people of Pennsylvania.

The Home Rule provisions written into the new Charter make it possible, within constructed limitations and reservations made by the Legislature, for Philadelphians to vote on revisions of the Charter that may be proposed. Consequently, while this proposed draft may not meet the approval of all, those who have different ideas about certain provisions may propose changes which may be adopted by the electorate if the proponents of such revisions can present arguments which gain public approval. It is reasonable to unite in support of a definitive program on which the great majority of citizens can agree in principle, even though in some details opinions may differ. In other words, let us sink possible differences over some minor details in unity in general principle over the program as a whole. Hence such great controversial issues as Proportional Representation and the vesting of executive power in a City Manager have been omitted and left to the debates and determinations of future years.

The Charter makers of 1919 did a great job of reconstructing the then City government, which needed revision and modernization. Nearly thirty years have passed, and conditions have changed so as to demand again a remaking of the local Constitution. It was the misfortune of the Charter makers in 1919 that City-County Consolidation could not be effected. It is the good fortune of 1948 that the opportunity is here to bring about Consolidation and to merge this ridiculously cumbersome, inordinately wasteful and innately inefficient dual government into one well-integrated system. Our opportunity is great; the public conscience is aroused, the necessity for firm action is realized; there is a general agreement in principle as to the kind of government we want; let us add a determination that we are going to have the good governmental system we are entitled to, and let us present with united front an undeniable petition to the Legislature which that body can and will recognize as our birthright and proper heritage and freely and willingly bestow upon us.

It is unnecessary at this point to discuss at further length the third and fourth proposals. Drafts of these four Acts have been carefully prepared and approved by eminent counsel as legally formed and constitutional. These drafts are appended, and except for repealers are ready for introduction into the House and Senate. God speed them in the interest of the public!

The first, second, and third proposals are indispensable, as has been urged. Full treatment by way of information and discussion respecting them demands that each be given full review.

CHAPTER IV

THE FIGHT FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT MUST BE NON-PARTISAN!

Where there is no vision, the people perish.
—Proverbs XXIX

There are certain basic and fundamental principles underlying the Constitution of the United States. These principles are recognized as non-partisan. In present-day two party politics, there is little claim by men the most prejudiced that the Federal Constitution in whole or part is Republican or Democratic. Thanks to these fundamentals, the Constitution is regarded as the bulwark of our liberties, the guardian of our way of life. In just the same way the Charter of our City should be non-partisan. The policy of the administration in power under the Charter is one that may be a bone of contention between the parties. Under the draft of the Charter suggested, it is indeed contemplated that the elective offices shall be filled by a choice of the electors from the nominees of the political parties. Of course should the people decide under Home Rule provisions to change the method of choosing certain officers, and if such change, where required should be approved by the Legislature, such office or offices might be filled otherwise than by party nomination; but as arranged in the appended draft the Charter, while in itself non-partisan, does provide that the administrators shall be those nominees of the political parties who shall be elected.

Philadelphia has unfortunately been the victim of party antagonisms and intra-party warfare in every approach to City-County Consolidation and to the other features of the program advocated for these many weary years of deteriorating governmental administration. Surely in this year 1948 it must be plain to every voter that party politics should not interfere in this desperately wanted relief. However, to make the point—and it is a vitally important one—crystal clear, the liberty is taken of quoting pertinent paragraphs from Chapter 5 of "What Price Boss Rule?"—

The record of municipal government in America is the poorest chapter in our political history. Scandals and corruption mar the stories of the growth and development of most of our large cities. New York had its shameful Tweed and Tammany domination for many decades. San Francisco, Kansas City, New Orleans, Cincinnati, and other large cities for long periods were subject to the rule of corrupt and disdainful political bosses. Bryce, in his famous "The American Commonwealth," scores as our greatest failure our municipal governments, ruled by vicious and predatory political gangs. These local machines have always adopted the label of one or the other of the two great political parties. Sometimes the gang in power is under the Republican label; more often it has called itself Democratic.

New York threw off the Tammany yoke, elected La Guardia, and adopted a new Charter with a Council elected by the Proportional Representation method of voting during the middle 'thirties, and has made gigantic strides in its service to its people in the last ten years. The cleanliness of that city, its fine housekeeping, its splendid city services, its progressive spirit and attractiveness, its good management, and the interest and pride of its citizens in the great metropolis speak volumes in comparison to Philadelphia, with its dilapidated services, unpalatable water, unkempt streets and its spirit of progress almost broken in its apparently hopeless battle against its tyrannical machine, in whose deadly grip it has squirmed for nearly three-quarters of a century. Who will say that having an anti-Tammany Mayor in New York hurt the National Democratic Party from 1932 to 1944? Who can say truthfully that the Machine control in Philadelphia helped the Republican Party nationally in 1936, 1940, and 1944?

Cincinnati turned out the so-called "Republican" gang over 15 years ago, but Cincinnati has remained faithful to the Republican Party. Other cities have fought their way out of gang control through a realization that Party principles are not at stake in the administration of City affairs. A city is a business in a large sense, and its administration should be selected for its competence and capacity to run the city as a business of services to the inhabitants. In other words, the principles of National political Parties have little or no bearing on city government as such. But the strength of the Machine in Philadelphia is based on a false appeal to Party loyalty which really has no legitimate place in the picture. It has been able to so entrench itself through its long hold on practically all of the public payroll that however the City voted for State or National offices whenever the City administration has been up, party loyalties and the power of patronage have been invoked successfully to sustain the Machine in its overlong tenure of undisputed power.

City elections go through a vicious circle in operation. The taxpayer furnishes the payroll which supports the City employee. The employee gets on the payroll through the Machine. The Machine then calls on the employee to kick in at election time—or else. He pays up what is virtually an assessment. Then the Machine uses the money so contributed, together with large loans and gifts from others, who have various reasons for giving, such as gratitude for past favors, hopes for special privileges, desire for power, political conviction, dislike of the other party, and other motivations, good or bad. This fund so gathered is used for the Machine's expenses and spread through the Wards for use on election day. Thus the entrenched political Machine has been able to perpetuate its grip on the City-County government. It is plain to be seen that National Party principles have little or nothing to do with it.

Party machinery could be kept under a new Charter, but the vicious and predatory practices now followed by the Machine could be largely eliminated. A decent Civil Service law imposed on all City and County jobs would largely do away with the sinister and odious system of patronage which now poisons our municipal government. Election of Councilmen at large without Party labels would give the voter a better chance to choose more competent men or women than under the present arrangement. Under the Home Rule provisions of the proposed Charter, and with an improved Civil Service and many other beneficial changes contained in the Charter, we would have the liberty of changing the Charter itself from time to time as we progressed on our way to political liberty and freedom. We could finally eliminate the political Boss and restore the rule of the City to the people. Is that too much to ask or to expect for Philadelphia? It has been accomplished in many other American cities formerly afflicted with the scourge and plague of Boss rule such as we now have under the present Machine. If others could do it, why not the people of Philadelphia?

There is no suggestion in this plain reasoning of swapping one Machine for another which might and probably would prove equally bad after a prolonged session in power, long enough to forget the promises and pledges under which it came to power. There is no such thing as a Good Machine or a Benevolent Boss. In all history the march of liberty has been over the discarded Boss, be he King or Emperor or Dictator. The hope for better things for Philadelphia must rest in the development of leadership in each Party which will come out 100 per cent for these measures of change and progress in our local government.

Many men and women of note in the community have lent active support and taken official posts in the Machine. Their motives have been virtuous, and no doubt their influence good, but at bottom they have not been able to correct the abuse of patronage and to stem the waste on which the Machine lives and thrives. Surely these men will join in a movement to rebuild our City and County governments. When the Charter battle was fought in 1939, leadership and financial support in the fight came substantially from the ranks of the Republican Party. Who will forget the eloquence of the plea for Charter and Civil Service reform in the address of former Senator Pepper, entitled, "Sunrise for Philadelphia"? These citizens must now realize the hopelessness of expecting any good of the Machine. They must realize that a continuation of waste and the overpowering burden of political dronery will sink us if allowed to continue, as it must and will if the Machine is permitted to live. Is there one of these men who can sincerely believe that we can get a modern new Charter, Civil Service reform, and City-County Consolidation from the Machine? Who can believe that Philadelphia can meet the test of reconstruction, give full employment and modernize our City under the malevolent and iniquitous blight of Machine rule?

On this fetish of local party loyalty, it is interesting to note the comments of the son of Republican President William H. Taft:

"... But there is a group of business and professional men [says Charles P. Taft] who back the Machine against reform because of a sincere conviction that the evils are necessary incidents of the promotion of the National welfare. The conviction that the Machine is necessary lives because of a belief that we must have two National Parties and that a National Party cannot exist except by means of strong local organizations. The minor peccadilloes of the Machine are necessary evils to be mitigated by the presence in Party councils of these honest men, and the more serious charges are laid to the mistaken fervor of enthusiastic partisans or the slanderous efforts of the minority Party to reach power by way of the reform.

"I hesitate to criticize these men, whether Republicans in Chicago or Democrats in Cleveland, because they are honest and sometimes acquire a position of influence in the organization that enables them to truly eliminate many of its corrupt practices. But they cannot make the politicians swing their votes for the best candidates and there is always hidden from them a residence, most often in the courts and especially the police courts, of the viciousness that jobs and spoils inevitably permit to exist.

"There is a far larger group for whom I have no such sympathy. They support the Machine for motives that are a combination of fear and self-interest. They have none of the genial rascality of the blatant buccaneer and none of the high purpose of the honest Party leader. They may indeed have in mind that the Boss can influence a tariff schedule or grant a privilege that means livelihood to their employees and their families, but they lack the strength of character to see that the black-mailer succeeds only with cowards. These men shut their eyes to the most brazen graft and permit themselves to be made the respectable front for the Machine. In the old days the politician and the profiteer could often run the show against all comers, but today the badge of respectability is generally needed, especially in the face of a reform government, and these men furnish it. In such a situation they may be the determining influence that defeats reform, for they ad-strength to the mass inertia of less prominent citizens whose active indignation is essential to the first victory."

In 1940 or in 1944, national results might have been different had the Republican Party been able to point to Philadelphia, its historic City stronghold in its historic State stronghold of Pennsylvania, and say—"There, behold a great city, whose political house has been cleansed and its government reconstructed along the most modern, economic, and efficient lines! Behold Philadelphia, best governed, most progressive City of America! We did that job. We can be trusted with the government of the United States." But no, the Republican Party in Philadelphia was tagged with the mark and record of the Machine. Scarcely a majority of the Party's own registered voters voted for its candidates. Who can doubt that it passed up a great opportunity? Who can doubt the confidence and esteem it might still achieve if it cleaned house?

All voters in the Fall of 1948, irrespective of Party, should vote only for candidates for the Legislature (Representatives and Senators) who have unequivocally pledged themselves to vote for these four acts: (1) consolidation, (2) new charter, (3) county civil service, and (4) abolition of registration commission!

CHAPTER V

Timing of Governmental Reconstruction

Strangely enough, after seemingly tireless interest and attention to the abuses of government which have been revealed by official inquiries, investigations by different agencies, and through the news columns of the press, the public's enthusiasm often wanes when the hard work of riveting attention to details of corrective measures is faced. It is a species of mental indolence which accounts for the difficulty of getting otherwise good citizens to the polls to vote for reforms such as City-County Consolidation and a new Charter, while, on the contrary, those who have a definite self-serving interest in preserving the old order show up almost to a man to oppose such remedial acts. Now here is a situation of governmental breakdown which is appalling and shocking to the public at large, and the public opinion polls show an overwhelming concentration of opinion in favor of drastic reform of our system, but when the details of the task and scope of reform are presented, public apathy is immediately encountered, or at least that is the history of the past many years in Philadelphia.

To avoid this letdown in public pressure, this proposed program should be scheduled for prompt enactment before the fatal lull in public interest occurs and the driving force of public opinion evaporates.

Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

While speed is desirable because governmental abuses will the sooner be corrected, the complicated nature of the task of putting new laws into effect to replace old ones requires care and meticulous arrangement as to time and dates on which the new laws shall take effect. However, all this arrangement is capable of exact timing, and the complications which seem to be so difficult with careful study soon fall into simple array.

Our first observation in studying the scheduling of this program is that the City administration and the majority of the County offices to be vitally affected were elected for a four-year term stretching from the first of 1948 to the end of 1951. All the contemplated changes should be in effect, therefore, conveniently for the selection of the new government administrators at the Primaries and General Municipal Election in 1951. To accomplish this, the following schedule should be followed:

(A) City-County Consolidation Amendment

1. Passed by the Legislature in 1949
2. Passed by the Legislature in 1951 (in the early part of the session preferably)
3. Submitted to State-wide vote for approval at a Special Election in the Spring of 1951, if possible, or at the General Election in the Fall of 1951

(B) City Charter

1. Passed by the Legislature early in 1949
2. Submitted to referendum vote in Philadelphia in the General Election in the Fall of 1949

(C) Civil Service Act, imposing Civil Service on Philadelphia County offices

1. Passed by the Legislature in 1949
2. To be made effective immediately

(D) The Act Abolishing the Registration Commission to be passed by the Legislature in 1949, and to go into effect immediately, the terms of the present Registration Commissioners to end with the abolishment of their offices

Special schedules are necessary for the new Charter in order to weld it into the present structure of government, which must go on in certain phases until new officers are elected in the Fall of 1951. This Special scheduling should be arranged as follows:

(a) Elective procedures to take effect immediately on the approval of the Charter by referendum vote and to operate in 1951.

(b) Budget procedures to be effective immediately and to govern the Mayor's budgeting so far as possible in 1950 and 1951.

(c) Immediately on the City-County Consolidation Amendment becoming effective, the County offices of Sheriff and Coroner would disappear with the functions of those present offices, being automatically transferred to and included in, as to the Sheriff—the office of the Clerk of Quarter Sessions, and as to the Coroner—the City Department of Health.

The Sheriff and Coroner would be permitted to serve out their terms, but if elected to serve a future term through the fact that City-County Consolidation had not become effective in time to stop the election machinery but had become effective before the newly elected Sheriff and Coroner could take office, then such election to these offices which had been abolished with functions transferred to other City Departments, as provided under the new Charter, shall be null and void and the election considered as lapsed and of no effect. So also in such case would the election of a Clerk of Quarter Sessions, a Register of Wills, and a Recorder of Deeds, as these offices would have become City offices under the new Charter and would be chosen by the Judges of the Courts of Common Pleas.

With the above scheduling, the effect is that Civil Service over County offices will immediately, upon the adoption of the new County Civil Service, an inseparable part of this program, be installed, the long-endured abuse of the County offices for political spoils and patronage ended, and the administration of the County government infinitely bettered even before City-County merger can be effected.

It would further mean that the City would be put under strict and modern budget management and control during the remainder of the term of the present City administration. This would likewise be a boon of inestimable benefit to the people and would save two years of the present budget weaknesses.

It would mean that the present waste of money on the Registration Commission would be saved from the date of the passage of the Act abolishing the Commission.

Finally it would mean that the City would emerge in its new dress of a streamlined, modernized single unit of Municipal Government the beginning of 1952.

There will be some contention that, instead of this program providing for a reconstructed government, it would serve better to amend the present Charter, to plug up the holes from which the appalling losses and waste have poured. These critics belittle a new Charter, Civil Service Reform, and City-County merger, but let no one be deceived or lulled into a feeling of security by such arguments. Basically we need both City-County Consolidation, County Civil Service, and modernization of our City Charter. Failure of any one of these three steps would be a fatal omission in a good governmental structure. The patchwork required now to stop temporarily the pilfering and neglect and incompetency of which we have such shocking proof daily before our eyes is due largely to the method of administration and to the rules and regulations of the City Departments and of the City Council; but the fundamental giant wastes are due not only to a loose administration of a now inadequate and already too-much-amended Charter but to the frightful incubus of a dual system of government, and a wretched Civil Service which does not extend at all over the County offices. We have now a topsy-turvy government, un-integrated, without concentrated administrative authority, no head nor tail nor middle, no backbone, a sort of jelly-fish style of governmental architecture. Nothing can really better the situation except to rebuild the structure upon sound and modern foundations, and this program, if followed, would do just that thing, to the redemption of the City, to its rejuvenation, and to the infinite betterment of the living conditions of this generation of its inhabitants.

No patchwork, no half measures, no pussyfooting, no further delays, only firm positive remedial legislation can give us the measure of good government which is our due!

It is obvious to the most casual observer of the limiting dates of election schedules that the suggestion, now often heard, that the new Charter be postponed either to take effect at the same time as City-County Consolidation, or to be drafted after City-County Consolidation, is in reality simply a proposal that the new Charter be postponed until 1956 at the earliest. City-County merger cannot become effective, unless a Special Election is held, which is costly and extremely unlikely, in the Spring of 1951, until ratification at the General Election in November 1951. As the machinery for the election of a new administration for the City under the present Charter begins to operate in the Spring of 1951, it is evident that the new Charter cannot await City-County Consolidation, but must be passed before 1951. Unless this new Legislature of 1949 grants a new Charter, Charter Reform will be dead at least until 1956. Of course everyone knows that opponents of a reconstructed government will use the deception of Delay (such as above described) to try to kill any change from the present governmental setup. Citizens must be awake to the vital import of these limiting dates. There is only one fatal date to be watched—and that is the grant of a new Charter in 1949. The grant of a new Charter Commission or a grant to the City Council of the right to write a new Charter for submission to the Legislature in 1951 and then to the people is also the exact equivalent of decreeing death to Charter Reform before 1956. It's the same old story of Tomorrow, and Tomorrow will never come if it is left with the politicians!

CHAPTER VI

Simplicity and Economy

Under this program, immediately upon favorable action by the Legislature in the first part of 1949, great benefits will commence to accrue both in the increased efficiency of the administration of city services and also in savings to the taxpayer in reductions of the expense of the government. The passage of the proposed bill abolishing the Registration Commission will result in substantial savings in expenses. Also the imposition of Civil Service on County offices will result in immediate improvement in administration and elimination of dronery, political waste, and excessive costs. As has been pointed out, the granting of a new Charter, effective upon approval of the people at the November 1949 election, would bring into being immediate and widespread benefits, to which there would be, of course, added major betterments springing from City-County Consolidation in 1951, and finally the completion of the program by the new government going into complete fulfillment the first part of the year 1952.

When there is added to the savings in expenses that will result from these steps one after the other the collections of moneys due the City which are now not being collected, owing to inefficiency, incompetence, thievery, inequitable assessments, and favoritism, it is a conservative guess that the City is now losing Ten Million Dollars a year, which it will have when the new government is installed for the year 1952 and the years to come. That will be the savings in current operations, and to this can further be added the uncounted millions of savings which will result from having the vast program of public improvements carried out under the new government rather than by the loose-jointed, patronage-laden, creaking dual government now malfunctioning.

As examples of the simplification and integration of functions which can be accomplished are certain outstanding changes resulting from City-County Consolidation under this program. It is provided that the offices of Sheriff and Coroner, which are archaic and wasteful in the present arrangement, will disappear, with their necessary functions transferred to other City agencies better and more suitably equipped to handle them. Three other County offices will be made appointive by the Board of Judges instead of being elected. These are the Recorder of Deeds, the Register of Wills, and Clerk of Quarter Sessions. It is scarcely debatable that these administrative offices are better served by appointment than by submitting them to a popularity contest which has no bearing on the suitability of the candidates for the performance of the duties of these offices.

It is to be hoped that the Legislature will in due course deprive the Magistrates of their criminal jurisdiction and make them appointive by the Judges, and thus remove the two prime reasons for the frightful mismanagement of these courts which should be the poor man's tribunals but which in many instances are now so misused as to be the oppressor instead of the defender of justice for the lower income groups.

From the Charts shown farther on it will be seen that the new government, besides unification under one administrative organization, will have simplified the governmental setup very extensively indeed. About one third of the present functioning agencies have been eliminated, with their functions integrated into a well-balanced governmental machine. Such unnecessarily expensive agencies as the present Board of Tax Appeals, Receiver of Taxes, and Civil Service Commission have been altered greatly or abolished. There is every justification both in theory and experience for these readjustments.

CHAPTER VII

Regeneration? Yes or No!

Let us adopt as a guide for this new Charter movement the motto—Vires Acquirat Eundo (It grows stronger as it goes). That is if we can get this program out in the open for consideration. In the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia in 1787 many fallacious arguments had to be discarded before the movement could get under way. In the preliminary discussions a vast number of previous opinions were altered or abandoned, and out of the welter emerged the new government. One of the prime considerations leading to agreement was the pressure of time and events. There were undeniable trends to disintegration under the Articles of Confederation. It was a great question as to whether a breakup of the States could be stalled off long enough to allow a new government to be planned out. The people were interested and open-minded. Conditions pointed to the necessity for a closer organization to bind together the divergent State sovereignties. The Fathers realized that the time was ripe and that delays and postponements might be irreparable. When their labors were finished and the greatest Charter of all history was published, the support it received became irresistible and its adoption as the Supreme law of the land inevitable. But if the work had been delayed, if the easy counsel of "Let's wait a year or two" had prevailed, our nation might never have been, and our country still divided into dozens of petty, squabbling little States.

In certain respects there is a parallel between the situation when those great events were taking place in Philadelphia and our position now under a disordered, disorganized, and demoralized local government. All through there is an excited realization of the need of a reconstructed government at the earliest possible moment; still there are many who counsel indefinite delays, hazarding by such very counsels the life, soul, and vitality of the now vibrant spirit of reform.

There are those who have a selfish interest in fighting off any change in the present setup; there are others who believe that there should be no agitation of local issues during a Presidential campaign, although it is as plain as the nose on your face that the new State Legislature, which is to be elected at the same time, is the single authority to decide on local issues, and that failure to bring these issues forward during the campaign will be construed by legislative candidates as proof of apathy in respect to them; again there are still others who advocate that we make very minor reforms in the forms of the government but that we again rely on that most ancient (and most fruitless) and most naive of cries—"We must put better men in office." These latter well-meaning citizens say that the forms of government are unimportant but that you must get good, honest administration, and thus leave all in the hands of a political organization which has complete control of the present government. And so these good citizens are advocating a perpetuation of all the abuses of which they complain.

Most dangerous of all to this cause are those who would urge the Legislature to refer back to those responsible for our ills of government the question of reform. These good citizens—and they are very substantial and powerful—do not advocate that the Legislature be asked for a new Charter with Home Rule provisions included thereunder, but that the Legislature be asked to permit the City to suggest a new Charter to the Legislature. And to whom would the Legislature delegate such power? A Charter Commission to be appointed by the Mayor, or the Governor, or the Council, or elected by the people? And how could this result in as representative a movement as to have a draft of a new Charter presented to the Legislature (elected after a campaign on this issue) by a great and widely representative group of private citizens?

Obviously the suggestion of a new Charter Commission means a long and objectless postponement of the whole project of a new Home Rule Charter. Manifestly the Charter draft proposed by such a Commission would require a resubmission to the Legislature and then a referendum to the people at large. To schedule this whole operation, the Legislature of 1949 might authorize such a Commission, which would report back to the Legislature in 1951, and the new Charter approved by the Legislature would be submitted to a vote in the City. If this referendum was taken at a Special Election (which would be very expensive and allow little time for consideration or debate) during May 1951, there would be an opportunity to forestall the machinery for election under the present Charter. If the referendum was postponed to the November election, then it would be too late to take effect in 1952. It seems hardly possible that the business could be prepared for a vote at such a Special Election in the Spring of 1951.

Now the question arises as to the necessity for a reference of such a new Charter back to the Legislature of 1951. Suffice it to say that the Legislature has heretofore declined ever to give complete freedom to the City to write its own government regardless of limitation on the form or disposition of its legislative, executive, and judicial functions. It seems improvident, to say the least, to risk this whole enterprise on the gamble that the Legislature would abandon its previous attitude on this fundamental point. Once there is such a long delay as would be occasioned by the Legislature making such a refusal, there would be great probability of an evaporation of the pressure of public opinion and a resulting apathy which would be fatal to the vitality of the movement and finally mean its defeat at a referendum. The spark would have gone out.

Consequently, by all odds the best chance for success lies in steadfastly urging on the Legislature the grant of a new Charter in 1949. This new Charter would be one recommended to the Legislature by that most democratic of all methods, a great committee of private citizens of all walks of life, much more truly representative than any Commission or governmentally appointed or authorized group could possibly be. Thus while the heat of public opinion was still aglow for a real reconstruction of our government, we could, with great authority of feeling and conviction, ask our Legislature for this boon.

As to expression of opinion respecting the need for this legislation, it is not remiss to quote examples as follows:

"Buck passing and chaos thrive under the present disjointed system of dual City-County government in Philadelphia. It is obvious that a house thus divided cannot be sound." (Paul A. Howe of the Chamber of Commerce before the Junior Chamber of Commerce.)

"Philadelphia at present is trying to operate a Rolls-Royce motor in a worn-out Ford chassis," said Arthur C. Kaufmann, President of the Chamber of Commerce and Spokesman for five civic groups, before the Joint State Government Commission. He proposed "consolidation of City and County governments, a new home rule Charter to supplant the present instrument, a debt stabilization law, and the consolidation of the functions of the Registration Commission and the County Board of Elections." It is to be noted that he apparently, and very wisely too, commits the two research organizations which abstain from legislative promotion, the Bureau of Municipal Research and the Pennsylvania Economy League, as well as the Citizens Council on City Planning, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Committee of Seventy, to a new Home Rule Charter, "subject to those limitations of the Commonwealth which must necessarily be imposed; we definitely feel that Philadelphia should be permitted to draft, adopt, amend, and revise its Charter." It is suggested very definitely here and now in this book that the new Charter be drafted by a general committee of private citizens, representative of all walks of life, including but not representing exclusively special groups such as above or appointed by such special groups, and completely nonpartisan, and that such Charter so drafted be submitted to the Legislature in 1949, with the backing of a general campaign conducted during the months of October, November, and December 1948 to demonstrate to candidates for the Legislature what the people of Philadelphia want, and to ask for the commitment of these candidates before election day. That, it is submitted, is an entirely practical and feasible plan and is far better in every way than the idea of having the Legislature recommit the whole question to a Charter Commission which would be dominated by the same interests who have been responsible for the dreadful maladministration of our government from which we are now suffering so acutely.

It is to be further noted that Joseph S. Clark, Jr., appearing, at the same hearing of the Joint Commission, for the Americans for Democratic Action, fully endorsed a similar program and approved of a plea to the Legislature for the grant of such a new Charter, containing within itself Home Rule for Philadelphia in the future.

It must be recalled that on the question of a grant of a new Charter by the Legislature in 1939, during the general public's campaign in 1938 in support, newspaper polls revealed that well over three quarters of the electorate were in favor of the grant by the General Assembly and submission of the proposed new Charter to a referendum of the people. The plea to the Legislature was backed up by a petition of a hundred and twenty-five thousand voters. The whole movement was defeated by politicians with selfish and self-serving interests who refused to commit themselves and their candidates before the legislative election of 1938. The same result may very likely occur again unless we profit by the example of the past and place actual drafts of the proposed Acts before the candidates and both party organizations this Fall and demand commitments before election.

This program can be achieved if the people of Philadelphia will assert themselves and demand an end to the disgraceful misconduct of its government which is now going on and will continue without abatement if it is permitted. Picayunish amendments to the Charter should not appease us. We were promised in 1939, if we put down the ax, that things would be better. What we got is written into the record of the probes now in progress, and the surface has only been scratched!

CHAPTER VIII

The New Charter

The old order changeth, yielding place to new.

—Tennyson

To achieve unified government for Philadelphia, City-County Consolidation is essential, but to benefit from the merger and to achieve good unified city government, a new Charter is also essential. This new Charter must be so drawn as to incorporate not only the changes so urgently needed but to absorb automatically the functions of the County government into the City government simultaneously with the merger becoming legally effective through the adoption of the City-County Consolidation Amendment.

The draft of the proposed new Charter accomplishes this purpose. It is unnecessary to repeat that it would be a great misfortune should we again be led astray by the will-o'-the-wisp of a Home Rule Enabling Act, which would be virtually an Act to enable the opponents of good government to defeat any chance for governmental reform until 1956 at the earliest. The first station on the road to better things is the grant of a new Charter by the General Assembly in 1949 to give us partial relief, and the second and final station would be the adoption of the Consolidation Amendment in 1951.

Much is said in a general way about charter revision, but seldom are recommendations reduced to specific details, with the old compared to new. Now follows such a complete analysis, so that any voter who has the interest and takes the trouble to read this volume will understand what is proposed.

OUTLINE OF NEW CHARTER AND COMPARISON WITH PRESENT CHARTER

Council

The legislative power is vested in a Council consisting of 11 Councilmen. They are elected from the city-at-large, by the use of nonpartisan ballots. The terms of office of these 11 Councilmen are to be coincident, as they are at present; the length of the term, four years. Each Councilman will receive a salary of $7,500 per annum, and will not be permitted to hold any other public office or position while serving as Councilman. Individual Councilmen may be compelled to attend meetings and to vote on all matters except those involving the consideration of their own official conduct or financial interests.

Size

A Council consisting of 11 members is generally considered, for cities the size of Philadelphia, a small Council. At present Philadelphia has a Council of 22 members, so that the proposed Council is considerably smaller than the existing one.

For the purpose of rapid and responsible conduct of the City's business there can be no doubt as to the superiority of the small Council. The small Council permits of informal procedure and genuine deliberation. It is a business directorate and not a debating society, as is so often the case with a large Council. From the viewpoint of efficiency the small Council is extremely desirable.

A more competent type of individual should be attracted by a small Council than by a large one: first, because of the greater prestige attached to the position, and second, because of the possibility of paying a salary commensurate with the duties and responsibilities of a Councilman.

The past records of our cities demonstrate that the small Council (because it is able to attract more competent Councilmen) gives to each subject coming up for discussion closer and more thorough attention than does the larger Council—even though the latter has a greater number of members among whom the work supposedly may be more widely spread. Responsibility makes it more careful of its own knowledge and power. As members of large bodies, men will sometimes do things for which they would hardly dare assume responsibility as individuals in smaller bodies.

Obviously the record of each Councilman in a small Council is much more easily determined than in a larger one and the electors therefore can exercise greater discrimination in re-electing members to a small Council.

Because each member of a small Council must necessarily represent a greater number of voters than does each member of a large Council, it has often been stated that the members of a small Council are not as close to their constituents as are the members of a large one. Is this really so under our present method of selecting Councilmen? Are the members of a large Council close to their constituents? In 1943 in Philadelphia the members elected to Council were the primary choice of far less than one third of the electors.

The large Council, experience has proved, is unwieldy, inefficient, and irresponsible. It takes too long to reach decisions. It interferes too much with the details of administration. Naturally, therefore, it has less time for the broader problems of public policy. They are less responsive to public opinion because they cannot be watched as closely as can the members of a small Council. Thus the small Council more nearly approaches a true legislative body.

Election of Council Candidates from City-at-Large

An at-large Council has a balanced view of the City's problems, while district Councilmen only too often indulge in log-rolling and pork-barrel legislation. This balanced view, in my opinion, nullifies three of the advantages claimed for the district system, viz., (a) no area will be overlooked in the distribution of benefits at the disposal of the City, (b) each district is sure of representation, and (c) district Councilmen are close to their constituents and therefore represent them well. Furthermore, it is important in the distribution of the benefits at the disposal of the City that the areas most in need of them, as determined by a well-rounded-out plan, receive them.

Residence in the "wrong" district does not exclude good men from Council when Councilmen are elected at-large.

"The district system," says Wm. Dudley Foulke, in his book A Hoosier Autobiography, "prevents the normal and healthy union of those who think alike and desire to vote for the same candidate. These are now separated from each other by arbitrary lines and are often prevented from acting together. There is no law to prevent men from uniting to build ships and railroads to the extent of their capital. But here we have a law which says to the voters. 'You shall not combine your voting capital—your ballots—unless you all live in the same district.' What should we think of a rule dividing the stockholders of a great railroad company by geographic lines and prohibiting those residing in different districts from voting for the same directors?"

Ticketmakers, while not overlooking the distribution of candidates by area, can recognize voters who have common interests other than geography. These interests are usually stronger than district ties and therefore the voter can more truly express his preference. It is possible, thereby, to set up a small Council which is a truly representative body.

The shifting of population from one section of the City to the other and the growth of population in new districts tend, under the district system, to give underrepresentation to these growing sections or Wards.

Nonpartisan Ballots

Nonpartisan ballots tend to keep the National Party Machines out of municipal elections and thus tend to prevent National issues, which are extraneous to these elections, from so occupying the center of the stage as to block intelligent discussion of important local problems. This by-passing of local issues often appears to be the rule under our present system.

The real issues in municipal elections are generally ones of legislation and administrative efficiency rather than ones of National policy, and those candidates who campaign on the basis of National Party labels are trying simply to divert the voter's attention from the real problems of local government.

In fact, where nonpartisan ballots have been used, the political Parties have not been materially weakened and in the larger political arenas (the County, the State, and the Nation) have carried on as before. Oftentimes the candidates for these non-City offices have been of a higher caliber as a result of the better City elections.

Nonpartisan ballots have made independent voting easier, and, by doing so, have forced the local political organizations to nominate better candidates and to take strong positions for improved municipal government.

THE MAYOR

The Mayor is elected as at present and retains all the powers now vested in him. In other words, he takes the same place in the new organization as he had in the old as the Chief Executive of the City.

THE NEW ORGANIZATION OF DEPARTMENTS AND DISCUSSION OF IMPROVEMENT EFFECTED

Defects of Existing Organization

1. Departments are greatly unequal in size. Some of them are so small that by no stretch of the imagination should they rank as separate departments. Others are so large as to be unwieldy.
2. Responsibility for administration is not centralized. Numerous activities are not under the administrator.
3. Interdepartmental relationships are intricate.
4. Some of the departments are hybrids. They combine unlike duties.
5. Some of the boards—those created prior to passage of the present State Constitution in 1874—have unwarranted powers.
6. Almost all of the boards and commissions mingle administrative work with quasi-legislative or quasi-judicial duties.

General Advantages of New Organization

The proposed new organization simplifies the local governmental structure considerably. Eleven agencies are abolished altogether and their functions are transferred to the departments.

There are 11 regular City departments instead of 9. Because of the amount of work they will do which now is performed independently, there is, comparatively speaking, a reduction in the number of departments.

Brought under central administrative control are the functions of these independent agencies:

- Receiver of Taxes
- Division of Children's Agents
- Bureau of Weights and Measures
- Commissioners of Fairmount Park
- Board of Prison Inspectors
- Aviation Commission
- Water Commission
- Correctional work of the criminal courts
- Real and personal property assessments
- Court buildings maintenance
- Independent purchasing
- Convention Hall, etc., maintenance

Thus the reorganized structure greatly improves lines of administration administration and responsibility.

Functions of the departments are rearranged so that no department has unrelated things to do. This cleans up inter-departmental relationships and should make for more competent administration of technical tasks.

Along the same line, specific and important functions, now so scattered among several offices that no agency is ultimately responsible, are brought together. The most notable examples are correctional work, recreation and parks, and welfare.

The Fairmount Park Commission and the Board of Prison Inspectors possess unusual powers—powers which the Constitution now forbids being granted to any commission. Possessing such powers conflicts with good municipal practice. No activity should receive special privileges.

Where boards and commissions were found which mixed quasi-legislative, quasi-judicial, and trust functions with administration, administrative work was pulled out of their jurisdiction and put under the appropriate department.

The new departments are better balanced, being a good deal more equal in size than before.

The administrative departments directly under the jurisdiction of the Mayor are 11 in number. They are: (1) Recreation and Parks, (2) Health, (3) Medical and Social Welfare, (4) Detention and Correction, (5) Public Safety, (6) Public Utilities, (7) Public Works, (8) City Property, (9) Port, Commerce, and Industry, (10) Law, and (11) Finance. The head of each of these departments is appointed by the Mayor, and is directly accountable to him for the efficient administration of the department.

Department of Recreation and Parks

The Department of Recreation and Parks has jurisdiction over all municipal parks and park areas and over all municipal recreational activities and facilities. It may act jointly with the school board to establish and administer school playgrounds and recreation centers on school property.

Attached to the Department of Recreation and Parks, and a part of it, is the Fairmount Park Commission consisting of seven members appointed by the judges for overlapping terms of seven years each. The members receive no salary. They are vested with certain duties of trust administration and with the power to make long-range plans for the extension of recreational and park facilities, subject of course to the revision of such plans by the Planning Board. They also act in a rule-making and advisory capacity for the department.

Recreation is one of the activities so scattered throughout the local government that no single agency has been responsible for it. The Fairmount Park Commission, the Bureau of Recreation of the existing Department of Public Welfare, and the Bureau of City Property of the present Department of Public Works are all involved in recreation service and management of park facilities. With this triple control it probably is no wonder that many large and densely populated areas of Philadelphia have practically no recreational facilities whatsoever.

The proposed Department of Recreation and Parks would take over substantially all of the work of the three agencies mentioned above. Thus one department is made exclusively responsible for this highly important function of our local government.

The new department will not have the jurisdiction over park policing and highway maintenance. These two activities go into the Department of Public Safety and the Department of Public Works.

Department of Health

Control over the entire range of public health activities is given to the Department of Health. It is responsible for all the activities of the existing Bureau of Health with the exception of plumbing inspection and "outdoor physicians." It has jurisdiction over tuberculosis and other communicable disease control, child hygiene, medical inspection of public and private school children, food and milk inspection, medical examination of city employees, and sanitary and nuisance control. The director must be a graduate of a school of public health and must have had at least five years' experience as health officer of a city of 50,000 population or more.

A Board of Health with powers similar in every way to the existing one is attached to the department. The five members (three of them physicians) are appointed by the Mayor for five-year overlapping terms.

The new Department of Public Health corresponds almost exactly to the existing Bureau of Health of the old Department of Public Health.

It should be noted that the plan removes all hospitals from this department. Authorities do not agree upon whether municipal hospitals should be managed by a department of public health or by some other agency, and the case is not clear-cut one way or the other. With the theoretical arguments stacked up one against the other, one is impressed that in actual practice in our City there has actually been practically no relationship between the Bureau of Hospitals and the Bureau of Health, the two parts of the existing Department of Public Health. In recent years there has not even been a chief of the Bureau of Hospitals.

There remain in the new Department of Public Health all activities of the local government which are concerned with the prevention and control of communicable diseases.

Department of Medical and Social Welfare

Entrusted to this new Department of Medical and Social Welfare are all the municipal activities relating to care of the indigent—the general hospital, the contagious disease hospital, a chronic disease hospital if established, the summer camp for children, the home for the indigent, the almshouses, the juvenile wards of the County, the relief work of the Bureau of Personal Assistance and the Bureau of Charities and Correction, and the "outdoor physicians."

Attached to the department is a Hospital Board consisting of seven physicians appointed by the Mayor for overlapping terms of seven years each. This board is charged with the direction of the medical affairs of the institutions under the jurisdiction of the department.

The new Department of Medical and Social Welfare can be considered the heir to the Bureau of Hospitals of the present Department of Public Health, the Bureau of Personal Assistance of the Department of Public Welfare, part of the work of the Bureau of Charities and Correction of the Department of Public Welfare, and lastly, the Division of Children's Agents of the County Commissioners. It may be defined as that department of the local government which is concerned with relief of the indigent, no matter what type of relief it may be.

The first point that might be raised in regard to this department is: why are the Philadelphia General Hospital and the Contagious Disease Hospital transferred from the Department of Public Health to it? Of course the first reason for the transfer is, as pointed out above, that the existing organization simply is not working properly. The next reason is that, though the hospitals are medical institutions, they are indigent institutions also. The necessity of relief may be caused by unemployment, old age, accident, or illness. A well-rounded program of relief includes both removal of the cause of misfortune and rehabilitation of the individual in every respect. Hospitalization of the poor cures the disease. At the same time, however, sickness is a terrible catastrophe to any family, and the financial effect of an illness disastrous enough to cause hospitalization drives lots of persons onto relief. Therefore, the second problem of a hospital is that of rehabilitation. Such an institution properly belongs, with other specialized types of institutions for the indigent.

The business administration of a hospital differs but little from the business administration of most of the other city institutions. Whether people are sick or merely poor, they require food, room, and clothing. To this extent there should be some very real monetary savings through operating economy.

Camp Happy, the Home for the Indigent, and the three almshouses formerly operated by the poor district would also be in this department. Concerning non-institutional welfare activities, it would have charge of of juvenile wards of the County, now taken care of under the Division of Children's Agents of the County Commissioners. Overlapping and duplicated efforts will be eliminated from the administration of relief to dependent children. The "outdoor physicians" of the Bureau of Health would be in this department too.

Having one department devoted entirely to welfare work should aid materially in improving the treatment afforded the unfortunates of the City.

Department of Detention and Correction

Included in this new Department of Detention and Correction are the activities, functions, and facilities of the house of detention for women, the house of correction, the prison, and the prison farms. Also grouped in the department are the administrative and probational activities of the criminal courts.

This proposal separates the administration of penal treatment from the courts themselves. Prison treatment has been so separated for 145 years. However, it is recognized that there must be close liaison between the proposed department and the criminal judges in order to co-ordinate and aid the judges in their fixing of treatment. Therefore, there is attached to the Department of Detention and Correction a Board of Probation and Parole, consisting of three members appointed by the Quarter Sessions judges, three members appointed by the Municipal Court judges and the director of the department himself. The board will review social, psychiatric, medical, and financial investigations of the department and will recommend treatment for convicted criminals to the judges.

Department of Public Safety

The powers and functions of the new Department of Public Safety are practically the same as those of the old department—police, fire, and safety inspection. However, it gains the public safety functions of the Fairmount Park Commission (the park guards), the Department of Public Works (the highway patrol), the County Commissioners (Bureau of Weights and Measures), and the Department of Health (Board of Plumbing Supervision). It loses the maintenance functions of the Electrical Bureau, which is transferred to the new Department of City Property.

With the creation of the new Department of Recreation and Parks, the park guards are transferred to this department. The policing of park areas requires a special type of police activity somewhat different from ordinary patrolling. The nature of offenses is different (drunk rolling, etc., is much more prevalent in park areas) and the park guards must know how to swim and row a boat in order to patrol the water areas effectively. Essentially, however, park guards are policemen and it seems inadvisable to have divided responsibility for the police function within the city. Further, the change places them under Civil Service—a protection they do not now have. With this transfer, naturally there would be established a division of park guards in the bureau of police.

Also to effect a centralization of police activities, the highway patrol of the Department of Public Works is transferred to the safety department. The highway patrol deals principally with the weights of loaded vehicles and is a supervisory activity requiring close and thorough surveillance.

The Bureau of Weights and Measures of the County Commissioners is also placed in the Department of Public Safety. There seems to be no valid reason why the bureau should be continued under an independent agency such as the County Commissioners. Where the work is performed by the police department in other cities, the arrangement has worked out satisfactorily.

Plumbing inspection of new buildings is also transferred to this department. The change is made principally for reasons of economy. Plumbing inspection differs in its principles and practice in no way from the work of the Bureau of Building Inspection. The existing arrangement is somewhat unusual: foundation, general building construction, and electrical inspection are jobs for the Department of Public Safety, but plumbing inspection is done by the Department of Public Health.

Department of Public Utilities

Jurisdiction over all municipal utilities owned, controlled, or operated by the city—the waterworks, the gasworks, and transit facilities—is given to this new Department of Public Utilities. In it are merged the activities of the Bureau of Water, the Water Commission, the Department of City Transit, and the Bureau of Lighting and Gas except street and alley lighting. These bureaus, departments, and commissions cease to exist as separate entities. The Gas Commission, created under the terms of the gasworks lease, necessarily is continued.

There is a fundamental similarity among all utilities. Whether publicly or privately owned or operated, all public utilities basically have the same broad problems of regulation, control, and policy. This fact is recognized in the jurisdiction of the Public Utility Commission of the Commonwealth.

The creation of the Department of Public Utilities should enable the selection of a department director trained in public utility operation and supervision. This should clarify and crystallize a public utility policy in our City.

To effect economy, the department is authorized to enter into arrangements with adjacent municipalities and counties to furnish them with water from the City water system.

Department of Public Works

The Department of Public Works is responsible for the construction, maintenance, repair, and cleaning of the streets, alleys, and the sewer system. The functions of the Bureau of Street Cleaning, the Bureau of Highways, the Board of Highway Supervisors, the Bureau of Engineering, Surveys and Zoning, and the Board of Surveyors, together with the street lighting work of the Bureau of Lighting and Gas, are still to be performed by the Department of Public Works. To these functions are added the construction, maintenance, and repair of park highways.

The Department of Public Works, one of the super-departments in the existing City government, is reduced in size by taking away from it the bureaus of City Property, Mechanical Equipment, and Water. Aside from these moves, the department is practically unchanged, since it retains its surveying functions and the work of constructing, maintaining, and cleaning the street and sewer systems of the City. Added to the department is the work of construction and maintenance of highways in parks, now under the Fairmount Park Commission. Highways are highways, regardless of whether they run through parks or not. They have nothing to do with recreation and park activities, and their construction and care are the same regardless of their location.

Department of City Property

To this new Department of City Property is given all general City property maintenance. To it also is given jurisdiction over the construction and erection of new buildings paid for out of the City treasury. The City Architect is a member of the new department, the existing Department of City Architecture being abolished. In the new department are consolidated the functions of the bureaus of City Property and Mechanical Equipment of the present Department of Public Works, the functions of the Electrical Bureau not related to public safety, the administration and maintenance of the commercial museum, exhibition and convention halls, the janitorial services of all City and County offices and buildings (formerly performed separately by each office) and the supervisory and drafting functions of the Department of City Architecture.

The wisdom of centralizing in one department the construction, maintenance, and repair of all general City property seems to be beyond question from the standpoints of competent service and lower costs. It is a flagrant waste of money, for example, to have some 65 janitors, 17 janitresses, 79 cleaners, and 2 helpers in City Hall, especially with the 163 employees working for no less than 16 separate offices.

The Department of City Architecture is merged into this department. It is so small that there seems to be no justification whatever for having it as a separate department.

Bringing the bureaus of Mechanical Equipment and City Property from the Department of Public Works together with the Electrical Bureau of the Department of Public Safety accomplishes a merger of work which is essentially similar.

Department of Port, Commerce, and Industry

This new department replaces the present Department of Wharves, Docks, and Ferries, and together with a new Board of Commerce and Industry attached to it, consisting of seven members appointed by the Mayor for terms of seven years, has jurisdiction over exhibitions and conventions; over the promotion of the port and the airport; over all commercial and industrial promotion. It is the City's representative in rate cases before the Interstate Commerce Commission. Its staff is under Civil Service.

One of the functions of City government which has suffered most by being scattered through various offices is that of the guidance of the commercial and industrial development of the City. The Board of Trustees of the Commercial Museum, Exhibition and Convention Halls has jurisdiction over trade and industrial exhibitions and conventions. The Aviation Commission controls the airport. The existing Department of Wharves, Docks, and Ferries promotes the port. All of these activities are brought together into one department devoted to the single purpose of furthering the commercial and industrial development of the City.

The work is tied up most intimately with the general economic welfare of the City. It should be looked upon not as an administrative service, but as a function whose economic and promotional aspects have a significance not measured in any way by their cost. For example, such a department should work most vigorously to eliminate existing freight rates discriminating against our City.

Department of Law

In addition to the existing legal work performed for the City, such as legal advice to Council and the various City departments, defending the interests of the City, prosecuting violations of ordinances, filing tax liens, prosecuting delinquent accounts, preparing City bonds and contracts, the Department of Law does all the legal work for all City and County offices except the District Attorney and the courts. However, the Civil Service Commission and the Controller may, within limitations, employ special counsel should occasion demand.

Department of Finance

The Department of Finance is a new department. It assists the Mayor in the preparation of the budget. It controls budgetary expenditures by making monthly allocations of the departmental appropriations. Within these monthly allocations each department must stay, unless a change is approved by the Budget Director.

The Department of Finance is also responsible for the assessment and collection of taxes and for the collection of all other money due the City or County (rents, sales, permits, licenses, fees, court costs, fines, etc.). The central purchasing agency of the City and County is a bureau within the department.

The Department of Finance takes the place of the Receiver of Taxes, the Mayor's budget clerk, the Department of Purchasing, and the assessment work of the Board of Revision of Taxes.

Budgeting and control of appropriations under the budget are raised from the status of a clerkship to a bureau in the Department of Finance. Various restrictive provisions will put a stop to some of the existing financial abuses.

Though the Department of Purchases is made a bureau in the Department of Finance, its jurisdiction is extended to cover all purchases paid for by the City treasury. That centralized purchasing is sound for all agencies must necessarily follow if it is conceded that it is sound for part of them. There is no reason to have some offices and agencies purchasing through the purchasing agency with others making their purchases independently.

As for the inclusion of the purchasing function in the Department of Finance, payment of bills may be speeded up and duplicate records eliminated. The inventory records may be tied in as a part of the financial records of the city. Appropriation accounts can be encumbered quickly and easily. This type of arrangement is a common one in American cities and seems to have functioned very well.

Abolition of the Board of Revision of Taxes and transferring the work of making real and personal property assessments to the Department of Finance are discussed farther on and will not be taken up here.

Department of City Treasurer

The powers and functions of the Treasurer remain unchanged—fund custody and disbursement. The employees of his office, however, are placed under the classified Civil Service, his purchases must be made through the Bureau of Purchasing of the new Department of Finance, and his office comes under the budget and appropriation powers of the Chief Executive and Council. The election of the Treasurer is unchanged.

Department of City Controller

The Department of Controller is expanded in powers and duties. It prescribes the form of accounts, maintains the master accounting records, conducts pre and post audits, approves all specifications before bids are accepted, and inspects deliveries to see that they meet with the standards set and received in full measure and properly stored. No purchase order and no contract or lease is valid without the Controller's certifications of encumbrance entry.

The employees of the Controller's office are under the classified Civil Service. The materials, supplies, and equipment needed by his office must all come through the central purchasing agency. His office is under the budgetary and appropriation powers of the Mayor and Council.

CIVIL SERVICE

Department of Civil Service

The fundamental powers and functions of the Department of Civil Service are enlarged and extended, and the internal structure has been reorganized and simplified. A personnel director, appointed by the Mayor from among the three individuals certified by the Civil Service Commission as being highest on an employment list for the office of personnel director, is in direct charge of the department. He appoints, in accordance with Civil Serice regulations, the employees of the department. He administers the rules of the Civil Service Commission and acts as its secretary. He prepares classification plans for submission to the commission, and compensation plans for submission to Council. He is responsible for the examination, grading, and certification of applicants for employment in the City service, for the maintenance of individual employee records, for the certification of payrolls, for the administration of an in-service rating system, and for the conduct of an in-service training program.

The Civil Service Commission is the policy-determining body for the department. It promulgates rules for the administration of the Civil Service and approves the classification plan submitted to it by the director. It makes investigations of the enforcement of the Civil Service and hears publicly all appeals from dismissals.

This commission is composed of three members elected by vote of Council. The commission's term of office is coincident with Council's and its members may be removed for cause by a two-thirds vote of Council. Persons holding public or political office are not eligible for membership on the commission. Each commissioner is to be paid an annual salary of $5,000; the chairman, who is elected by the commission, to receive $500 more.

The principal change in the Civil Service provisions of the present charter consists of the separation of the administrative personnel work from the quasi-legislative and quasi-judicial aspects of Civil Service management. The direct superior of the chief personnel officer is the Mayor, though he performs duties for the Civil Service Commission as well. He is in direct charge of all of the administrative work of the department, and the commission itself is a policy-determining and complaint-adjudicating body. The adoption of rules and regulations is a task that calls for the interplay of a number of minds, while the enforcement of the rules is distinctly a task for a single administrator. The personnel director may be regarded as the personnel assistant of the Mayor, aiding him in the selection of qualified employees. There has been much change and clarification in the thinking upon the subject of Civil Service in recent years, it being now realized that Civil Service must act primarily as an instrument for the improvement of personnel in a positive direction, and that the function of protecting the administrative branch of the government from political interference and capricious action should be regarded as a secondary function of the personnel department.

In times of normal employment and normal turnover of the City's employees, to have a Civil Service authority out of sympathy with the head administrator is to cripple greatly the administrator in the performance of his work. Here again the distinction between administration on one side and quasi-legislative and quasi-judicial duties on the other is preserved, with a multi-member board appointed by Council for the latter functions, and a single head of the department appointed by the Mayor for the former.

The personnel director differs from other department heads in that his status is one of Civil Service, while other department directors are exempt from these provisions. To accomplish this, the Civil Service Commission conducts examinations and certifies to the Mayor the three highest persons competent for the post of personnel director, and the Mayor makes the actual appointment from among the three names. The personnel director, after appointment, is protected by the Civil Service article of the Charter. It is my belief that this arrangement will strengthen the office materially and prevent it from being used for political purposes.

There should be no loose salary fixing. There should be equal pay for equal work. The proposed Charter requires salary standardization in a single comprehensive compensation plan.

Composition and Regulation of the Civil Service

In the unclassified service are included the department directors except the personnel director, board members, contract services, emergency policemen and firemen (a 30-day limit applies to these emergency public safety employees), special inquiry personnel, the clerk of Council, the first assistant City solicitor, and one employee of the Mayor. All other employees paid from the City treasury are in the classified service.

Competitive examinations are held for classified employees. The appointing authority must choose one of the three highest on the list. No provisional appointments are to be made and a trial period of from two to six months, depending upon the class of position, is to be given each appointee. No political activity whatsoever is to be permitted. The director is to administer in-service ratings and the policy of filling the upper positions is to be one of promotion of employees whenever possible. Employees dismissed for cause have the right of appeal. Those dismissed for lack of work are placed on a re-employment list.

Many minor loopholes in existing provisions permitting evasion of the spirit of Civil Service are closed up.

Existing Civil Service employees are to be continued in office. Existing non-Civil Service employees are to enter into the Civil Service after special noncompetitive qualifying examinations.

All City and County employees with but minor exceptions will be protected by Civil Service. Those employees now under the Civil Service will continue under the improved law. County and court employees, who now have no protection against political manipulation of their jobs—including park police, prison guards, and court officers, for example—will be inducted into the Civil Service after special noncompetitive qualifying examinations, which will test each person's ability to do competently the work for which he is paid.

The provisions of the present Charter forbidding political activity by municipal employees and the levying of political contributions are greatly strengthened. These practices constitute a violation of the political neutrality which public opinion has come to expect of civil servants. They give an undue advantage in political contests to the Party in power. They are indirect ways of financing political work out of the public treasury.

Present ways of avoiding the spirit of the Civil Service law are eliminated. Provisional appointments are prohibited. Temporary exemptions are not allowed. All employees dismissed for cause have the right of a hearing before the commission. Payrolls must be certified by the personnel director to insure departmental compliance with the rules and order of the Civil Service Commission. Taxpayers may bring suit to compel observance of the Civil Service law. Penalties for violation are such as to arm it effectively.

CITY PLANNING

The Department of City Planning is especially designed to accomplish the co-ordinated, adjusted, and harmonious development of the municipality—a well-balanced distribution of buildings and open spaces, a greater development of recreational areas within and without the City, a decrease of all types of congestion, a more wholesome social and economic life, and a wiser and more economical expenditure of public money for capital purposes.

The new Planning Board is responsible for the preparation and custody of the master plan, for the planning of self-liquidating projects, for the approval of subdivision plats and zoning ordinance changes, for the location of all public buildings, for the protection of the plan by the police power method, and for the preparation of an annual capital budget: it is a board with power.

The board is composed of seven appointed and six ex-officio members. Only one of the ex-officio members, the Mayor, has the right to vote. The other ex-officio members are the directors of the following departments: City Property, City Planning, Public Works, Recreation and Parks, and Public Utilities. The seven citizen members are appointed by the Mayor for seven-year overlapping terms and receive no compensation for their services unless Council shall so provide. The chairman, elected by the board for a two-year term, must be a citizen member.

The director of the Department of City Planning is appointed by the board. He and the employees of the department are its technical and clerical assistants. The employees are under Civil Service.

The Board of Zoning Appeals is composed of three members appointed for one-year coincident terms. The Planning Board appoints one member from its membership or staff and the Mayor, two. The latter two must hold no other governmental office. Twenty dollars per diem is paid to each citizen member of the board for each day of employment. The chief of the Bureau of Engineering in the Department of Public Works is the secretary of the board. Its duty is to hear appeals from adverse decisions on the issuing of zoning permits, and to render decisions on them.

The composition of the Art Jury and the appointment of its members remain unchanged. The Mayor is still the appointing authority. The Art Jury's approval as to the exterior design of public buildings is required before construction work may begin. The location of the building, however, must now be approved by the Planning Board rather than the Art Jury. The jury's other powers and functions relating to art and design remain unchanged.

Defects in the Development of Our City

In terms of dollars, our City has indulged in a full measure of capital improvements. About $290,000,000 of debt was issued in a ten-year period in the 'twenties.

And yet—

1. Large sections in the north, northeast, south, and southwest are without any type of open play or recreational areas.

2. The City has liberally provided ways of escape from the City: subways, parkways, boulevards, bridges.

3. But traffic flow within the City is noted chiefly for its delays, hindrances, and inconveniences.

4. Over $12,000,000 of subways are dead-end. They have never been used.

5. Zoning has not succeeded in resuscitating economically depressed areas.

6. Slums abound within the City.

7. Our water supply is inadequate and unsanitary.

8. Surrounding municipalities have grown by leaps and bounds, yet one-quarter of Philadelphia's area is still vacant land.

We have spent much for capital improvements but have not spent wisely. We have gotten little return for our money in terms, happiness, and economic welfare.

The root of all this lies in our existing City Planning Commission scheme. It is a body without authority.

Planning in the Future

To provide co-ordinated and effective planning of the development of the City, the new Charter establishes a Planning Board with power.

The board will develop and promulgate a master city plan of our City. The board will have authority to guide the development of the City under the plan. It will be able to prevent violations of the plan. It will co-ordinate the construction of capital improvements by the City government. It will fit zoning restrictions into the plan.

To place the master City plan on a firm basis, public hearings on it by the Planning Board are required. A three-fourths vote of the board itself is necessary for its adoption. Council, lastly, must approve it and can override the scheme of the board only by a majority of its elected members.

Council can pass no legislation affecting City planning without approval of the Planning Board, except again by such a majority. This will prevent whittling the plan away by indirect means and, further, give Council the benefit of the board's judgment on these technical matters.

Zoning is an integral part of City planning; the two functions are inextricable. They are therefore both placed within the sphere of the Planning Board.

Board of Zoning Appeals

Appeals from zoning permits are, as at present, to the Board of Zoning Appeals. The proposed board has but one "official" member who is a representative of the Planning Board. To protect the plan further, the Planning Board, as well as the original plaintiff, may appeal from the decisions of this board to the courts.

FINANCE

The Current Budget

Included in the budget are the estimates of miscellaneous and delinquent receipts, the statement of liabilities (provisions as to them remain unchanged), proposed current expenditures, transfers to the capital budget, and all outstanding mandamuses. The budget must balance. Salaries are not to differ from those established in the compensation plan. Prior bills may not be paid—there are to be no deficiency bills.

The estimates of miscellaneous and delinquent receipts must not exceed the actual receipts of the previous complete fiscal year. The Controller makes the estimates and his figures are binding. Nonrevenue receipts are not to be included in these estimates. No estimates of new sources of revenue may be made during the year. Until actual receipts in the till exceed the estimates, the estimates cannot be changed for that year, and then only up to the amount of actual receipts.

The budget requests of all departments and agencies are submitted annually to the Mayor on or before September 1. By the same date the Bureau of Assessments in the Department of Finance has Certified the assessment roll, and the Controller supplies the estimate of receipts for the current year. The Mayor, assisted by the Bureau of the Budget in the Department of Finance, revises the budget estimates and compiles the budget, transmitting it to Council by September 15. Council completes public hearings on the budget by October 1. Council may not increase the total amount except by a two-thirds majority vote, otherwise it may change the budget at will.

October 15 is the last day for Council to pass the budget and fix the tax rate. If it is not passed by this date, the existing tax rate is to be raised five mills and the new rate applied for the following year. Tax collections begin on January first.

Transfers among items are prohibited. Appropriations must be used to accomplish the purpose for which they were made. Any unneeded balance of an appropriation may be transferred by Council to a special fund only upon a two-thirds favorable vote and after the stated purpose of the appropriation has been accomplished.

Emergency loans may be made up to $2,000,000 in any year, and only after a formal declaration of an emergency by the Mayor followed by a vote of two-thirds of Council. Temporary loans may be made between January 1 and September 1 and only up to an amount equal to 10 per cent of anticipated receipts. It is mandatory that the temporary loans be included in the budget as a liability if they are unpaid on September 1, the day that compiling of the budget begins.

There are a number of provisions in the proposed Charter designated to stop past budget abuses. One of these abuses is deficiency bills. Such bills result from purchases incurred beyond appropriation limits. Goods are brought "on memorandum," and though forbidden by the present charter, the bills soon become dignified by the term "moral obligations." We should put a stop to this pernicious practice by specifically outlawing any bill for goods delivered which is not accompanied by a purchase order approved by the Controller, which approval in turn cannot be given until after charging the amount of the order against the proper appropriation account.

During the war period, the wage tax so unexpectedly increased the City's revenue that many of the old budget and fiscal abuses were automatically cured, but now our financial difficulties may return in as bad or worse degree as in the 'thirties. The new Charter seeks to curb the mandamus, emergency loan, and other practices which were greatly abused in the past. Current deficits will not be permitted. A new Charter is desperately needed in order to guard against loose financial practices of the past, if there were no other very strong reasons.

To prevent grotesquely inflated estimates of revenue, each estimate is restricted to a figure no higher than the cash actually received in the preceding year, and no estimates whatever can be made from nonrevenue items, such as the recurrently estimated but only mythically received "sale of real estate."

The entire budget procedure is moved up so that the budget will be adopted by October 15. Severe penalties are established for failure to pass the budget by that date. Such failure would automatically raise the tax rate five mills per dollar, and each Councilman would forfeit $50 of his pay for each day beyond October 15 that the budget was still not passed.

To put a stop to the practice of short-changing appropriations, transfers among items are forbidden. The provision for placing unneeded balances of appropriations in a special fund still allows adjustment to changing conditions, however, which adjustment was the original purpose of transfers.

Mandamuses

Mandamuses are prohibited for certain purposes which have in the past been used to subvert the budget. Mandamuses for certain other purposes which cannot be prevented—personal damage judgments and the like—are anticipated by requiring prior appropriations. Mandamuses outstanding in any year must be included as liabilities in composing the budget for the following year.

The Capital Budget

The annual capital budget, which is prepared by the Planning Board, must contain all proposed capital projects. The means of financing the projects must be shown, and the proposed outlays for a 10-year period summarized.

The City and County departments submit their capital project requests to the Mayor. He revises them and forwards them to the Planning Board together with a certification of the maximum amount of money available for capital improvements. The latter must include the sources from which the funds are to be obtained, and current revenues to be utilized must also be shown as part of budgeted expenditures in the current budget. The Planning Board may revise the Mayor's capital budget at will but it cannot exceed the maximum amount certified by him. When the capital budget is completed by the Planning Board it is sent to Council, which acts upon it. Council may not change items or increase the total amount except by a two-thirds majority vote.

All municipal bonds are to be serial bonds. Certain bond issuance provisions will eliminate borrowing in excess of actual needs. Over a 50-year period, the municipality is to shift to current revenue financing for capital improvements. The minimum percentage of the cost of capital improvements to be provided for in the annual current budgets over these 50-year period must be progressively increased by 2 per cent each year, whereas the maximum percentage to be financed by serial bonds must be progressively decreased by 2 per cent annually. Self-liquidating projects and projects whose total cost is over $10,000,000 are expected from this method of progressively decreasing the percentage borrowed.

Real and Personal Property Assessments

The assessment of real and personal property is under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Assessments in the Department of Finance. The bureau assesses real and personal property at its full value. A modern and scientific system is required, including the assessment of land and buildings separately and the use of various devices and forms which will require equitable assessments. Horizontal changes are to be permitted, but not oftener than every two years. General reassessments must be made every three years if Council so directs. The assessment roll must be certified by September 1. The organization of the Department of Finance will permit low-cost tax billing and collection.

An entirely distinct Board of Assessment Appeals will hear and adjudicate appeals from the assessments of the bureau. The board consists of five members appointed by the Common Pleas judges. The chief of the Bureau of Assessments is the secretary of the board. The board also will act as boards of view when necessary. Each member of the board will receive $25 per day while sitting.

The present Board of Revision of Taxes is responsible for the making of assessments. If a property owner appeals his assessment, the board must then sit in judgment on the fairness of its own assessment. The situation is certainly awkward for the board, but more than that, it violates all our concepts of impartial justice. The proposed Charter separates the incompatible duties of making assessments and judging appeals from them.

It puts assessing in the Department of Finance, under a chief assessor. Functional instead of district assessments, land value maps, separate land and buildings valuations, public inspection of how assessments are arrived at: these means are used to insure uniform and equitable assessments in place of the grossly unequal assessments of the present. Being in the finance department, single process preparation of the assessment roll and tax bills by mechanical methods, and other economies in assessing and billing taxes, will be possible.

Functions of the appeals body are quasi-judicial only. It adjudicates assessment appeals and acts as a board of view.

HOME RULE

Under the Home Rule provisions of the State Constitution, the Charter is not to become effective unless it is approved by a majority vote of the electors of the City.

Again under the Home Rule provisions of the State Constitution, changes in the Charter are to be made in three ways. In minor matters, changes may be made by Council. In ordinary matters, Council must submit the changes to the people of Philadelphia for their favorable vote. And for changes of major importance, both a favorable vote of the electors of Philadelphia and subsequent acquiescence by the State Legislature will be required.

County Commissioners

The County Commissioners are responsible for the entire election procedure. They are both the registration and election authority, the Registration Commission being abolished after the terms of incumbent Commissioners expire. The County Commissioners are no longer burdened with the duties of the Bureau of Weights and Measures and of the Division of Children's Agents; neither do they perform the functions of fiscal agent for the courts and other County agencies.

There is no separate Registration Commission in other than first- and second-class counties now, the work being carried on by the County Commissioners. Besides simplifying the structure of government, it is hoped that consolidation of registration and election work in one authority will remove much of the confusion and delays probably inherent in the existing setup of having one office handling voters' registration and another their actual voting.

The County Commissioners will thus become a body handling election and registration matters only.

Other Agencies

The Free Library, the Sinking Fund Board, the Pension Board and the Courts remain unchanged, as do also the court auxiliary offices, except for the transfer of the Department of Accounts in the Municipal Court and probationary administrative work of the criminal courts to the Department of Detention and Correction.

The authority to appoint the Board of City Trusts by the Common Pleas judges remains unchanged, but new appointments are limited to a term of five years each and immediate reappointments are not permitted. An ex-member of the board, however, may be appointed for a second term of office whenever a new vacancy occurs. The Mayor is an ex-officio voting member of the board.

Legal difficulties would have prevented any change in the status or control of the Free Library even if a change in it seemed wise. The legal difficulties concern the titles of various properties owned by the library and trust agreements made at the time considerable property was given to the library.

In powers, functions, duties, and appointing authority, the Board of City Trusts remains untouched. That there should be but one agency administering the general trusts of the City is a sound principle. Terms of office of new members of the board, instead of for life, are limited to five years on the basis that a life term of office carries the hazard that incumbents may not view the interest of the City as the predominating factor in the management of the affairs of the board.

Changes Effectible under City-County Consolidation

The benefits to be derived from the merger of the City and County governments have been outlined in a general way. It is in order to describe specifically the effect of Consolidation on the conversion of the functions now exercised by the County offices into the administrative departments of the City government under the new Charter. For the sake of clarity the County offices are listed and the disposition of functions indicated:

a. The Courts would remain unchanged, except that all employees but one confidential secretary for each judge would be under Civil Service and employed directly by the City. In the general reorganization of the local government it is to be hoped that a way can be found to recast the system of magistrates, deprive the magistrates of their criminal jurisdiction, and make those minor judicial officers and their constables appointive by the Board of Judges. This change would correct an abuse which has long been at the root of an inequitable dispensation of justice, and would make the Magistrates' Courts the courts of the poor man and the place for the just settlement of minor disputes, as they were intended to be.

b. The Controller, District Attorney, County Commissioners, Recorder of Deeds, Register of Wills, Clerk of Quarter Sessions, and the Prothonotary would become City offices under the Consolidation Amendment. In certain cases this would result in simplification of procedure and eradication of duplicate records and overlapping functions, as for instance in the Controller's office, where he now functions as both a City and a County officer, and in the relations of the District Attorney with the City police.

c. The Treasurer, who serves both the City and County, could be dispensed with and the functions transferred to the City's Department of Finance.

d. The offices of Sheriff and Coroner would disappear, their necessary functions being transferred to the Clerk of Quarter Sessions and to the City Department of Health, respectively.

e. The City Civil Service would cover all employees on the City payrolls, without distinction between City and County, as must exist, even with the extension of Civil Service to the County as proposed, until the adoption of the Consolidation Amendment.

f. After Consolidation has been adopted, the new Charter will make appointive those purely administrative jobs of Register of Wills, Clerk of Quarter Sessions, and Recorder of Deeds, so that the elections of so-called Row Offices can be limited to the offices of City Controller and District Attorney. These officials could then be chosen at the same time as the Mayor and Councilmen. Such a change could perhaps be worked out to give one year holidays in four from elections, to the great saving of the taxpayers.

City-County Consolidation Amendment

Proposing an amendment to article fourteen of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania abolishing County of Philadelphia as a separate political entity and providing for administering of County functions by City of Philadelphia.

The General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania hereby resolves as follows:

Section 1. The following amendments to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania be and the same is hereby proposed in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof.

That article fourteen be amended by adding thereto section eight as follows:

Section 8. The County of Philadelphia as a political entity separate and distinct from the City of Philadelphia is hereby abolished. Functions of the County government within the City and the functions of the Philadelphia courts shall be performed by officers of the City who shall be appointed or elected as may be provided by law, but nothing in this section shall apply to the manner of selecting judges and magistrates except as the General Assembly may otherwise provide. The tax levying body of the City shall control all expenditures from the City treasury. Laws shall be enacted to provide that all appointments and promotions of officers and employees paid out of the City treasury shall be according to merit and fitness. No officer or employe whose compensation or the requirements of whose office are met in whole or in part from the City treasury shall receive for his own use any fees or commissions for any work done in the course of his employment by any public agency, and all such fees or commissions received shall be paid into the City treasury for the use of the City. No law regulating the affairs of cities or counties shall be held invalid as local or special because of the inclusion of provisions giving effect to this section.

Section 2. That no inconvenience may arise from the changes in the Constitution of the Commonwealth and in order to carry the same into complete operation it is hereby declared that

This amendment shall be effective immediately upon its adoption.

Immediately upon the adoption of the amendment all County and court officers and employes paid out the City treasury of Philadelphia shall become officers and employes of the City of Philadelphia and, unless the General Assembly shall have otherwise provided, shall continue to perform their duties and be elected, appointed, compensated, and organized in such manner as may be provided by the Constitution and laws of the Commonwealth in effect at the time the amendment becomes effective; but elected County officers, if actually in office serving the term for which they were elected when this amendment becomes effective, shall be permitted to complete such terms.

Bill Establishing Civil Service in the County Offices AN ACT

Regulating and improving the civil service of counties of the first class; defining certain crimes; imposing penalties; and repealing all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this Act.

The General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania hereby enacts as follows:

Section 1 Civil Service Commission. Counties of the first class shall have a Civil Service Commission known to be in sympathy with the application of the merit system and of other features of modern personnel practices in the public service. The commissioners shall be appointed by the tax-levying body of the county; and where a county contains a city of the first class having a Civil Service Commission, the tax-levying body of the county shall appoint the City Civil Service Commission to act also as the County Civil Service Commission, and said commissioners shall serve without receiving additional compensation.

Section 2. Personnel Director. A special board of examiners designated by the commission shall hold competitive tests and establish an employment list for the office of personnel director, in accordance with the testing procedure and principles prescribed in this Act. The commission shall appoint one of the three persons highest on the list as personnel director. Any person appointed as director shall, at the time of his appointment, be familiar with and known to be in sympathy with the application of the merit system in the public service. Where, however, a county contains a city of the first class having a personnel director for its civil service, the commission shall appoint said personnel director to act also as the personnel director of the civil service of the county and he shall so serve without receiving additional compensation.

Section 3. Meetings. The commission shall hold regular meetings as fixed by rule.

Section 4. Powers and Duties of Commission.

(a) The commission shall:

1. after public hearing, adopt or change rules for the administration and enforcement of this Act, which rules shall have the force and effect of law one week after their adoption;

2. after public hearing, approve, with or without modification, such classification plans as may be recommended by the director;

3. make investigations requested by the tax-levying body of the county or may make investigations requested by an employe or by a citizen, or of its own motion, concerning the enforcement and effect of this Act;

4. Transmit to the tax-levying body the report of the director with comments, criticisms, or suggestions for the more effectual accomplishment of the purposes of this Act; and

5. keep complete and permanent records open to public inspection, of all action taken at its meetings and hearings.

(b) Each member of the commission, the director and any other employe or agent authorized by the commission, shall have the power to administer oaths in matters pertaining to the work of the commission. The commission shall have power to secure by subpoena the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents and other evidence. Any judge of a court of record may upon application by the commission compel the attendance of witnesses, the production of documents and other evidence, and the giving of testimony before the commission by attachment for contempt or otherwise in the same manner as the production of evidence may be compelled before such court.

(c) The commission shall have the power to make arrangements and agreements with other public personnel agencies for the use and exchange of services.

Section 5. Public Hearings. The term "public hearing" when used in this Act shall be construed to mean an opportunity, given after public notice of at least five days, for any citizen or party in interest to be heard in public at reasonable length.

Section 6. Powers and Duties of Director. The director shall:

(a) attend all meetings of the commission, act as its secretary, and record its official actions;

(b) prepare and recommend to the commission rules and amendments thereto and administer the rules adopted by the commission;

(c) appoint under the provisions of this Act an assistant director and all other employes of the commission;

(d) establish and maintain in card or other suitable form a roster of officers and employes of the county, showing for each the title of his position, the rate of compensation, and every change in his status, including increases and decreases in pay, changes in title, transfers, sick and annual leaves with or without pay, and other facts which the director may consider pertinent;

(e) prepare a classification plan as provided in this Act;

(f) prepare a compensation plan as provided in this Act;

(g) pass upon the qualifications of applicants for appointment to, or promotion in, the classified service; establish and maintain employment and re-employment lists of the various classes of positions; devise, install and administer service rating systems; arrange for and pass upon transfer; administer rules of the commission as to annual, sick, and special leaves of absence, reinstatements and attendance; and see that layoffs, demotions, suspensions, removals, resignations, retirements, and other separations are made in accordance with this Act;

(h) check and certify payrolls as provided in this Act;

(i) make on or before March first of each year an annual report to the commission concerning the administrative work of his office; and

(j) investigate from time to time the effects of the administration of this Act and the rules made thereunder and report his findings to the commission.

Section 7. Division of Service. The civil service of the county is hereby divided into the unclassified and classified service.

A. The unclassified service shall comprise:

(1) all officers named in the Constitution,

(2) the chief clerk of the county commissioners and one employe to each of the other officers named in the Constitution.

B. The classified service shall include all positions now existing or hereafter created in the service of such counties not specifically included in the unclassified service. The classified service shall be divided into the labor division and the competitive division. The labor division shall comprise all positions the work of which can be satisfactorily performed by unskilled laborers. The competitive division shall include all positions in the classified service other than those in the labor division.

Section 8. Classification Plan. The director shall, after consulting the appointing authorities, ascertain and record the duties of positions in the classified service, and establish classes giving a complete description of each class. He shall submit the plan to the commission within twelve months after his appointment. Each class in the plan shall include all positions which are sufficiently similar in respect to the duties and responsibilities thereof so that the same descriptive title may be used for each of such positions; the same requirements as to education, experience, knowledge, and ability are demanded of incumbents for the proper performance of their duties; and same tests of fitness may be used in choosing qualified appointees; and the same schedule of compensation may be made to apply with equity under like working conditions to all positions in the class.

Section 9. Adoption of Plan. After reasonable opportunity to be heard has been given to employes, appointing authorities, and the general public, and after incorporating any changes it deems advantageous, the commission shall adopt the classification plan within three months after its receipt from the director. Thereafter the class titles so established shall be used in all personnel, accounting, budget appropriation, and financial records relating to payments for personal services.

Section 10. Amendments to Plan. Additional classes may be established and existing classes may be changed or abolished upon recommendation of the director and approval of the commission after public hearing. Except as otherwise provided by this Act, no person shall be appointed to or employed in any position until it has been properly classified as herein provided and an appropriate list has been established therefor.

Section 11. Allocation of Positions. After adoption of the classification plan the director shall allocate every position in the classified service to one of the classes established by the plan. Thereafter as new positions are created or additional classes are established or existing classes changed, the director shall make such allocations or reallocations of positions as are necessitated thereby; provided, however, that where an amendment to the classification plan requires the reallocation of an existing position, the employe holding such position shall have reasonable right to be heard before final action is taken.

Section 12. Compensation Plan. The director shall, as soon as practicable after the adoption of the classification plan, submit to the tax-levying body of the county a proposed plan of compensation, showing for each class of position in the classified service minimum and maximum salary rates and such intermediate rates as he deems desirable. After a reasonable opportunity to be heard has been given to employes, appointing authorities, and the general public, and after incorporating changes it considers desirable, the tax-levying body shall adopt the plan with or without modification within three months after receiving it, and may at any time change the compensation plan, but only in accordance with the classification plan. The director may transmit to the tax-levying body of the county proposed changes in compensation plans and the reasons therefor.

Section 13. Rates of Pay. After the adoption of a compensation plan or changes in the schedule of compensation for any class, the future appropriations shall be in accordance therewith. The rate of pay for any employe upon appointment to a position in the class shall be the minimum rate prescribed for that class, provided, however, that where the appointee is already in the classified service, his compensation after appointment shall be the same rate as that which he received before appointment; or if no such rate appears in the schedule for that class, then his compensation shall be at the next higher rate in the schedule. Increases in rates of pay shall be to the next higher rate in the schedule. Increases in rates of pay shall be to the next higher rate for that class and shall be granted by the appointing authority pursuant to all rules of the commission, except that the rate of pay of any employe shall not be increased unless the tax-levying body of the county has appropriated funds from which the increases may lawfully be paid, nor shall the rate of any employe be increased beyond the maximum of the class.

Section 14. Selection of Employes. Except as otherwise provided in this Act, appointments of persons to the classified service or promotions therein shall be from employment lists established as the result of examinations which are competitive, free, and open to all persons, subject, however, to such limitations as may be specified by the director as to age, sex, citizenship, residence, health, habits, and moral character, and subject to the prerequisite qualifications included in the classification plan. The commission may, upon recommendation of the director, limit competition in promotion examinations to employes in the classified service who have served in a designated class or classes.

Section 15. Re-employment Lists. For each class where such action is appropriate, the director shall cause to be maintained a re-employment list consisting of the names of persons who have: occupied positions in the class, and have been separated from the service without fault in their own part; taken leave of absence and are ready to return to duty when a position is open; resigned in good standing and, with the consent of the appointing authority and of the director, have withdrawn their resignations; been removed and by direction of the commission have been given an opportunity for re-employment in some unit other than that from which they have been dismissed. The names shall be arranged for each class in the order of the average service rating of the employees for the last six months of service in the class. In the absence of service ratings, the order shall be as provided by the rules of the commission. After a name has remained on a re-employment list for one year it shall be removed from the list unless retained by action of the commission before the expiration of the one-year period.

Section 16. Employment Lists. The director shall have charge of preparing and giving examinations to establish employment lists whenever he deems such employment lists necessary. An examination may consist of a written or oral test, a demonstration of skill, or of any combination of these, and shall be of such character as fairly to test and determine the qualifications, fitness, and ability of competitors to perform the duties of the class of positions to which they seek appointment. In such examinations credit may be given for experience and education. No question in any examination shall relate to the race, religion, politics, or labor opinion or affiliation of the candidate. The director may call on other persons to draw up, conduct, or mark examinations; and when such persons are officers or employees of the county, it shall be deemed a part of their official duty to render such assistance without extra compensation.

Section 17. Notice of Examinations. The director shall give public notice of all examinations at least two weeks in advance. The notice shall be posted on a bulletin board in or near the principal office of the director and in place accessible to the public during business hours. The examinations shall be given such other publicity as the director may determine. Notices of examinations shall contain such information as may be provided by the rules of the commission.

Section 18. Marking of Examinations. The final rating of each candidate in any examination shall be determined by weighted averages according to the weight of each test as published by the director in the notice of the examination. Honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines, who have served as such in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States, or in the National Guard of the Commonwealth, shall be given full credit for their experience gained in such service, having due regard to the position for which the examination is held. Each candidate shall be sent notice by mail of his final rating and of his relative standing or of his failure to attain a place upon the list and the reason therefor. From the report of the examiners, the director shall prepare an employment list containing the names of persons arranged in order of excellence, who have been given at least such minimum rating as may be fixed in advance for the whole examination and for any one or more of the tests which make up the examination, and who are otherwise qualified.

Section 19. Combination and Cancellation of Employment Lists. Each employment list shall continue in force for a period to be fixed by the rules of the commission. The period may vary for different classes of positions, but may not be less than one year for any class. Any period before its expiration may be extended by the commission upon recommendation of the director. A new employment list for any class shall be combined with the existing list, if any, but such combination shall not prevent the automatic cancellation of any portion of such combined lists at the end of the period fixed by such rules, unless held in force as above provided. In no case, however, shall a person continue on an employment list for a period longer than two years. The director shall examine any employment list, or any part of an employment list, which has been in effect for one year and shall take such steps as he may deem necessary to determine whether the persons on the list are still eligible and willing to accept appointment. The director, with the approval of the commission, may at any time correct clerical errors occurring in the preparation of any employment list, and revise the list accordingly; but no person who has been appointed as the result of certification shall be displaced by such action. The commission shall have the power at any time after a public hearing to cancel the whole or any part of an employment list on account of illegality, mistake or fraud.

Section 20. Tests for Labor Division. Tests for positions in the labor division shall as far as practicable conform to the tests for the competitive division, but the commission may by rule provide for the registration of ordinary, unskilled laborers following such medical, physical or other tests as may be prescribed. The commission shall by rule determine the order in which the names shall be placed on the employment list and the number of names which may be certified.

Section 21. Appointment in the Classified Service.

(a) Whenever a vacancy in a permanent position in the competitive division of the classified service is to be filled, the appointing authority shall notify the director in writing. The director shall certify the names of the three persons willing to accept employment who are highest in a list consisting of the re-employment list for that class, followed by the employment list for that class. If this does not give three names to the appointing authority and if the appointing authority is not willing to choose from less than three names, the director shall promptly conduct an examination to form or add to an employment list.

(b) A position shall be deemed to be permanent when it is specifically provided for in the annual financial program or when it is established in an office or institution according to law, and is likely to be needed continuously for a period of six months or more.

Section 22. Provisional Appointments. If the director shall fail to certify, in the manner herein provided, for an existing vacancy within thirty days after receiving a request, the appointing authority may, if necessary to prevent the stoppage of public business, but not otherwise, appoint provisionally any qualified person with or without holding any test. In all such cases the provisional appointee shall, before beginning work, fill out and forward to the director an application form. Each such appointment shall be effective only until an appropriate list has been established. Such an appointment shall not in any event continue for a total of more than sixty days. Successive provisional appointments of the same or different persons shall not be made to the same position. No credit shall be given to anyone in any examination for experience gained during a provisional appointment.

Section 23. Appointment or Rejection of Eligibles. Unless it is found to be in the interest of the public service not to fill the vacant position, the appointing authority shall, within a reasonable time fixed by the rules of the commission, make an appointment from the names certified by the director. All appointments shall be reported to the director. After a name has been rejected three times by an appointing authority in favor of others on the same employment list, such name shall not again be certified to that appointing authority. If an eligible shall refuse an appointment offered to him, his name shall be removed from the re-employment or employment list, if in the opinion of the director such refusal was based on improper or insufficient reasons.

Section 24. Temporary Employees. When, because of the pressure of work, a position in the classified service must be established for a period of less than six months, the appointing authority shall request the director in writing to certify the name of a qualified person. The appointing authority shall state the cause of the extra work, the probable length of employment, and, unless the position has been classified, the duties which the appointee is to perform. The director may certify a qualified person with or without holding a competitive examination, for a period of employment not exceeding three months. Such temporary appointments shall not be renewed more than once. No credit shall be given to anyone in any examination for experience gained during a temporary appointment.

Section 25. Emergency Employees. When an emergency arises such that in order to prevent loss of public property or avoid serious inconvenience to the public one or more persons must be immediately employed without taking the time to secure proper authorization, any appointing authority or any subordinate authorized by him may appoint any qualified person during the emergency for a period not exceeding ten days. Persons thus appointed shall be known as "emergency employees." Any employment condition of which the appointing authority had previous knowledge, or of which by the exercise of due diligence he might have had previous knowledge, shall not be considered an emergency. Appointing authorities shall forthwith report to the director all emergency appointments. Such appointments shall not be renewed nor shall credit be given in any examination for experience gained therefrom.

Section 26. Probationary Period. No appointment to a position in the classified service from the employment list shall be deemed complete until after the expiration of a probationary period. The probationary period for each class of position shall be prescribed in the rules of the commission and shall in no case be less than two months nor more than six months. At the end of two months and any time thereafter until the expiration of the probationary period the appointing authority may remove any probationary employe from his position if, in the opinion of the appointing authority, the employe has shown that he is unable or unwilling to do his duties satisfactorily; provided, however, that the appointing authority shall furnish the director a statement in writing of the cause of the dismissal. In no case shall the total probationary period of successive appointees to any one position extend beyond six months from the date of the first appointment.

Section 27. Present Employees. Any person holding a position in the classified service, as herein defined, at the time this Act takes effect may become a classified service employe upon passing such noncompetitive tests as the director may prescribe. Such noncompetitive tests shall be given as soon as practicable, but in any event within six months after the effective date of this Act.

Section 28. In-Service Training. The director shall devise plans for and cooperate with appointing authorities and other supervising officials in respect to the conduct of employe training programs to the end that the quality of service rendered by persons in the classified service may be continually improved.

Section 29. Service Ratings. The director shall, as soon as practicable after this Act takes effect, establish standards of performance and a uniform system of service ratings for each class of position. Such standards shall, as far as practicable, be based upon the quantity and quality of work done, and upon the conduct of the employe at work. Service ratings shall constitute grounds for increases and decreases in rates of compensation, for demotions and removals, and for promotions. Supervising officials shall submit to the director, upon his request, the ratings of their employees, but in no case shall a supervising official be compelled to prepare or submit such ratings oftener than once in six months.

Section 30. Transfers of Employees. An appointing authority may at any time transfer any classified employe under his jurisdiction from one position to another position in the same class. In every such case the appointing authority shall give prior written notice of his action to the director. A transfer of an employe from one class to another class for which a higher maximum rate of compensation is prescribed shall be a promotion and may be accomplished only as herein provided for promotions. No person shall ever be transferred from a position in the unclassified service to a position in the classified service without examination as herein provided. The transfer of an employe to a position in another class for which a lower maximum rate of compensation is prescribed or any transfer which involves a reduction in compensation shall be a demotion and may be accomplished only as herein provided for demotions. Such demotions may be made upon the recommendation of the appointing authority or upon the petition of the employe, supported by such evidence as the director may require to show that the employe is not performing satisfactorily in the position he is holding, but is able to perform the duties of the class to which it is recommended or petitioned that he be denoted.

Section 31. Leaves of Absence. The commission shall by rule provide for annual, sick, and special leaves of absence to employees, with or without pay, or with reduced pay. No employe shall be granted leave of absence except pursuant to such rules.

Section 32. Layoffs. Where a reduction in force is necessary because of changes in organization, or because of stoppage or lack of work, the employees having the lowest service rating in the unit and in the class affected shall be laid off. In the absence of service ratings, the order of layoff shall be established by rules of the commission. The appointing authority shall promptly report to the director the name and position of any employe laid off together with the effective date of the layoff. The name of said employe shall then be placed upon the re-employment list for the appropriate class as herein provided.

Section 33. Suspensions. An appointing authority may for good cause suspend a classified employe for disciplinary purposes without pay for not more than thirty working days in any twelve-month period. The commission shall state in its rules what shall constitute good cause for suspension, but no one shall be suspended for racial, religious, or political reasons, or for labor union affiliations. Every case of suspension, together with the reasons therefor, shall forthwith be reported to the commission in writing, and such report shall be made part of the public records of the commission.

Section 34. Dismissal During Probationary Period. An employe dismissed during probation shall be considered permanently separated from such position, but the director may, if he considers such action appropriate, place the name of the person on the employment list of the appropriate class for future certification to other appointing authorities.

Section 35. Resignations. The rules of the commission shall state what shall constitute resignation. Absence from duty without notice to the appointing authority for a period of three working days may be regarded by the appointing authority, pursuant to rules of the commission, as an abandonment of a position and in effect a resignation. No person who has voluntarily resigned from the service shall be reinstated within six months from the effective date of his resignation. No resignation of any person in the classified service shall be effective unless accepted within fifteen days after the actual date of the making thereof. No person in advance of or at the time of his appointment to any position in the civil service shall sign or execute a resignation, dated or undated. No resignation shall be made or shall be valid unless it bears the signature of the person resigning and the date of the resignation in his handwriting. Any person who leaves the classified service may request the commission in writing for a public hearing stating his reasons for such a request. If on investigation the commission finds that the employe has been forced to resign against his will and without just cause or that his separation from the service has been involuntary and without just cause, the commission shall grant such person at the earliest opportunity a public hearing as hereinafter provided in the case of removal or demotion and shall treat the separation as though it were a removal.

Section 36. Dismissals and Demotions.

(a) No person in the classified service shall be dismissed, reduced in pay, or demoted in position except for just cause. Race, or religion, or political, or labor union affiliation shall not constitute just cause. No person shall be dismissed, reduced, or demoted, except as otherwise herein specifically provided, until he shall have been furnished by the appointing authority with a written notice setting forth the reasons for such action and allowed at least ten days to file a written answer. In every case a copy of such reasons and of the answer thereto, if any, shall be promptly furnished to the commission and shall be part of its public records.

(b) Within thirty days after receiving such records, the commission may on its own initiative, and shall upon the request of the employe, if filed within ten days after his dismissal, reduction, or demotion, make such investigation as it may deem advisable, either sitting as a body or through one or more of its members or through the director. The investigation and any hearings on the charges shall be for the purpose of determining whether the employe involved, by reason of his act or acts as charged, and his record of service, merits continuance in the service or whether he should be dismissed, reduced, or demoted, or otherwise disciplined for the good of the service. In all hearings the commission shall not be required to follow established rules of evidence or court procedure, but shall seek all information and evidence bearing on the merits of the case. All such hearings shall be open to the public and the employe involved shall have opportunity to be heard in his own defense personally or through counsel. Within fifteen days after the completion of an investigation or hearing, the commission shall make its findings and render its decision, which shall forthwith be certified to the appointing authority and forthwith enforced by him. Charges against any employe in the classified service asking for his removal for a violation of law or for a cause stated in the rules may be filed before the commission by any taxpayer. Such charges shall be investigated, determined, and enforced in the manner provided in this section, unless the commission shall decide that the charges do not warrant investigation, in which case the decision of the commission shall be made part of its public records.

Section 37. Certification of Payrolls. No payroll check shall be issued or paid except upon warrant of the controller. The controller shall issue no warrant for services except upon payrolls containing the names, titles, periods for which payments are to be made, and rates of pay of the persons to be paid, and bearing the certificate of the director that the persons on the payroll have been appointed and employed in accordance with the provisions of this Act and the rules made thereunder, and also bearing the certificate of the director that the persons on the payroll have been present and working or have been on authorized leave with pay, for the period specified. Any sums paid contrary to the provisions of this Act and the rules thereunder may be recovered from the officer or employe who violates such provisions and rules or from their sureties. Actions for such recovery may be maintained by a taxpayer of such counties. All moneys recovered in an action brought under this section shall be paid into the county treasury, except that the plaintiff shall be entitled to receive taxable costs of such action.

Section 38. Misdemeanors. Any person who wilfully, by himself or in collusion with one or more persons, shall defeat, deceive, or obstruct any person in respect to his right of examination, appointment, or employment according to this Act or to any rules prescribed pursuant thereto, or who shall, wilfully or corruptly, falsely mark, grade, estimate or report upon the examination or proper standing of any person examined, or certified, pursuant to the provisions of this Act, or aid in so doing; or who shall wilfully make any false representation concerning the same or concerning the persons examined; or who shall wilfully or corruptly furnish to any person any special or secret information for the purpose of either improving or injuring the prospects or chances of any person so examined, or certified, or to be examined or certified; or who shall personate any other person, or permit or aid in any manner any other person to personate him, in connection with any examination or request to be examined or appointed; or who shall furnish any false information about himself or about any other person in connection with any application or request to be examined or appointed; or who shall make an appointment to office or select a person for employment contrary to the provisions of this Act; or who shall wilfully refuse to comply with or to perform any of the provisions of this Act; or who shall wilfully or through culpable negligence violate any of the provisions of this Act; or of the rules made pursuant thereto; shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punishable by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $1,000 in the discretion of the court. Any person holding a public office or position who is convicted under this section shall be deemed to have vacated the office or position and shall be incapable of holding public office for a period of five years after the date of such conviction.

Section 39. Prohibition of Political Activity. No county officer or employe other than those elected by the people shall be a member of, or delegate or alternate to, any political convention or participate at any such convention except in the performance of his official duties; or shall serve as a member of, or attend the meetings of any committee of any political party, or to take active part in political management or in political campaigns. No application, memorandum, or other document other than the registration and election records shall in any way indicate the political affiliation of any applicant to, or member of, the classified service. No appointed or elected officer or employe shall use his office to influence political movements or influence the political action of any other officer or employe of the city; or shall interfere with the conduct of any election or the preparation therefor at the polling place, or with the election officers while counting the vote or returning the ballot boxes, books and papers to the place provided by law for the purpose, or be within any polling place save only for the purpose of voting as speedily as reasonably can be done, or be within fifty feet thereof, except for purposes of ordinary travel or residence, within one hour preceding the opening of the polls for holding such election and ending when the election officers have finished counting the votes and have left the polling place for the purpose of depositing the ballot boxes and papers in the place provided by law for that purpose, excepting only police officers, who may temporarily approach or enter the polling place in order to make any arrest permitted by law or for the purpose of preserving order, and in each such case only long enough to accomplish the duties aforesaid, after which the officers shall at once withdraw.

Section 40. Prohibition of Assessments. No person shall solicit, pay, give, or receive in any public building of such counties any money or valuable thing for any political purpose whatever. No person shall orally or by written or printed communication directly or indirectly demand, solicit, collect, or receive; or be in any manner concerned in demanding, soliciting, collecting, or receiving any money or valuable thing or any assessment, subscription, or contribution, whether voluntary or involuntary, from any officer or employe in the classified service for any political purpose whatever. No person in the classified service shall orally or by written or printed communication directly or indirectly demand, solicit, collect, or receive; or be in any manner concerned in demanding, soliciting, collecting, or receiving any money or valuable thing for any political purpose whatever. No person in the classified service shall pay or give any money or valuable thing to make any subscription or contribution, whether voluntary or involuntary, for any political purpose whatever.

Section 41. Dismissal and Disqualification. Any person in the service of the county who violates any of the provisions of this Act or the rules made thereunder shall be immediately separated from the service. It shall be the duty of the appointing authority who employed the offending person to dismiss him at once. Any taxpayer may bring suit to restrain the payment of compensation or the issuing of warrants for the payment of compensation to any such officer or employe, and as an additional remedy, any taxpayer may also obtain a writ of mandamus to compel the dismissal of such offending officer or employe. Any person dismissed under this section shall for a period of five years be ineligible for appointment to any position in the civil service.

Section 42. Effective Date. This Act shall become effective July 1, 1949.

Section 43. Repeal of Existing Law. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this Act are hereby repealed.

Bill Abolishing the Registration Commission

AN ACT

To amend sections three and eight of the act, approved the thirtieth day of March, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-seven (Pamphlet Laws, one hundred fifteen), entitled "An act to provide for the permanent personal registration of electors in cities of the first class as a condition of their right to vote at elections and primaries and their enrollment as members of political parties as a further condition of their right to vote at primaries; prescribing certain procedure for the conduct of elections and primaries and the challenge and proof of qualifications of electors; and prescribing the powers and duties of citizens, parties, bodies of electors, registration commissions, commissioners, registrars, inspectors of registration, and other appointees of registration commission, election officers, municipal officers, departments and bureaus, police officers, courts, judges, prothonotaries, sheriffs, county commissioners, peace officers, county treasurers, county controllers, registrars of vital statistics, real estate brokers, rental agents, certain public service companies, persons, firms, and corporations operating vehicles for moving furniture and household goods, and boards of school directors; and imposing penalties," by providing that the registration commission is to consist of the county commissioners instead of appointed commissioners and by providing that appropriations to carry out the act are to be made in the same manner as other appropriations are made.

The General Assembly of the Commonwealth hereby enacts as follows:

Section 1. Sections three and eight of the act, approved the thirtieth day of March, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-seven (Pamphlet Laws, one hundred fifteen), entitled "An Act to provide for the permanent personal registration of electors in cities of the first class as a condition of their right to vote at elections and primaries, and their enrollment as members of political parties as a further condition of their right to vote at primaries; prescribing certain procedure for the conduct of elections and primaries and the challenge and proof of qualifications of electors; and prescribing the powers and duties of citizens, parties, bodies of electors, registration commissions, commissioners, registrars, inspectors of registration and other appointees of registration commission, election officers, municipal officers, departments and bureaus, police officers, courts, judges, prothonotaries, sheriffs, county commisisoners, peace officers, county treasurers, county controllers, registrars of vital statistics, real estate brokers, rental agents, certain public service companies, persons, firms, and corporations operating vehicles for moving furniture and household goods, and boards of school directors; and imposing penalties," are hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 2. Registration Commission; Membership [; Bi-partisan; Term of Office; Vacancies; Removal; Compensation; Chairman, Secretary]; Action by Vote of Majority of Members; Record of Proceedings [; Annual Report],—

(a) There shall be a registration commission [in and for each city of the first class], consisting of the county commissioners in each county in which there is located a city of the first class, which commission shall have jurisdiction over the registration of electors of such city under the provisions of this act.

[(b) The registration commission shall consist of five commissioners, who shall be qualified electors of the city, not more than three of whom shall be enrolled members of the same political party, who shall be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall hold office for terms of four years, or until their successors qualify, unless sooner removed or otherwise disqualified: Provided, however, that the terms of office of the commissioners, first appointed by the Governor under this act, shall commence upon the date of their appointment, and shall expire on the first Monday of January, one thousand nine hundred and forty-one. Upon the appointment by the Governor of the registration commission for any such city, the terms of office of the existing registration commission or commissioners of any such city shall terminate.

(c) The Governor shall fill any vacancy in any such commission within ten days after the vacancy shall occur by appointing a qualified elector of the city to hold office during the remainder of the term of the commissioner whose place shall have become vacant.

(d) The Governor may, at any time, remove any commissioner for cause, and may appoint a duly qualified elector of the city as his successor for the remainder of his term.

(e) Each commissioner shall receive compensation at the rate of six thousand dollars per annum, except the chairman who shall receive six thousand five hundred dollars per annum.

(f) As soon after their appointment as may be, the members of each commission shall take the oath of office required by the Constitution of this Commonwealth, and shall organize by selecting from their number a chairman and a secretary, who shall be members of the same political party.]

[(g)] (b) All actions of a commission shall be decided by a majority vote of all members, except as may be otherwise provided herein.

[(h)] (c) Each commission shall keep a record, in permanent form of all its proceedings [, and shall make an annual written report to the Governor].

(d) The commissioners shall receive no compensation in addition to their compensation as county commissioners.

Section 8. Appropriations [; Unexpended Balances of Appropriations].—(a) The appropriating authorities of the city shall [appropriate annually, and from time to time, the funds that shall be necessary] make appropriations, in the same manner as other appropriations are made, for the maintenance and operation of the commission and the carrying out of the provisions of this act [, therein including the payment of the compensation of the commissioners, counsel, and a sufficient number of registrars, inspectors of registration and other assistants and employes, and the fees of witnesses, as herein provided, and likewise for preparing, in accordance with the direction of the commission, securing and distributing, or receiving and preserving, all street lists, registration cards, affidavits, vouchers, notices, account books, stationery and other supplies which the commission shall consider necessary for the purpose of this act, and for all other necessary expenses].

(b) The appropriating authorities of the city shall provide the commission thereof with suitable and adequate offices, properly furnished, for keeping its records, holding its public sessions, and otherwise performing its duties [, and upon failure to do so within sixty days after the effective date of this act, the commission may lease such office space as is reasonably required for the performance of the functions and duties under this act].

[(c) Any unexpended balances of any appropriations heretofore made by the appropriating authorities of the city for the purpose of carrying out any provision of any existing registration act, or the amendments thereto, shall be transferred to and made available for the commission hereby created or constituted, for the expense of carrying out the provisions of this act, and all moneys required in addition to any original appropriation in the current year, or any other year, if it shall appear that extra sums are needed.]

Section 2. This act shall become effective immediately upon its final enactment.

THE NEW HOME-RULE CHARTER

AN ACT

For the better government of cities of the first class of the Commonwealth by providing, among other things, for the election of a Mayor and a Council at large; the creation, abolition, and change of departments and the addition to departments of certain functions pertaining to parks, detention and correction, planning within the City, weights and measures, and dependent, neglected, incorrigible, and delinquent children transferred from certain county offices to the extent of the performance of such functions within such cities; improvement of the civil service; increased control over finances by requiring balanced current and capital budgets and by greater control over the collection of charges, fees, and taxes, and over payments of salaries and other expenditures out of the City treasury; improvement in the making and revision of assessments; the grant of home rule to such cities; the merging of all offices of counties of the first class into such cities and departments thereof, if, as, and when consolidation of such cities and counties become effective through adoption of a constitutional amendment and penalties.

The General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania hereby enacts as follows:

Section 1. APPLICABILITY OF ACT. This Act shall apply to each city of the first class and shall be known and may be cited as the "First Class City Law."

ARTICLE I

THE MAYOR

Section 101. THE MAYOR. The Mayor shall be the chief executive officer of the City.

Section 102. ELECTION OF MAYOR: TERM OF OFFICE. (a) The Mayor shall be chosen at the municipal election and shall hold office for the term of four years and until his successor is elected and qualified, but shall not be eligible to the office for the next succeeding term.

(b) If two or more candidates be equal and highest in votes one of them shall be chosen mayor by a vote of the majority of all the members of the incoming Council immediately upon its organization.

Section 103. OATH OF OFFICE. The Mayor shall take the usual oath of office in the presence of Council, to be administered by one of the judges of the courts in said City at twelve o'clock noon on the first day of the term for which he shall have been elected.

Section 104. VACANCY IN OFFICE OF MAYOR. (a) When a vacancy shall take place in the office of Mayor a successor shall be elected for the unexpired term at the next general, municipal, or special election for any public office or offices occurring more than thirty days after the commencement of such vacancy, unless such election should occur in the last year of said term, in which case a Mayor shall be chosen by the Council by a majority vote of all members elected thereto.

(b) Until the vacancy is filled or in case of the Mayor's temporary disability the president of the Council shall act as Mayor, or if he should resign or be unable to act, then the chairman of the finance committee of the Council shall act as Mayor.

Section 105. Salary of Mayor. The Mayor shall receive a salary to be fixed from time to time by ordinance and to be paid out of the City treasury, which salary shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he shall have been elected.

Section 106. Power of Appointment and Removal; Vacancies. (a) The Mayor shall appoint by and with the advice and consent of Council and may remove at pleasure all department heads except as hereinafter provided and, subject to the provisions of law as to civil service, shall have the power to appoint and remove all officers and employes in the departments which are under a head appointed by him.

(b) During the recess of the Council the Mayor shall have power to fill all vacancies that may happen in offices to which he may appoint by and with the advice and consent of Council, and any such appointment shall be submitted to the Council at its next meeting, and if not rejected within thirty days thereafter the same shall be considered confirmed.

Section 107. Other Powers and Duties of Mayor. (a) It shall be the duty of the Mayor to act as chief conservator of the peace within the City; to supervise the administration of the affairs of the City; to see that the ordinances of the City and the laws of the Commonwealth are enforced; to make such recommendations to Council concerning the affairs of the City as may seem to him desirable; to keep Council advised of the financial condition and future needs of the City; to prepare and submit to Council an annual report which shall be published; to submit such other reports as may be required, and to perform other duties provided by statute or ordinance.

(b) The Mayor shall call together the heads of departments for consultation and advice upon the affairs of the City at least once a month, and at such meetings he may call on the heads of departments for such reports as to the subject matters under their control and management as he may deem proper, which it shall be their duty to prepare and submit at once to the Mayor.

(c) The Mayor shall, as often as he may think proper, appoint three competent persons as a committee to examine without notice the accounts of any City department, trust officer, or employe, or of any governmental agency, commission, or County office supported by appropriations made by the City Council and the money, securities, and property belonging to the City in the possession or charge of such department, trust officer, agency, or employee and report the result of such investigation.

Such committee shall have power to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents and other evidence at any of its meetings, and for that purpose may issue subpoenas and cause them to be served and executed in any part of the Commonwealth. If any witness shall refuse to testify as to any fact within his knowledge or to produce any documents or other evidence within his possession or under his control, the committee shall forthwith report the facts relating to such refusal to the court of common pleas of the county in which the City is situated, and all questions arising upon such refusal shall at once be heard by the court. If the court determines that the testimony or evidence required of the witness is legally competent and ought to be given or produced by him, it shall make an appropriate order which it shall have power to enforce by commitment for contempt.

(a) The Mayor may, upon any emergency or apprehension of riot or mob, take command of the police force and appoint as many special patrolmen as he may deem advisable. During their services the special appointees shall possess the powers and perform the duties of regular employees of the Department of Public Safety and shall receive such compensation as shall be authorized by the Public Safety and shall receive such compensation as shall be authorized by the Mayor, not exceeding that of the regular officers of the force performing corresponding duties.

(e) The Mayor shall have all the jurisdiction, powers, and authorities of aldermen, justices of the peace, or magistrates, and as the executive head of the City and its police may issue warrants and cause arrests to be made in accordance with law returnable before any such officers.

ARTICLE II COUNCIL

Section 201. Composition and Election of Council. The legislative powers of the City shall be exercised through a Council consisting of eleven councilmen elected from the City at large to serve for a period of four years from the first Monday in January following their election. Councilmen shall be nominated and elected according to law at the municipal election held in such city in the year one thousand nine hundred and fifty-one and in every fourth year thereafter. The eleven candidates receiving the highest vote shall be declared elected. There shall be listed as candidates for Council at the election not more than eleven nominees of each duly recognized political party, and no voter shall vote for more than eleven of the candidates. If any voter shall vote for more than eleven candidates, such ballot shall be rejected and void. The candidates shall be listed in alphabetical order and there shall be no party designation or identification. If any vacancy shall occur in the office of Councilman the vacancy shall be filled at the next general, municipal, or special election occurring not less than thirty days thereafter, but the Councilman thus elected shall serve only for the unexpired term. One nomination by the City committee of each of the duly recognized political parties shall be made for each such vacancy.

Section 202. Councilman to Hold no Other Office. No person shall hold the office of Councilman while holding any other office, position, or employment of profit under the United States, the Commonwealth, or any political subdivision of the Commonwealth except that of notary public, or an office in the military or naval service of the United States or of the Commonwealth. No Councilman shall be eligible to any other office, position, or employment of profit under the City or paid therefor out of the City treasury during the term for which he shall have been elected as Councilman.

Section 203. Organization Meeting. The organization meeting of each Council shall be held at ten ante meridian on the first Monday of January following its election, or if that day be a legal holiday, then on the next day. Council shall have power to provide for its own organization and to provide for the employment and fix the salaries of such persons as may be necessary to the proper discharge of its business.

Section 204. Salary. Each Councilman shall receive a salary of seven thousand five hundred dollars ($7,500) per annum and no other emoluments.

Section 205. Clerk of Council. The clerk of Council shall record the proceedings of Council in a journal, which shall at all times be open to public inspection. He shall also keep a separate record of all ordinances and resolutions in a book or books which shall be properly indexed and shall constitute a public record. He shall keep a separate record of the rules of Council. Copies of all papers duly filed in his office and transcripts thereof and of the records of proceedings of the Council and copies of the ordinances and resolutions of the City certified by him under the corporate seal of the City shall be admissible in evidence in any judicial or administrative proceeding. The clerk shall cause all ordinances and all resolutions of a legislative character to be published within five days after they take effect, and all other matters for which public notice is provided under this act to be published at least five days before the contemplated action unless otherwise provided by ordinance. The publication shall be in at least one morning and one evening paper of general circulation in the City. In the absence or incapacity of the clerk an assistant designated by him to act in his stead shall perform his duties.

Section 206. Rules of Council. Council shall have the power to adopt and amend its governing rules which, without limitation shall include provisions for the holding of regular and special meetings, for compelling Councilmen to attend meetings, and for the order of business at meetings.

Section 207. Submission of Ordinances. Every legislative act of Council shall be by ordinance or resolution. No ordinance or resolution of a legislative character shall be submitted for passage except by bill, and no bill shall be so altered or amended during its passage as to change its original purpose. No bill shall be passed containing more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title, except that Council may pass codification ordinances. No bill or amendment shall be passed before the printing of the bill or amendment for the use of the Councilmen, and no bill shall be passed on the same day it is introduced.

Section 208. Vote Required For Action by Council; Approval of Mayor. Except as otherwise provided by law, Council shall act only at a meeting by the affirmative vote of a majority of the Councilmen holding office. However, a less number by a majority vote of those present may adjourn from time to time and may compel the attendance of absent members. On the final passage of any ordinance or resolution the vote shall be taken by yeas and nays and the names of the Councilmen voting for and against the same shall be entered by the clerk in the journal. No Councilman shall be excused from voting except on matters involving the consideration of his own conduct or when his personal or financial interests are involved. A Councilman who has such an interest in any matter before Council shall disclose the fact and shall not vote thereon. Every ordinance or resolution shall, before it takes effect, be present, duly engrossed and certified, to the Mayor for his approval. The Mayor shall sign such ordinance or resolution if he approves it, whereupon it shall become law. If he disapproves it he shall return it to the Council with his reasons for disapproval at the first meeting thereof held not less than ten days after he receives it, and if the Council pass the same within seven days after he has returned it with his disapproval by a vote of two thirds of all the members elected thereto it shall become law without his approval. If the Mayor does not return such ordinance or resolution within the time herein required it shall become law without his approval.

The Mayor may disapprove or reduce any item or items of any ordinance making appropriations, and the part or parts of such ordinance approval shall become law, and the item or items or parts of items disapproved shall not become law unless passed by the Council as provided in the foregoing paragraph.

Section 209. Meetings to Be Public. Meetings of Council shall be at all times open and accessible to the public.

Section 210. Power of Investigation. For any inquiry or investigation Council shall have power to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents and other evidence at any meeting of Council or of any committee thereof, and for that purpose may issue subpoenas and cause them to be served and executed in any part of the Commonwealth. If any witness shall refuse to testify as to any fact within his knowledge or to produce any documents or other evidence within his possession or under his control, the president of Council shall forthwith report the facts relating to such refusal to the court of common pleas of the County in which the City is situated, and all questions arising upon such refusal and also upon any new evidence not included in the report of the Mayor, which other testimony or documents may be offered either in behalf of or against such witness, shall at once be heard by the court. If the court determines that the testimony or evidence required of the witness is legally competent and ought to be given or produced by him it shall make an appropriate order which it shall have power to enforce by commitment for contempt.

Section 211. No Interference by Council. Neither Council nor any of its committees or members shall direct or request the appointment to or removal from office of any person by the Mayor or by any of his subordinates, or in any manner take part in the appointment, discipline, or removal of officers and employes in the administrative service of the City. No member of Council shall intercede or participate as Council or attorney for any officer or employe of the City in any hearing or investigation having to do with the discipline or dismissal of such officer or employe except in hearings before Council. Except for the purpose of inquiry, Council and its members shall deal with that portion of the service of the City for which the Mayor is responsible solely through the Mayor, and neither Council nor any member thereof shall give orders to any subordinate of the Mayor either publicly or privately.

ARTICLE III

DEPARTMENTS

Section 301. List of Departments. There shall be the following departments:

1. Department of Recreation and Parks
2. Department of Public Health
3. Department of Medical and Social Welfare
4. Department of Detention and Correction
5. Department of Public Safety
6. Department of Public Utilities
7. Department of Public Works
8. Department of City Property
9. Department of Port, Commerce, and Industry
10. Department of Law
11. Department of Civil Service
12. Department of City Planning
13. Department of Finance
14. Department of City Controller
15. Department of City Treasurer

Section 302. Council Control Over Departments. Council shall have the power to organize and reorganize the structure of any of the departments of the City government and to provide for the proper and effective conduct of the affairs of the City by the Mayor and by its departments and agencies.

Section 303. Department Rules and Regulations. Each department shall have power to prescribe rules and regulations not inconsistent with any statute or ordinance for its own government as to the conduct of its officers and employes, the distribution and performance of its business, and the custody, use, and preservation of the books, records, papers, and other property under its control. Such rules and regulations shall not affect the power of any board or commission which has the power to make its own rules and regulations.

Section 304. Department Heads. The head of each department shall be called its director except as otherwise provided by law. He shall exercise the powers and perform the duties by law vested in and imposed upon the department, except as otherwise provided herein. Council shall fix the salaries to be paid department heads, unless otherwise provided by law, and all such salaries so fixed shall be the same. No department head shall hold any other office or employment for profit, whether it be public or private.

Section 305. Powers of Departments Vested in City. The powers and duties vested and imposed by this or any other law on any department, bureau, office, agency, or head thereof shall be taken as vested in the City, to be exercised and performed as herein provided, unless otherwise provided by law.

Section 306. Other Officers and Employees. Except as otherwise provided in this Act, the Mayor shall appoint the assistant director of each department and the first assistant City Solicitor. In the absence or incapacity of the department head to act, or if there is a vacancy in the office of the department head, the assistant of that department shall possess all the powers and perform all the duties of the head of that department until the head returns or his incapacity is removed or until a new head assumes office, as the case may be. The head of the department shall have charge of the appointment of such officers and employees as the Mayor may delegate to him.

Section 307. Bond. Except as otherwise provided by law, each department head shall give bond with surety in the usual form in such sum as may be fixed by Council, to be approved as now provided by law.

Section 308. Warrants. The head of each department shall have power to sign warrants and to appoint in writing one or more deputies to sign warrants, for whose acts he and his sureties shall be responsible. Every written order appointing a deputy to sign warrants under the provisions of this section shall be filed in the office of the City Controller.

Section 309. Annual Report. Each department head shall submit annually a report of his department to the Mayor.

ARTICLE IV

DEPARTMENT OF RECREATION AND PARKS

Section 401. Director. There shall be a department of Recreation and Parks, of which the Director of Recreation and Parks shall be the head. He shall be appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of Council and subject to qualifications of office fixed by the Board of Recreation and Parks.

Section 402. Powers of Department (a) The Department of Recreation and Parks shall have the care, management, administration, and supervision of all recreation and park facilities and property, including without limitation all parks, parkways, municipal, squares, objects of art, objects of natural history, music facilities, playgrounds, athletic fields, swimming pools, bath houses, bathing and shower facilities, recreation centers, recreation piers, municipal recreation camps, and stadia, either within or without the limits of the City, so long as they are owned, used, or controlled by the City.

(b) The department shall have the exclusive and absolute custody and control of and power to plant, set out, remove, maintain, protect, and care for shade trees on any of the public ways of the City.

(c) The Director of Recreation and Parks and such employees as he may designate may act together with school district representatives as a joint committee for the administration of those recreation activities for which school district property and facilities are used. The expenses of such a joint committee may be paid by the City, by the school district, or by both, subject, however, to an appropriation or appropriations duly made.

(d) The Department of Recreation and Parks shall not maintain and repair any roads or highways or supervise or control park guards.

Section 403. Board of Recreation and Parks to be Designated and Known as the Fairmount Park Commission. A Board of Recreation and Parks shall be attached to the Department of Recreation and Parks. The board shall be designated and known as the Fairmount Park Commission and shall consist of seven persons appointed by the judges of the common pleas courts of the City for terms of seven years each, except that the term of the first seven appointees shall be one, two, three, four, five, six, and seven years respectively, as shall be indicated by the judges at the time of their appointment. They shall elect a chairman from their own number. They shall receive no compensation. The Mayor and the president of Council shall be ex-officio members of the board.

Section 404. Powers of the Board. The Board of Recreation and Parks shall

(a) act as trustees of and administer all trust funds for the benefit of the recreation and park facilities and activities of the City and for the planting of shade trees, for which trusts there are or shall be no other trustees; but the care, management, administration, and supervision of such facilities and activities shall be by the Department of Recreation and Parks;

(b) appoint from its membership such persons as the City may be authorized to designate to participate in the management of any association or corporation which uses recreation or park property or facilities or which is engaged in recreation or park activities;

(c) submit to the director for submission to Council, with such changes as he may deem desirable, a schedule of reasonable charges for the use of recreation and park facilities or property, which schedule Council may adopt with or without changes, such charges to be paid into the treasury of the City, but Council shall appropriate at least an equal amount of money for the same general purpose for which the money has been paid;

(d) prepare a comprehensive long-range plan for the extension of recreation and park facilities into new areas within or without the City for the benefit of the residents of the City, and pursuant to this plan the board shall submit to the Planning Board an annual report including a capital budget; and

(e) co-operate with those engaged in recreation or park activities within and without the state.

ARTICLE V

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC HEALTH

Section 501. Director. There shall be a Department of Public Health, of which the Director of Public Health shall be the head. He shall be appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of Council. He shall be a doctor of medicine, licensed in one of the states or by the Federal Government, and shall have completed at least one year of graduate study of public health and shall have been at least five years a director or assistant director of public health in a governmental entity of a population of fifty thousand or more.

Section 502. Powers of Department. The Department of Public Health shall have the care, management, administration, and supervision of City activities relating to public health, including without limitation (a) the activities relating to infectious and contagious diseases, except hospitals for contagious diseases; (b) health education; (c) the promotion of maternal and child health; (d) the compilation of such records as may be necessary for the promotion of public health; (e) the regulation and inspection of housing, sanitation, water, plumbing, and drainage facilities; and (f) the testing of water, milk, meat, and other foods. The department shall test the water supply at least once each month and shall make a report thereon to the Mayor. Reports of all such tests shall be open to the public.

Section 503. Care and Inspection of City Employees. The department shall have responsibility for such care and inspection of the health of City officers and employees as may be provided by law.

Section 504. Board of Health. A Board of Health shall be attached to the Department of Public Health. It shall consist of five persons who have a knowledge of and have demonstrated an interest in public health and at least three of whom shall be licensed doctors of medicine with not less than ten years' experience in public health administration or in teaching in a medical school. Each member of the board shall be appointed by the Mayor for a term of five years, except that the terms of the first five appointees shall be one, two, three, four, and five years respectively, as shall be indicated by the Mayor at the time of their appointment. They shall elect a chairman from their own number. The members of the board shall receive no compensation. The board shall have the powers and duties now vested in it by law.

ARTICLE VI

DEPARTMENT OF MEDICAL AND SOCIAL WELFARE

Section 601. Director. There shall be a Department of Medical and Social Welfare, of which the Director of Medical and Social Welfare shall be the head. He shall be appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of Council.

Section 602. Powers of Department. The Department of Medical and Social Welfare shall have the care, management, administration, and supervision of city activities relating to medical and social welfare, including without limitation (a) all charitable, indigent, medical, and poor-assistance activities, institutions, and agencies which are under the control of the City and are not administered by any other department; (b) the placement of dependent, neglected, incorrigible, and delinquent children whose support is paid for out of the City treasury, the fixing of appropriate standards for institutions in which such children are placed, and the supervision of such children if they are not placed in institutions; (c) the performance of the functions of the City as to supervision and licensing of medical and social agencies and institutions; and (d) the approval and disapproval of bills of the Commonwealth to the City for residents in state institutions for the insane and feeble-minded. The powers of the department shall not be construed to interfere with the functions of any board of directors of City trusts.

ARTICLE VII

DEPARTMENT OF DETENTION AND CORRECTION

Section 701. Directors. There shall be a Department of Detention and Correction, of which the Director of Detention and Correction shall be the head. He shall be appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of Council.

Section 702. Powers of Department. The Department of Detention and Correction shall

(a) have the care, management, administration, and supervision of all institutions owned by the City and used for detention, reformation, or correction, including without limitation houses of correction, reformatories, work-houses, farms, and jails, but not including hospitals, police stations, and institutions used exclusively for the detention or correction of juveniles;

(b) have the care, custody, control, and transportation of all persons who have been detained in institutions under the supervision of the department until their unrestricted freedom or until their removal to a different agency pursuant to court order, and of such juveniles as the courts may from time to time refer to his department;

(c) furnish the judges of the courts of the Commonwealth located in the City with all probation service except for juveniles below the age of sixteen or disobedient, idle, and disorderly minors between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one, unmarried mothers, disorderly street-walkers, persons charged with nonsupport and desertion and other cases involving problems of family life, and with all parole service for adults and with all medical, psychological, and psychopathic service required in connection with the detention and correction of persons who have been charged with crime, or have been sentenced, or whose sentences have been postponed or suspended;

(d) collect, hold, keep accounts of, and disburse all moneys in every case in which an order has been made for support which is enforceable by imprisonment; and

(e) at any hearing in the City on a petition for parole of a person in the custody of the department, submit to the court a report and a recommendation as approved by the Board of Probation and Parole pertaining to the granting of the parole, provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to derogate in any way whatsoever from the powers of the judges of the Municipal Court of Philadelphia or to limit the jurisdiction thereof or in any way change, alter, or amend any of the provisions of the Act approved the twelfth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and thirteen (P. L. 711), creating the court or the amendments and supplements thereto.

Section 703 Board of Probation and Parole. A Board of Probation and Parole shall be attached to the Department of Detention and Correction. The board shall consist of the director of the department ex-officio, three persons appointed by a majority of judges of the courts of common pleas of the County in which they City is situated, and three persons appointed by a majority of the judges of any other trial court of the Commonwealth having any criminal jurisdiction in such County. Members of the board other than the ex-officio member shall hold office for a term of seven years. The members shall elect a chairman from their own number. The members of the board shall receive no compensation. The Board of Probation and Parole shall have the power and duty to inspect all institutions under the jurisdiction of the department and to make rules and regulations pertaining to the supervision of persons released on probation by any court located in the City or released on parole from any institution under the supervision of the department.

ARTICLE VIII

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

Section 801. Director. There shall be a Department of Public Safety, of which the Director of Public Safety shall be the head. He shall be appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of Council. The Mayor shall have the power to appoint a fire marshal and assistants who shall continue to have the powers and duties now or hereafter vested in them by law.

Section 802. Powers of Department. The Department of Public Safety shall have the care, management, administration, and supervision of the police affairs of the City, including without limitation all matters relating to (a) the fire and police forces, including the park police; (b) the installation, repair, and maintenance of fire alarm, police communication, and traffic light systems; (c) the erection, care, and maintenance of traffic signs and the marking and maintenance of traffic lines; (d) the inspection of weights and measures; (e) the enforcement of laws regulating the weight of loaded vehicles on the highways; and (f) the inspection of and issuance of permits for the construction of buildings, fire escapes, engines, and boilers.

Section 803. Qualifications of Policemen and Firemen. No person shall be employed in the Department of Public Safety as a policeman or fireman who is not a citizen of the United States or has been convicted of crime, unless pardoned, or cannot read or write understandingly in the English language, or shall not have resided within the Commonwealth at least one year preceding his appointment.

Section 804. Police Matrons. A female officer shall be provided for each police station house to which female prisoners and children are taken. She shall be known as a police matron, and it shall be her duty to receive, search, take charge of, and properly care for all female prisoners and children who are brought to such station house.

Section 805. Uniforms; Penalty for False Personation. The Department of Public Safety shall make suitable regulations under which the officers and members of the fire and police forces shall be required to wear appropriate uniforms. It shall be a misdemeanor punishable by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500), or imprisonment not exceeding six (6) months, or both, in the discretion of the court, for any person falsely to personate by uniform insignia, badge, or otherwise any officer or member of the department.

Section 806. Additional Patrolmen for Special Places. The Director of Public Safety may appoint and cause to be sworn in any night watchman or any number of additional patrolmen to do duty at any public, athletic, or social gathering at the expense of the persons who ask for such appointment. They shall be subject to and obey the orders, rules, and regulations of the department and conform to the general discipline and special regulations thereof.

ARTICLE IX

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC UTILITIES

Section 901. Director. There shall be a Department of Public Utilities, of which the Director of Public Utilities shall be the head. He shall be appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of Council.

Section 902. Powers of Department. The Department of Public Utilities shall have the care, management, administration, and supervision of all waterworks, including the reading of meters, gas works, harbor facilities, and operations other than dredging and ice breaking, transit and airport facilities, and other public utilities owned, controlled, or operated by the City. The department shall determine the character and type and shall control the design and supervision of the construction of all utilities and of all additions, replacements, betterments, and extensions to utilities which are to be paid for in whole or in part out of the City treasury or out of the revenues or other funds of utilities owned, controlled, or operated by the City. It shall have the power to enter into contracts subject to the approval of Council, to supply utility service to persons, firms, corporations, or municipalities outside the City limits, and such contracts need not be approved by the Public Utility Commission.

Section 903. Accounts and Reports. Accounts shall be kept for each public utility owned, controlled, or operated by the City, distinct from other City accounts and in such manner as to show all the operations and financial results of such City ownership, control, or operation, including all assets, liabilities, reserve funds, revenues, and expenses. Such accounts and other records shall be kept in the manner provided by law. The director, in his annual report to the Mayor, shall show in reasonable detail the information specified in this section and such other information as Council or the Mayor shall direct.

Section 904. Utility Surveys. The director shall from time to time make or cause to be made such studies and surveys as to him seem proper for the improvement and development of the utilities which are in whole or in part owned, controlled, or operated by the City or for the purpose of determining the need or desirability for City acquisition or construction of other utilities. He shall, upon the request of the Mayor, investigate, study, and advise concerning rates and services of any public utility serving the City or its residents.

ARTICLE X

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS

Section 1001. Director. There shall be a Department of Public Works, of which the Director of Public Works shall be the head. He shall be appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of Council.

Section 1002. Powers of Department. The Department of Public Works shall have the administration and supervision of (a) the design and construction of bridges, the grading and paving of all streets, alleys, highways, and footways of the City and the care, repairing, maintenance, and cleaning thereof, and all matters and things relating to or affecting the streets, alleys, highways, and footways within the City and its park areas; (b) the collection and disposal of refuse; (c) surveys; and (d) the design, construction, maintenance, and operation of drainage, sewerage, and sewage disposal facilities.

Section 1003. Board of Surveyors. The Board of Surveyors shall consist of a chief engineer and surveyor, who shall be president thereof, and assistant chief engineer and surveyor, who shall be vice-president thereof, and the surveyors and regulators of the several survey districts. Council shall have power to divide the City into survey districts and to increase or reduce the number thereof. There shall be a chief engineer and surveyor and assistant chief engineer and surveyor and a surveyor and regulator for each survey district. The chief engineer and surveyor shall be at the time of appointment a registered civil engineer of at least five years' experience. The assistant chief engineer and surveyor and each district surveyor and regulator shall have had at the time of appointment at least five years' experience in surveying and regulating. The Board of Surveyors shall be attached to and be a part of the Department of Public Works and shall continue to have the powers and duties now vested in it by law.

ARTICLE XI

DEPARTMENT OF CITY PROPERTY

Section 1101. Director. There shall be a Department of City Property, of which the Director of City Property shall be the head. He shall be appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of Council.

Section 1102. Powers of Department. Except as otherwise provided in this Act, the Department of City Property shall have charge of (a) the administration and supervision of the design, construction, alteration, and repair of all public buildings and structures to be paid for out of the City treasury; (b) the care, management, operation, and cleaning of all public buildings, including commercial museums, exhibition and convention halls, market, and all offices leased or occupied for public use which are to be paid for out of the City treasury; and (c) the operation of a central municipal telephone, mail, and messenger service.

Section 1103. Bureau of Architecture. There shall be in the department a Bureau of Architecture, to be headed by a City Architect. Its duty shall be to prepare all plans and general specifications of public buildings to be paid for out of the City treasury, but the City Architect may appoint, subject to the approval of the Mayor, architects in private practice for a particular project, when in the opinion of the City Architect and the head of the department under whose jurisdiction the work is to be done the character or magnitude of the project requires the employment of architects in private practice.

It shall be unlawful for the City Controller to countersign or for the City Treasurer to pay warrants or checks for the expenditure of moneys from the City treasury for the erection or construction of any public building except upon certificate of the City Architect that the drawings, plans, and general specifications of such public building have been prepared, drafted, and executed by him or under his supervision or by an architect selected as above set forth.

ARTICLE XII

THE DEPARTMENT OF PORT, COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY

Section 1201. Director. There shall be a Department of Port, Commerce, and Industry, of which the Director of Port, Commerce and Industry shall be the head. He shall be appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of Council.

Section 1202. Powers of Department. The Department of Port, Commerce, and Industry shall have the powers and duties now by law vested in and imposed on the Director of Wharves, Docks and Ferries. The department shall also manage all City activities relating to the promotion and development of the commercial and industrial interests of the City, including without limitation promotional activities in connection with any commercial museums and exhibitions or convention halls, and shall assist the City Solicitor in proceedings concerning transportation rates, and shall promote and develop aviation and port activities. The department shall have the power to make rules and regulations and to fix schedules of fees for the purpose of permitting persons, firms, or corporations to make incidental use of facilities which are devoted primarily to the commercial and industrial development of the City. Such rules, regulations, and schedules shall not be inconsistent with any ordinance of Council.

Section 1203. Board of Commerce and Industry. A Board of Commerce and Industry shall be attached to the Department of Port, Commerce, and Industry. The board shall consist of seven persons appointed by the Mayor for terms of seven years each, except that the terms of the first seven appointees shall be one, two, three, four, five, six, and seven years respectively, as shall be indicated by the Mayor at the time of their appointment. They shall elect a chairman from their own number. They shall receive no compensation. The board shall advise the department in matters relating to the exercise and performance of its powers and duties.

ARTICLE XIII

DEPARTMENT OF LAW

Section 1301. City Solicitor. There shall be a Department of Law, of which the City Solicitor shall be the head. He shall be appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of Council. The City Solicitor, assistant solicitors, and all other employees engaged in the practice of law shall be attorneys-at-law, admitted and qualified to practice in the Supreme Court of this Commonwealth.

Section 1302. Powers and Duties. The City solicitor shall

(a) Be the counsel for the City for all branches of the City government, including Council, and, except as provided herein, for all departments and officers of the City and for all public agencies the expenses of which are paid out of the City treasury, and the authorization in writing of the Mayor shall be a sufficient warrant of attorney for representing the City, its departments, and officers;

(b) Prepare or approve all contracts to be made with the City or any of its trusts and departments, or with any public agency the expenses of which are paid out of the City treasury, and indorse on each his approval of the form thereof before the same shall be executed on behalf of the City, and be the custodian of all such papers and records as may be designated, and perform such other duties appertaining to his department as may be required by statute or ordinance; and

(c) Prepare or approve all contracts, bonds, and other instruments of writing in which the City or any public agency, the expenses of which are paid out of the City treasury, is concerned, and receive for the City a reasonable fee from the persons for whom such contracts, bonds, or instruments may be drawn, to be fixed by ordinance, and shall approve all security required to be given for the protection of the City, and keep a proper registry of all such contracts, bonds, and instruments.

Section 1303. City Solicitor to Serve all Departments.

No department or other branch of City government or public agency whose expenditures are paid out of the City treasury other than the Civil Service Commission and the City Controller shall employ counsel other than the City Solicitor, but assistant counsel selected by the City Solicitor may be employed in any particular matter or cause by the Mayor with the consent of counsel.

ARTICLE XIV

DEPARTMENT OF CIVIL SERVICE

Section 1401. Director. There shall be a Department of Civil Service, of which the Personnel Director shall be the administrative head. He shall be selected in the manner hereinafter provided.

Section 1402. Civil Service Commission. A Civil Service Commission shall be attached to the Department of Civil Service. The Commission shall be composed of three persons known to be in sympathy with the application of the merit system and of other features of modern personnel practices in the public service. The commissioners shall be elected by each newly elected Council at its first meeting for a term of four years.

Section 1403. Election of Commissioners. A person eligible for Commissioner shall be elected by the affirmative vote of not less than three nor more than five Councilmen, provided, however, that no Councilman may participate in the election of more than one of the three Commissioners.

Section 1404. Vacancies. A vacancy in the membership of the commission shall be filled by the affirmative vote of a majority of those Councilmen who did not vote for the Commissioners remaining in office.

Section 1405. ELIGIBILITY AND SALARIES OF COMMISSIONER. No person who holds any public office or who within one year preceding his election has been an officer of a political party or a member of a committee of a political party shall be eligible to serve as a Commissioner. The Commissioners shall elect from their own number a chairman to serve for two years, and he shall receive an annual compensation of five thousand five hundred dollars ($5,500). Each of the other commissioners shall receive an annual compensation of five thousand dollars ($5,000).

Section 1406. REMOVAL OF COMMISSIONERS. Council may, by the affirmative vote of two thirds of its members holding office, remove any Commissioner for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or misconduct in office. A Commissioner shall not be removed until he has been given a statement in writing of the charges against him and has been afforded, after notice of not less than ten days, an opportunity of filing a reply and of being publicly heard by Council in person or by attorney. Copies of the charges of his reply and of the findings of Council shall be filed with the secretary of the commission, and they shall be matters of public record.

Section 1407. MEETINGS. The commission shall hold regular meetings as fixed by rule.

Section 1408. POWERS AND DUTIES OF COMMISSION. (a) The commission shall

(1) after public hearing adopt or change rules for the administration and enforcement of this article, which rules shall have the force and effect of law one week after their adoption;

(2) after public hearing approve with or without modification such classification plans as may be recommended by the director;

(3) make investigations requested by the Mayor or Council or may make investigations requested by any employe or by a citizen or of its own motion concerning the enforcement and effect of this article;

(4) transmit to Council and to the Mayor the report of the director with comments, criticisms, or suggestions for the more effectual accomplishment of the purposes of this article; and

(5) keep complete and permanent records open to public inspection of all actions taken at its meetings and hearings.

(b) Each member of the commission, the director, and any other employe or agent authorized by the commission shall have the power to administer oaths in matters pertaining to the work of the department. The commission shall have power to secure by subpoena the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents and other evidence. Any judge of a court of record may, upon application by the commission, compel the attendance of witnesses, the production of documents and other evidence, and the giving of testimony before the commission by attachment for contempt or otherwise in the same manner as the production of evidence may be compelled before such court.

(c) The commission shall have the power to make arrangements and agreements with other public personnel agencies for the use and exchange of services.

Section 1409. PUBLIC HEARING. The term "public hearing," when used in this article, shall be construed to mean an opportunity given after notice of at least five days for any citizen or party in interest to be heard in public at reasonable length.

Section 1410. PERSONNEL DIRECTOR. A special Board of Examiners designated by the commission shall hold competitive tests and establish an employment list for the office of Personnel Director in accordance with the testing procedure and principles prescribed in this article. The commission shall certify to the Mayor the names of the persons having the three highest grades on the list. From the names so certified the Mayor shall appoint the director. Any person appointed as director shall at the time of his appointment be familiar with and known to be in sympathy with the application of the merit system in the public service.

Section 1411. POWERS AND DUTIES OF DIRECTOR. The director shall

(a) attend all meetings of the Commission, act as its secretary, and record its official actions.

(b) prepare and recommend to the commission rules and amendments thereto and administer the rules adopted by the commission;

(c) appoint under the provisions of this article an assistant director and all other employes of the department;

(d) establish and maintain in card or other suitable form a roster of officers and employes of the City, showing for each the title of his position, the rate of compensation, and every change in his status, including increases in pay, changes in title, transfers, sick and annual leaves with or without pay, and other facts which the director may consider pertinent;

(e) prepare a classification plan as provided in this article;

(f) prepare a compensation plan as provided in this article;

(g) pass upon the qualifications of applicants for appointment to or for promotion in the classified service; establish and maintain employment and reemployment lists of the various classes of positions; devise, install, and administer service rating systems; arrange for and pass upon transfers; administer rules of the commission as to annual sick and special leaves of absence, reinstatements, and attendance; and see that layoffs, demotions, suspensions, removals, resignations, retirements, and other separations are made in accordance with this article;

(h) check and certify payrolls as provided in this article;

(i) make on or before the first day of March of each year an annual report to the commission concerning the administrative work of the department; and

(j) investigate from time to time the effects of the administration of this article and the rules made thereunder and report his findings to the commission.

Section 1412. LEGAL COUNSEL. The City Solicitor shall be the counsel for the commission. The commission may, however, whenever it deems it necessary, appoint special counsel in a particular matter. The total compensation to be paid for all such special counsel during any fiscal year shall not exceed two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500).

Section 1413. DIVISION OF SERVICE. The Civil Service of the City is hereby divided into the unclassified and classified service:

(a) The unclassified service shall comprise

(1) all officers elected by the people;

(2) the director of each department, except the personnel director;

(3) members of boards and commissions established by this act;

(4) the City Solicitor and the first assistant city solicitor;

(5) the first deputy controller and the assistant treasurer;

(6) anyone employed by contract to perform a special service for the city if the Civil Service Commission certifies that the service cannot be performed satisfactorily by persons in the classified service;

(7) anyone appointed in the time of public emergency, as a special policeman or fireman, for service not to exceed thirty days;

(8) anyone appointed to make a special inquiry if the Civil Service Commission certifies that the inquiry should not be made by anyone in the classified service;

(9) one clerk or secretary to the Mayor; and

(10) the clerk of Council.

(b) The classified service shall include all positions now existing or hereafter created in the service of the City not specifically included in the unclassified service. The classified service shall be divided into the labor division and the competitive division. The labor division shall comprise all positions the work of which can be satisfactorily performed by unskilled laborers. The competitive division shall include all positions in the classified service other than those in the labor division.

Section 1414. CLASSIFICATION PLAN. The director shall, after consulting the appointing authorities, ascertain and record the duties of positions in the classified service and establish classes, giving a complete description of each class. He shall submit the plan to the commission within twelve months after his appointment. Each class in the plan shall include all positions which are sufficiently similar in respect to the duties and responsibilities thereof so that the same descriptive title may be used for each of such positions; the same requirements as to education, experience, knowledge, and ability are demanded of incumbents for the proper performance of their duties; the same tests of fitness may be used in choosing qualified appointees; and the same schedule of compensation may be made to apply with equity under like working conditions to all positions in the class.

Section 1415. ADOPTION OF PLAN. After reasonable opportunity to be heard has been given to employees, appointing authorities, and the general public, and after approval by the Mayor, the commission, after incorporating any changes it deems advantageous, shall adopt the classification plan within three months after its receipt from the director. Thereafter the class titles so established shall be used in all personal accounting, budget appropriation, and financial records relating to payments for services.

Section 1416. AMENDMENTS TO PLAN. Additional classes may be established and existing classes may be changed or abolished upon recommendation of the director and approval of the commission after public hearing. Except as otherwise provided by this article, no person shall be appointed to or employed in any position until it has been properly classified as herein provided, and appropriate employment list has been established therefor.

Section 1417. ALLOCATION OF POSITIONS. After adoption of the classification plan the director shall allocate every position in the classified service to one of the classes established by the plan. Thereafter, as new positions are created or additional classes are established or existing classes changed, the director shall make such allocations or reallocations of positions as are necessitated thereby, provided, however, that where an amendment to the classification plan requires the reallocation of an existing position the employee holding such position shall have reasonable right to be heard before final action is taken.

Section 1418. COMPENSATION PLAN. The director shall, as soon as practicable after the adoption of the classification plan, submit to the Mayor a proposed plan of compensation, showing for each class of position in the classified service minimum and maximum salary rates and such intermediate rates as he deems desirable. After a reasonable opportunity to be heard has been given to employees, appointing authorities, and the general public, and after incorporating changes he considers desirable, the Mayor shall transmit the compensation plan to Council. Council shall adopt the plan with or without modification within three months after receiving it and may at any time change the compensation plan, but only in accordance with the classification plan. The Mayor, upon the recommendation of the director or upon his own motion, may transmit to Council proposed changes in compensation plans and the reasons therefor.

Section 1419. RATES OF PAY. After the adoption of a compensation plan or changes in the schedule of compensation for any class, the future appropriations shall be in accordance therewith. The rate of pay for any employe upon appointment to a position in the class shall be the minimum rate prescribed for that class, provided however, that where the appointee is already in the classified service his compensation after appointment shall be at the same rate as that which he received before appointment, or if no such rate appears in the schedule for that class, then his compensation shall be at the next higher rate in the schedule. Increases in rates of pay shall be to the next higher rate for that class and shall be granted by the appointing authority pursuant to rules of the commission, except that the rate of pay of any employe shall not be increased unless Council has appropriated funds from which the increases may lawfully be paid, nor shall the rate for any employe be increased beyond the maximum of the class.

Section 1420. SELECTION OF EMPLOYES. Except as otherwise provided in this article, appointment of persons to the classified service or promotions therein shall be from employment lists established as the result of examinations which are competitive, free, and open to all persons, subject, however, to such limitations as may be specified by the director as to age, sex, citizenship, residence, health, habits, and moral character and subject to the prerequisite qualifications included in the classification plan. The director may, upon recommendation of the Mayor, limit competition in promotion examinations to employes in the classified service who have served in a designated class or classes.

Section 1421. RE-EMPLOYMENT LISTS. For each class where such action is appropriate the director shall cause to be maintained a re-employment list consisting of the names of persons who have occupied positions in the class and have been separated from the service without fault on their own part, taken leave of absence and are ready to return to duty when a position is open, resigned in good standing and with the consent of the appointing authority and of the director have withdrawn their resignation, been removed and, by direction of the commission, have been given an opportunity for re-employment in some unit other than that from which they have been dismissed. The names shall be arranged for each class in order of the average service rating of the employes for the last six months of service in the class. In the absence of service rating the order shall be as provided by the rules of the commission. After a name has remained on a re-employment list for one year it shall be removed from the list unless retained by action of the commission before the expiration of the one-year period.

Section 1422. EMPLOYMENT LISTS. The director shall have charge of preparing and giving examinations to establish employment lists whenever he deems such employment lists necessary. An examination may consist of a written or oral test, a demonstration of skill, or of any combination of these, and shall be of such character as fairly to test and determine the qualifications, fitness, and ability of competitors to perform the duties of the class of positions to which they seek appointment. In such examinations credit may be given for experience and education. No question in any examination shall relate to the race, religion, politics, or labor opinion or affiliation of the candidate. The director may call on other persons to draw up, conduct, or mark examinations, and when such persons are officers or employes of the City it shall be deemed a part of their official duty to render such assistance without extra compensation.

Section 1423. NOTICE OF EXAMINATIONS. The director shall give public notice of all examinations at least two weeks in advance. The notice shall be posted on a bulletin board in or near the principal office of the director and in a place accessible to the public during business hours. The examinations shall be given such other publicity as the director may determine. Notices of examination shall contain such information as may be provided by the rules of the commission.

Section 1424. MARKING OF EXAMINATIONS. The final rating of each candidate in any examination shall be determined by weighted averages according to the weight of each test as published by the director in the notice of the examination. Honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, or marines who have served as such in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States or in the National Guard of the Commonwealth shall be given full credit for their experience gained in such service, having due regard to the position for which the examination is held. Each candidate shall be sent notice by mail of his final rating and of his relative standing or of his failure to attain a place upon the list and the reason therefor. From the report of the examiners the director shall prepare an employment list containing the names of persons, arranged in order of excellence, who have been given at least such minimum rating as may be fixed in advance for the whole examination and for any one or more of the tests which make up the examination and who are otherwise qualified.

Section 1425. COMBINATION AND CANCELLATION OF EMPLOYMENT LISTS. Each employment list shall continue in force for a period to be fixed by the rules of the commission. The period may vary for different classes of positions but may not be less than one year for any class. Any period, before its expiration, may be extended by the commission upon recommendation of the director. A new employment list for any class shall be combined with the existing list, if any, but such combination shall not prevent the automatic cancellation of any portion of such combined lists at the end of the period fixed by such rules, unless held in force as above provided. In no case, however, shall a person continue on an employment list for a period longer than two years. The director shall examine any employment list or any part of an employment list which has been in effect for one year and shall take such steps as he may deem necessary to determine whether the persons on the list are still eligible and willing to accept appointment. The director, with the approval of the commission, may at any time correct clerical errors in the preparation of any employment list and revise the list accordingly, but no person who has been appointed as the result of certification shall be displaced by such action. The commission shall have the power at any time after a public hearing to cancel the whole or any part of an employment list on account of illegality, mistake, or fraud.

Section 1426. TESTS FOR LABOR DIVISION. Tests for positions in the labor division shall, as far as practicable, conform to the tests for the competitive division, but the commission may by rule provide for the registration of ordinary unskilled laborers following such medical, physical, or other tests as may be prescribed. The commission shall by rule determine the order in which the names shall be placed on the employment list and the number of names which may be certified.

Section 1427. APPOINTMENT IN THE CLASSIFIED SERVICE. (a) Whenever a vacancy in a permanent position in the competitive division of the classified service is to be filled the appointing authority shall notify the director in writing. The director shall certify the names of the three persons willing to accept appointment who are highest on a list consisting of the re-employment list for that class, followed by the employment list for that class. If this does not give three names to the appointing authority and if the appointing authority is not willing to choose from less than three names, the director shall promptly conduct an examination to form or to increase an employment list.

(b) A position shall be deemed to be permanent when it is specifically provided for in the annual financial program or when it is established in a department or institution according to law and is likely to be needed continuously for a period of six months or more.

Section 1428. PROVISIONAL APPOINTMENTS. If the director shall fail to certify in the manner herein provided for an existing vacancy within thirty days after receiving a request, the appointing authority may, if necessary to prevent the serious impairment of public business but not otherwise, appoint provisionally any qualified person, with or without holding any test. In all such cases the provisional appointee shall, before beginning work, fill out and forward to the director an application form. Each such appointment shall be effective only until an appropriate list has been established. Such an appointment shall not in any event continue for a total of more than sixty days. Successive provisional appointments of the same or different persons shall not be made to the same position. No credit shall be given to anyone in any examination for experience gained during a provisional appointment.

Section 1429. APPOINTMENT OR REJECTION OF ELIGIBLES. Unless it is found to be in the interest of the public service not to fill the vacant position, the appointing authority shall, within a reasonable time fixed by the rules of the commission, make an appointment from the names certified by the director. All appointments shall be reported to the director. After a name has been rejected three times by an appointing authority in favor of others on the same employment list such name shall not again be certified to that appointing authority unless requested by him. If any eligible shall refuse an appointment offered to him his name shall be removed from the re-employment or employment list, if in the opinion of the director such refusal was based on improper or insufficient reasons.

Section 1430. TEMPORARY EMPLOYEES. When because of the pressure of work a position in the classified service must be established for a period of less than six months, the appointing authority shall request the director in writing to certify the name of a qualified person. The appointing authority shall state the cause of the extra work, the probable length of employment, and, unless the position has been classified, the duties which the appointee is to perform. The director may certify a qualified person, with or without holding a competitive examination, for a period of employment not exceeding three months. Such temporary appointments shall not be renewed more than once. No credit shall be given in any examination for experience gained during a temporary appointment.

Section 1431. EMERGENCY EMPLOYEES. When an emergency arises such that in order to prevent loss of public property or avoid serious inconvenience to the public one or more persons must be immediately employed without taking the time to secure proper authorization, any appointing authority or any subordinate authorized by him may appoint any qualified person during the emergency for a period not exceeding ten days. Persons thus appointed shall be known as "emergency employees." Any employment condition of which the appointing authority had previous knowledge or of which by the exercise of due diligence he might have had previous knowledge shall not be considered an emergency. Appointing authorities shall forthwith report to the director all emergency appointments. Such appointments shall not be renewed, nor shall credit be given in any examination for experience gained therefrom.

Section 1432. PROBATIONARY PERIOD. No appointment to a position in the classified service from the employment list shall be deemed complete until after the expiration of a probationary period. The probationary period for each class of position shall be prescribed in the rules of the commission and shall in no case be less than two months nor more than six months. At the end of two months and any time thereafter until the expiration of the probationary period the appointing authority may remove any probationary employee from his position if, in the opinion of the appointing authority, the employee has shown that he is unable or unwilling to do his duties satisfactorily, provided, however, that the appointing authority shall furnish the director a statement in writing of the cause of the dismissal. In no case shall the total probationary period of successive appointees to any one position extend beyond six months from the date of the first appointment.

Section 1433. IN-SERVICE TRAINING. The director shall make plans and co-operate with appointing authorities and other supervising officials in respect to the conduct of employee training programs, to the end that the quality of service rendered by persons in the classified service may be continually improved.

Section 1434. SERVICE RATINGS. The director shall, as soon as practicable after this article takes effect, establish standards of performance and a uniform system of service ratings for each class of position. Such standards shall, as far as practicable, be based upon the quantity and quality of work done and upon the conduct of the employee at work. Service ratings shall constitute grounds for increases and decreases in rates of compensation for demotions and removals and for promotions. Supervising officials shall submit to the director upon his request the ratings of their employees, but in no case shall a supervising official be compelled to prepare or submit such ratings oftener than once in six months.

Section 1435. TRANSFERS OF EMPLOYEES. An appointing authority may at any time transfer any classified employee under his jurisdiction from one position to another position in the same class. In every such case the appointing authority shall give prior written notice of his action to the director. A transfer of an employee from one class to another class for which a higher maximum rate of compensation is prescribed shall be a promotion and may be accomplished only as herein provided for promotions. No person shall ever be transferred from a position in the unclassified service to a position in the classified service without examination as herein provided. The transfer of an employee to a position in another class for which a lower maximum rate of compensation is prescribed or any transfer which involves a reduction in compensation shall be a demotion and may be accomplished only as herein provided for demotion. Such demotions may be made upon the recommendation of the appointing authority or upon the petition of the employee, supported by such evidence as the director may require to show that the employee is not performing satisfactorily in the position he is holding but is able to perform the duties of the class to which it is recommended or petitioned that he be demoted.

Section 1436. LEAVES OF ABSENCE. The commission shall by rules provide for annual sick and special leaves of absence to employees with or without pay or with reduced pay. No employee shall be granted leave of absence except pursuant to such rules.

Section 1437. LAYOFFS. Where a reduction in force is necessary because of changes in organization or because of stoppage or lack of work, the employees having the lowest service rating in the unit and in the class affected shall be laid off. In the absence of service ratings the order of layoff shall be established by rules of the commission. The appointing authority shall promptly report to the director the name and position of any employee laid off, together with the effective date of the layoff. The name of said employee shall then be placed upon the re-employment list for the appropriate class as herein provided.

Section 1438. SUSPENSIONS. An appointing authority may for good cause suspend a classified employee for disciplinary purposes without pay for not more than thirty working days in any twelve-month period. The commission shall state in its rules what shall constitute good cause for suspension, but no one shall be suspended for racial, religious, or political reasons, or for labor union affiliations. Every case of suspension, together with the reasons therefor, shall forthwith be reported to the commission in writing, and such report shall be made part of the public records of the commission.

Section 1439. DISMISSAL DURING PROBATIONARY PERIOD. An employee dismissed during probation shall be considered permanently separated from such position, but the director may, if he considers such action appropriate, place the name of the person on the employment list of the appropriate class for future certification to other appointing authorities.

Section 1440. RESIGNATIONS. The rules of the commission shall state what shall constitute resignation. Absence from duty without notice to the appointing authority for a period of three working days may be regarded by the appointing authority, pursuant to rules of the commission, as an abandonment of a position and in effect a resignation. No person who has voluntarily resigned from the service shall be reinstated within six months from the effective date of his resignation. No resignation of any person in the classified service shall be effective unless accepted within fifteen days after the actual date of the making thereof. No person in advance of or at the time of his appointment to any position in the Civil Service shall sign or execute a resignation, dated or undated. No resignation shall be made or shall be valid unless it bears the signature of the person resigning and the date of the resignation in his handwriting. Any person who leaves the classified service may request the commission in writing for a public hearing, stating his reasons for such a request. If on investigation the commission finds that the employee has been forced to resign against his will and without just cause, or that his separation from the service has been involuntary and without just cause, the commission shall grant such person at the earliest opportunity a public hearing as hereinafter provided in the case of removal or demotion and shall treat the separation as though it were a removal.

Section 1441. DISMISSALS AND DEMOTIONS. (a) No person in the classified service shall be dismissed, reduced in pay, or demoted in position except for just cause. Race or religion or political or labor affiliation shall not constitute just cause. No person shall be dismissed, reduced, or demoted, except as otherwise herein specifically provided, until he shall have been furnished by the appointing authority with a written notice setting forth the reasons for such action and allowed at least ten days to file a written answer. In every case a copy of such reasons and of the answer thereto, if any, shall be promptly furnished to the commission and shall be part of its public records.

(b) Within thirty days after receiving such records the commission may, on its own initiative, and shall, upon the request of the employee if filed within ten days after his dismissal, reduction, or demotion, make such investigation as it may deem advisable, either sitting as a body or through one or more of its members or through the director. The investigation and any hearings on the charges shall be for the purpose of determining whether the employee involved by reason of his act or acts charged and his record of service merits continuance in the service or whether he should be dismissed, reduced or demoted, or otherwise disciplined for the good of the service. In all hearings the commission shall not be required to follow established rules or evidence or court procedure but shall seek all information and evidence bearing on the merits of the case. All such hearings shall be open to the public, and the employee involved shall have opportunity to be heard in his own defense personally or through counsel. Within fifteen days after the completion of an investigation or hearing the commission shall make its findings and render its decision, which shall forthwith be certified, to the appointing authority and forthwith enforced by him. Charges against any employee in the classified service asking for his removal for a violation of law or for a cause stated in the rules may be filed before the commission by any taxpayer. Such charges shall be investigated, determined, and enforced in the manner provided in this section, unless the commission shall decide that the charges do not warrant investigation, in which case the decision of the commission shall be made part of its public records.

Section 1442. CERTIFICATION OF PAYROLLS. No payroll check shall be issued or paid except upon warrant of the City Controller. The City Controller shall issue no warrant for services except upon payrolls containing the names, titles, periods for which payments are to be made, and rates of pay of the persons to be paid, and bearing the certificate of the Personnel Director that the persons on the payroll have been appointed and employed according to law, and bearing the certificate of the respective department that the persons on the payroll have been present and working or have been on authorized leave with pay for the period specified. Any sums paid contrary to the provisions of this article and the rules thereunder may be recovered from the officer or employe who violates such provisions and rules or from their sureties. Actions for such recovery may be maintained by a taxpayer of the City. All moneys recovered in an action brought under this section shall be paid into the City treasury, except that the plaintiff shall be entitled to receive costs of such action.

Section 1443. MISDEMEANORS. Any person who wilfully, by himself or in collusion with one or more persons, shall defeat, receive, or obstruct any person in respect to his right of examination, appointment, or employment according to this article or to any rules prescribed pursuant thereto; or who shall, wilfully or corruptly, falsely mark, grade, estimate, or report upon the examination or proper standing of any person examined or certified pursuant to the provisions of this article, or aid in so doing; or who shall wilfully make any false representation concerning the same or concerning the persons examined; or who shall wilfully or corruptly furnish to any person any special or secret information for the purpose of either improving or injuring the prospects or chances of any person so examined or certified or to be examined or certified; or who shall personate any other person or permit or aid in any manner any other person to personate him in connection with any examination or request to be examined or appointed; or who shall furnish any false information about himself or about any other person in connection with any application or request to be examined or appointed; or who shall make an appointment to office or select a person for employment contrary to the provisions of this article; or who shall wilfully refuse to comply with or to perform any of the provisions of this article; or who shall wilfully or through culpable negligence violate any of the provisions of this article or of the rules made pursuant thereto shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punishable by a fine of not less than fifty dollars ($50) nor more than one thousand dollars ($1,000) in the discretion of the court. Any person holding a public office or position who is convicted under this section shall be deemed to have vacated the office or position and shall be incapable of holding public office for a period of five years after the date of such conviction.

Section 1444. PROHIBITION OF POLITICAL ACTIVITY. No officer or employe who is paid out of the City treasury, other than an officer elected by the people, shall be a member of or delegate or alternate to any political convention or participate at any such convention except in the performance of his official duties, or shall serve as a member of or attend the meetings of any committee of any political party, or take any active part in political management or in political campaigns. No application, memorandum or other document other than registration and election records shall in any way indicate the political affiliation of any applicant to or member of the classified service. No appointed or elected officer or employe shall use his office to influence political movements or influence the political action of any other officer or employe of the City, or shall interfere with the conduct of any election or the preparation therefore at the polling place or with the election officers while counting the vote or returning the ballot boxes, books, and papers to the place provided by law for that purpose, or be within any polling place save only for the purpose of voting as speedily as reasonable can be done, or be within fifty feet thereof, except for purposes of ordinary travel or residence, within one hour preceding the opening of the polls for holding such election and ending when the election officers have finished counting the votes and have left the polling place for the purpose of depositing the ballot boxes and papers in the place provided by law for that purpose, excepting only police officers, who may temporarily approach or enter the polling place in order to make any arrest permitted by law or for the purpose of preserving order, and in each such case only long enough to accomplish the duties aforesaid, after which the officers shall at once withdraw.

Section 1445. PROHIBITION OF ASSESSMENTS. No person shall solicit, pay, give, or receive in any public building of the City any money or valuable thing for any political purpose whatever. No person shall, orally or by written or printed communication, directly or indirectly, demand, solicit, collect, or receive, or be in any manner concerned in demanding, soliciting, collecting, or receiving any money or valuable thing or any assessment, subscription, or contribution, whether voluntary or involuntary, from any officer or employe in the classified service for any political purpose whatever. No person in the classified service shall, orally or by written or printed communication, directly or indirectly, demand, solicit, collect, or receive, or be in any manner concerned in demanding, soliciting, collecting, or receiving any money or valuable thing for any political purpose whatever. No person in the classified service shall pay or give any money or valuable thing or make any subscription or contribution, whether voluntary or involuntary, for any political purpose whatsoever.

Section 1446. DISMISSAL AND DISQUALIFICATION. Any person in the service of the City who violates any of the provisions of this article or the rules made thereunder shall be immediately separated from the service. It shall be the duty of the Mayor or other appointing authority who employs the offending person to dismiss him at once. Any taxpayer may bring suit to restrain the payment of compensation or the issuing of warrants for the payment of compensation of any such officer or employe, and as an additional remedy any taxpayer may also obtain a writ of mandamus to compel the dismissal of such offending officer or employe. Any person dismissed under this section shall for a period of five years be ineligible for appointment to any position in the Civil Service

ARTICLE XV

DEPARTMENT OF CITY PLANNING

Section 1501. DIRECTOR. There shall be a Department of City Planning, the head of which shall be the Director of City Planning, who shall be appointed by the Planning Board. The director shall appoint the assistant director and shall have charge of the appointment of the other employes of the department.

Section 1502. PLANNING BOARD. A Planning Board shall be attached to the Department of City Planning. It shall consist of seven appointed members and six members ex officio. The Mayor, the president of Council, and the heads of the departments of City Property, Public Works, Recreation and Parks, and Public Utilities shall be the ex-officio members, but of these only the Mayor and the president of Council shall have the right to vote. The appointed members shall be appointed by the Mayor for terms of seven years each, except that the terms of the first seven appointees shall be one, two, three, four, five, six, and seven years respectively, as shall be indicated by the Mayor at the time of their appointment. Each shall serve for his full term unless removed by the Mayor for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or misconduct in office. The board shall elect one of its appointed members as chairman for a term of two years. The appointed members of the board shall receive such compensation as Council may fix.

Section 1503. PURPOSE. The purpose of the department and of the powers and duties conferred in this article shall be to guide and accomplish a coordinated, adjusted, and harmonious development of the City which will, in accordance with the present and future needs, tend to promote the public health, safety, morals, order, convenience, happiness, prosperity, and general welfare as well as efficiency and economy in the development of the City, including without limitation adequate provision for traffic, promotion of safety from fire and other dangers, adequate provision for light and air, promotion of a proper distribution of population; conservation, and improved utilization of physical resources, promotion of good civic design and arrangement, and wise and efficient allocation of public funds for public improvements, for public services, and for other public requirements.

Section 1504. POWERS AND DUTIES. The Department of City Planning shall

(a) prepare and have custody of a master plan as herein described, consider all proposed ordinances or bills which will in any way change the master plan, approve or reject plans for the subdivision of land located in the City, recommend the reservation of land locations for future acquisition by the City, and make recommendations pertaining to zoning districts and zoning regulations, all as more fully provided in this article;

(b) prepare a capital budget as more fully provided in this Act;

(c) plan capital projects;

(d) promote public interest in the master plan and in the other activities of the department;

(e) co-operate with public and private organizations and with individuals by making recommendations with reference to any buildings structures or works to be constructed by them;

(f) co-operate with other planning agencies;

(g) enter upon any land, make examinations and surveys, and place and maintain necessary monuments and marks thereon;

(h) accept and use any gifts made to assist the department in its work; and

(i) obtain all available information relative to its work, which information all public officials shall upon request furnish within a reasonable time.

Section 1505. PREPARATION OF MASTER PLAN. The master plan to be prepared by the department for the physical development of the City and of any land outside its boundaries which in the judgment of the Planning Board is related to the planning of the City shall include the general location, character, and extent of highways, streets boulevards, subways, bridges, waterfront development, waterways, parks, parkways, playgrounds, squares aviation fields, and other public ways, grounds, improvements, and open spaces; a major street plan; the general location of public buildings, other public property, and civic centers; the general location and extent of public utilities and terminals, whether publicly or privately owned or operated; changes and the recommendations of the department for changes in the use and for the acquisition, extension, widening, relocation, and vacation of any of the foregoing ways, grounds, open spaces, buildings, improvements, public utilities, or terminals; reservations of land for future public acquisition, and a zoning plan for districts of the City with reference to the control of the height, area, bulk, locations, occupation, and use of buildings and land.

Section 1506. ADOPTION OF MASTER PLAN. The master plan or any part thereof or any change therein shall be submitted to Council for adoption after the Planning Board shall have held public hearings pursuant to public notice and after it has been approved by the affirmative vote of three fourths of the voting members of the Planning Board holding office. By the affirmative vote of a majority of the Councilmen holding office Council may adopt the master plan or any part thereof or any change therein as approved by the Planning Board. Council may not change or modify the master plan or any part thereof or any change therein as approved by the Planning Board except by the affirmative vote of a majority of the Councilmen holding office.

Section 1507. EFFECT OF MASTER PLAN. No public way, ground, or open space, or public building, or structure of the City or of any public agency the powers of which extend over an area coextensive with that of the City or of a public utility for which a franchise is necessary from the City shall be constructed or authorized unless the location and size thereof conform to the master plan as adopted by Council. The zoning plan or the master plan shall have the same effect as zoning regulations adopted by Council.

Section 1508. RECOMMENDATIONS AS TO ORDINANCES. The clerk of Council shall furnish to the board for its consideration upon introduction into Council a copy of all proposed resolutions and ordinances and amendments thereto which relate to the location or extent of public ways, grounds or open spaces, public buildings or structures, public utility franchises, or zoning regulations or any other matter related to the physical development of the City. The proposed action of Council shall not be taken until the board has been given the opportunity to consider the proposed action. If the proposed action will result in an addition or change in the master plan the board shall hold a public meeting pursuant to public notice before giving its approval or disapproval. After the approval of the proposed action by an affirmative vote of three fourths of the voting members holding office, or after the lapse of the thirty days after the matter was referred to the board without any action by the board, Council may proceed to pass the resolution or ordinance. If three fourths of the voting members holding office shall disapprove of the proposed action, Council may adopt the resolution or ordinance only by an affirmative vote of a majority of the Councilmen holding office.

Section 1509. CONTROL OF PLATTING. All plans of streets or highways for public use and all plans, plats, and replats of land laid out in building lots which include streets, highways, alleys, or other portions intended to be dedicated to public use or to the use of owners of lots fronting thereon or adjacent thereto shall not be recorded or made a part of the street plan unless approved by the board. It shall be unlawful to receive or record any such plan in any public office if the plan does not bear evidence thereon of the approval of a majority of the board. The approval shall be deemed an acceptance of the proposed dedication but shall not impose any duty upon the City concerning maintenance or improvement until the City shall have made an actual appropriation of the land. To effect the purpose of the department and particularly to avoid the congestion of population the board may, by way of regulations concerning platting for the City or any district thereof, establish a minimum width and area of building lots and may impose minimum standards of street and sanitary requirements as a condition precedent to the approval of plats.

Section 1510. TRANSFER OF LOTS IN UNAPPROVED SUBDIVISIONS. The owner of any land within a subdivision the plat of which has not been approved by the board as provided in this act or duly recorded or made a part of the street plan shall not sell, lease, or agree to sell or lease any lot in the subdivision in accordance with by reference to, by exhibition of, or by other use of a plat of the subdivision. Any such agreement, sale, or lease may be set aside by the purchaser or lessee at his option.

Section 1511. ERECTION OF BUILDINGS. No buildings or parts thereof shall be erected on any tract, nor shall a building permit be issued therefore, unless the street giving access to the tract upon which such building is proposed to be placed shall have been accepted or opened as, or shall otherwise have received the legal status of, a public street, or unless such street as a street shown on the master plan or on a plat of a subdivision approved by the board.

Section 1512. ZONING. Council shall have power to pass zoning ordinances in accordance with the provisions of this article. The board shall recommend zoning regulations or changes or additions to any existing zoning regulations, including full texts of proposed ordinances with accompanying maps for the City or for any district thereof as it may determine, pertaining to the location, of buildings and other structures, minimum standards for construction, height, number of stories, bulk and size housing, the percentages of lots which may be occupied, the setting back of building lines, the sizes of yards, courts, and other open spaces, and the location, use, and occupancy of buildings structures and land for trade, industry, residence, recreation, public activities, or other purposes. Prior to any recommendations the board shall hold public hearings pursuant to public notice. Council may not pass zoning ordinances except in the manner provided herein for the adoption of the master plan.

Section 1513. RESERVATIONS OF LOCATIONS FOR FUTURE ACQUISITION. The board shall have power, after the adoption of the master plan to open spaces or public buildings or structures in the City, and to make a plat of the area or district thus surveyed showing the land which it recommends be reserved for future acquisition by the City. The board, before approving any such reservation, shall hold a public hearing pursuant to public notice. Such a reservation, approved by the board and by Council and made a part of the master plan in accordance with this Act, shall be effective for ten years from the date of the approval by Council. The reservation shall not be considered a taking of the land unless the City makes an appropriation therefor. At the expiration of ten years a reservation shall be removed in the manner provided herein for changes in the master plan. To preserve the master plan no permit shall be issued for the construction or alteration of any building or structure on any land during its reservation except as may be permitted by the Board of Zoning Appeals as provided herein. It is not intended hereby to alter existing law as to the reservation of land for public ways.

Section 1514. BOARD OF ZONING APPEALS. There shall be in the department a Board of Zoning Appeals to consist of three persons, one person to be appointed by the Planning Board from its members or from the staff of the department and two persons who hold no public office or public employment to be appointed by the Mayor. The members of the Board of Zoning Appeals shall hold office for a term of one year, starting with the first Monday in January. Each member who is not a staff member of the department shall receive twenty dollars ($20.00) for each board meeting he attends. The members shall elect from their own number a chairman of the board. The chief engineer and surveyor shall act as secretary of the board without compensation. He shall not have the right to vote.

Section 1515. POWERS ON APPEAL. The Board of Zoning Appeals shall have power.

(a) to hear and decide appeals where a person alleges there is error in any order, requirement, decision, or determination which is particularly applicable to him, made by an officer in the administration or enforcement of the previous sections of this article or of any ordinance adopted pursuant thereto;

(b) to hear and decide special exceptions to or interpretations of the terms of those ordinances upon which the board is required to pass under the provisions of such ordinance; and

(c) to authorize in specific cases such permits for construction on reserved locations and such variance from the term of an ordinance for the administration or the enforcement of this article as will not be contrary to the public interest wherever, owing to special conditions, a literal enforcement will result in unnecessary hardship and so that the spirit of the article shall be observed and substantial justice done.

In exercising the above-mentioned powers the board may, in conformity with the provisions of this article, reverse or affirm wholly or partly or may modify the order, requirement, decision, or determination as ought to be made and to that end shall have all the powers of the officer from whom the appeal is taken.

Section 1516. APPEAL PROCEDURE. Appeals to the Board of Zoning Appeals may be taken within a reasonable time as provided by the rules of the board, but not less than fifteen days, by filing with the officer from whom the appeal is taken and with the board a notice of appeal specifying the grounds thereof. The officer from whom the appeal is taken shall forthwith transmit to the board all the papers constituting the record upon which the action appealed from was taken.

Section 1517. EFFECT OF APPEAL. An appeal shall stay all proceedings in furtherance of the action appealed from unless the officer from whom the appeal is taken certifies to the board that a stay would in his opinion cause imminent peril to life or property. In such case proceedings shall not be stayed otherwise than by a restraining order, which may be granted by the board or by a court of record on application and notice to the officer from whom the appeal is taken and on due cause shown.

Section 1518. HEARING. The Board of Zoning Appeals shall fix a reasonable time for the hearing of the appeal, give public notice thereof as well as due notice to the parties in interest, and decide the appeal within a reasonable time. At the hearing any party may appear in person or by agent or by attorney. The chairman or, in his absence, the acting chairman may administer oaths and compel the attendance of witnesses. Hearings shall be open to the public. In all hearings the boards shall not be required to follow established rules or evidence of court procedure but shall seek all information and evidence bearing on the merits of the case. In every hearing the board shall keep a full and complete record, including notes of testimony.

Section 1519. COURT REVIEW. Any persons jointly or severally aggrieved by any decision of the Board of Zoning Appeals or any taxpayer of any officer, department, board, or bureau of the City may present to the court of common pleas a petition duly verified setting forth that the decision is illegal in whole or in part, specifying the grounds of the illegality. Such petition shall be presented to the court within thirty days after the decision of the board. Upon the presentation of such petition the court may allow a writ of certiorari directed to the board to review such decision of the board and shall prescribe therein the time within which a return thereto must be made and served upon the attorney of the realtor, which shall not be less than ten days and may be extended by the court. The allowance of the writ shall not stay proceedings upon the decision appealed from, but the court may, on application, on notice to the board, and on due cause shown, grant a restraining order. The board shall not be required to return the original papers acted upon by it, but it shall be sufficient to return certified or sworn copies thereof or of such portions thereof as may be called for by such writ. The return shall concisely set forth such other facts as may be pertinent and material to show the grounds of the decision appealed from and shall be verified. No additional evidence shall be received by the court, and the decision of the Board of Zoning Appeals shall not be vacated or set aside except for error of law or violation of constitutional rights. The court may reverse or affirm wholly or partly or may remand the decision brought up for review. Costs shall not be allowed against the board unless it shall appear to the court that it acted with gross negligence or in bad faith or with malice in making the decision appealed from. All issues in any proceeding under this section shall have preference over all other civil actions and proceedings.

Section 1520. ART JURY. There shall be in the Department of City Planning an Art Jury composed of the Mayor ex officio and eight other members to be appointed by him for a term of four years, except that the terms of the first eight appointees in groups of two shall be one, two, three, and four years respectively, as shall be indicated by the Mayor at the time of their appointment. As to a structure to be used by a subdivision of any department, office, or agency, the head of such subdivision shall also for the time being act as a member of the jury ex officio.

Section 1521. COMPOSITION OF ART JURY. The members of the jury other than the Mayor shall be a painter, a sculptor, an architect, a member of the Board of Recreation and Parks, an experienced business executive, and three persons, each of whom at the time of appointment shall be a member of the governing body or of the faculty of a corporation organized under the laws of this Commonwealth and conducting a school of art or architecture in the city.

Section 1522. ORGANIZATION. The members of the jury shall elect from their own number a president and vice-president to serve for one year. The jury shall have power to adopt its own rules of procedure and to prescribe regulations for the submission to it of all matters within its jurisdiction. Five members shall constitute a quorum.

Section 1523. POWERS. (a) No work of art shall become the property of the City by purchase, gift, or otherwise unless the work of art or design for the same and the proposed location of the work of art shall first have been submitted to and approved by the Art Jury; nor shall any work of art, until so approved, be erected or placed in or upon or allowed to extend over any building, highway, stream, lake, square, park, or other public place belonging to or under the control of the City. The jury may, when it deems proper, also require a complete model of the proposed work of art to be submitted to it before taking final action thereon. The term "work of art" as used in this article shall include all paintings mural decorations, inscriptions, stained glass, statues, reliefs or other sculptures, monuments, fountains, arches, or other structures intended for ornament or commemoration.

(b) No existing work of art in the possession of the City shall be removed, relocated, or altered in any way without the approval of the jury.

(c) No construction or erection in the City of any building, bridge or its approaches, arch, gate, fence, or other structure or fixture which is to be paid for either wholly or in part from the City treasury or for which the city or any other public authority is to furnish a site shall be begun unless the exterior design shall have been submitted to the jury and approved by it before the final approval thereof by the officer or other person having authority to contract therefor.

(d) The approval of the jury shall also be required in respect to all structures or fixtures belonging to any person or corporation which shall be erected upon or extended over any highway, stream, lake, square, park, or other public place within the City.

(e) In deeds for land made by the City, restrictions may be imposed requiring that the design of structures to be altered or erected thereon shall be first approved by the Art Jury. No structure which requires the approval of the jury shall be erected or changed in design without the approval of the jury. If the jury fails to act upon any matter submitted to it within sixty days after such submission, its approval of the matter shall be presumed.

Section 1524. PENALTIES. If any building or structure shall be erected, constructed, reconstructed, altered, repaired, converted, or maintained, or any building structure or land used in violation of this article or of any ordinance or regulation made under authority thereof, the person or persons, artificial or natural, knowingly so offending shall be subject to a fine of not more than one thousand dollars ($1,000) and not less than one hundred dollars ($100), to be recovered as fines, and penalties of like amount are now recoverable by law. The fact of such violation being committed shall be prima facie evidence that it was knowingly done. In case of any such actual or threatened violation the City may institute any appropriate action or proceeding to prevent or abate such unlawful erection, construction, reconstruction, alteration, conversion, maintenance, use, or occupation, or to restrain or prevent any illegal act or business or use under this article or under any such ordinance or regulation.

ARTICLE XVI

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE

Section 1601. DIRECTOR. There shall be a Department of Finance, of which the Director of Finance shall be the head. He shall be appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of Council. The Director of Finance, without any additional compensation, shall also be the Receiver of Taxes and shall continue to have the powers and duties now vested in that officer by law.

Section 1602. JOWERS OF DEPARTMENT. Except as otherwise provided in this Act, the department shall have the care, management, administration, and supervision of the financial affairs of the City, including without limitation the making of assessments as provided herein; the preparation for the Mayor of the annual current budget and receiving and collection of all moneys payable to the City, subject to such allowances and penalties as may be fixed by ordinance; the preparation and sending out of bills payable to the City; and the making of purchases which are to be paid for out of the City treasury.

Section 1603. BUDGET BUREAU. There shall be in the Department of Finance a Budget Bureau, the head of which shall be the budget director. The Budget Director shall prepare each year for the Mayor information for the current budget for the ensuing fiscal year and perform all duties in regard thereto as the Mayor may direct. He shall have the power, personally, or by his representatives, to survey each department, office, or agency for the purpose of reviewing their budgetary requests. He may require any officer or employee to furnish information and to answer inquiries pertinent to such survey.

Section 1604. PURCHASING BUREAU. There shall be in the Department of Finance a Purchasing Bureau which shall

(a) prepare for all purchases of tangible personal property to be paid for out of the City treasury, except as provided herein for general specifications for the construction of public buildings, plans and specifications to be submitted to the City Controller for his approval to insure competitive bids so far as possible before the solicitation of bids:

(b) make all such purchases;

(c) certify to the City Controller that such purchases conform to the plans and specifications as to quality and quantity and substantially as to time of delivery; and

(d) manage all warehouses used for receiving and storing such purchases.

Any department, office, or agency which requires any tangible personal property shall not have the power to make any such purchases but shall requisition the Purchasing Bureau and shall be charged therefor. The Purchasing Bureau shall be guided by the budget document in making purchases in anticipation of the needs of all departments, agencies, and offices. Council may establish by appropriation a revolving fund not in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) to be used by the Purchasing Bureau in anticipation of the need of supplies.

Section 1605. BILLS FOR REAL ESTATE TAXES. Real estate bills for the ensuing year shall be mailed by the Department of Finance before December fifteenth, and the tax shall become due on the first day of January. However, Council may provide for the payment of such taxes in several installments.

ARTICLE XVII

DEPARTMENT OF CITY CONTROLLER

Section 1701. CITY CONTROLLER. There shall be a Department of City Controller, of which the City Controller shall be the head. He shall be elected and shall give bond, as now provided by law, and shall hold office for four years and until his successor shall qualify.

Section 1702. Deputy Controllers and Employees. The City Controller shall appoint a first and a second deputy controller. The first deputy controller shall have power to administer oaths and affirmations in all matters relating to accounts against the City, and in the absence or incapacity of the City Controller to act, or if there is a vacancy in his office, shall have the powers and perform the duties of the City Controller until he returns or his incapacity is removed or a new City Controller assumes office, as the case may be. The City Controller shall appoint such other officers and employees as may be provided for by ordinance.

Section 1703. Powers of City Controller. The City Controller, in addition to all other powers and duties prescribed by statute or ordinance, shall have the following powers and duties:

(a) He shall maintain a complete and modern system of accounting for all departments of the City and for all offices and agencies the expenses of which are paid out of the City treasury. The accounting system shall at all times show clearly the financial condition of the City. The City Controller shall have complete supervision and control over all accounting and financial records pertaining to such departments, offices, and agencies. He shall have the power to require such additional and supporting accounting or financial records to be kept and to be rendered to his department as may to him seem necessary, and shall prescribe the nature, form, and extent of all such records, and may prohibit the keeping of any accounting and financial records not approved by him. The accounting system shall include a separate account for each specific item of appropriation made by Council, and every warrant shall state specifically against which item it is drawn. Each appropriation account shall show in detail the several appropriations made by Council, the amount drawn on each appropriation item, contracts chargeable against it, whether written or oral, formal or informal, and the balance standing to the credit of the appropriation item.

(b) He shall furnish a monthly statement of expenditures to the Budget Director for each item in the budget and to each department head for each item affecting his department. Such statements shall be furnished within fifteen days after the end of each month and shall be in such form that the unencumbered balances available for expenditure may be readily determined. The City Controller shall also prepare such special reports on the costs of operating the departments, offices, or agencies as may be reasonably requested by the Mayor or by the Budget Director or any department head with respect to matters under his supervision. The Controller shall permit the Budget Director or a representative designated for the purpose to inspect the accounts and records kept by the City Controller pertaining to all matters under the supervision of the Budget Director.

(c) He shall have supervision over the manner of making all expenditures, including control of the form of all vouchers and warrants and the manner of payment thereof. He shall not certify a warrant commitment or contract which will involve the payment of money out of the City treasury in the current year unless there are funds available for that purpose from the specific item of appropriation made therefor, and unless he has charged the amount of the warrant commitment or contract payable in the current year to the specific item of appropriation. If he makes a certification in violation of this section the liability of the City on the warrant commitment or contract shall be null and void. The City Controller and his sureties shall be individually liable to the holder of any warrant certified by the City Controller in violation of this section; and if any such warrant is paid by the City, the City Controller and his sureties shall be individually liable to the City for the amount of the warrant.

(d) Whenever a warrant or claim shall be presented to the City Controller he shall have power to require evidence that the amount stated therein is legally due, and for the purpose may summon before him any officer, agent, or employe of any department, office, or agency, or any other person, and examine him upon oath or affirmation relative to such warrant or claim.

(e) He shall audit the accounts of all departments, offices, and agencies, including the accounts of any board of directors of city trusts and all accounts of any other organization to which Council makes an appropriation. He shall submit annually to Council in such manner as may by ordinance be directed a report of the accounts of the City, verified by his oath or affirmation, exhibiting the assets, liabilities, and net worth of the City at the close of the preceding year and the receipts and disbursements of the preceding year, including the sources from which the receipts were derived and the manner in which they were disbursed. This report shall be published in pamphlet or book form.

(f) He shall, at the end of each fiscal year or oftener if so required by Council, and also upon the death, resignation, removal, or expiration of the term of any officer who is paid out of the City treasury, audit, examine, and settle the accounts of such officer; and if he shall be found indebted to the City, the City Controller shall state an account and file the same in a court of common pleas of the proper County, together with a copy of the official bond of the officer, and give notice thereof to him or his legal representatives; and if any person or persons affected thereby shall be dissatisfied with such settlement, he or they may appeal therefrom. The appeal, with his or their exceptions to the account as stated, verified by the oath of the person or persons appealing, shall be filed in the office of the prothonotary of said court within ten days after service of notice. The appellant shall within ten days enter security, to be approved by the court, to prosecute the appeal with effect and pay the costs and the debt and interest which may appear by the judgment of the court to be due to the City. The balance of account as shown by the settlement filed as aforesaid shall constitute a lien on real estate of the officer so indebted and his sureties from the date of the filing thereof, which lien shall continue for the period of five years from the date of filing. A writ of scire facias to enforce the lien shall be issued thereon within six months, which shall contain a clause warning the sureties or the executors or administrators of the officer or his sureties to appear and make defense, and the case shall thereupon be proceeded with to final judgment to law. Notice of the audit shall be given by the City Controller to the officer or his legal representatives before the final statement of the account; and if desired by such officer or his legal representative, opportunity shall be given for a hearing. A copy of such notice, with an affidavit of the proof of service thereof, shall be filed with the statement of account as evidence of service of notice.

(g) He shall at the end of each fiscal year audit all the accounts of firemen's pension funds of the City which receive appropriations from the Commonwealth.

(h) He shall approve or disapprove, as provided herein, all plans and specifications prepared by the Purchasing Bureau and shall have the power to test and sample all purchases made by the Purchasing Bureau.

(i) He shall prepare annually a certificate of revenue and liabilities for current budget purposes and a financial report for capital budget purposes as provided herein. He shall also prepare from time to time a certificate as to indebtedness as provided herein.

Section 1704. Legal Counsel. The City Solicitor shall be the counsel for the City Controller as provided in this Act. However, the City Controller may, whenever he deems it necessary, choose and appoint special legal counsel to represent him in any legal proceeding. The total compensation for all such special counsel during any fiscal year shall not exceed two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500).

Section 1705. Independent Audit. Council from time to time may require an independent audit to be made of all or any part of the accounts of the departments of the City and of the offices and agencies the expenses of which are paid out of the City treasury. Such an audit shall be made by qualified public accountants who have no personal interest in the accounts to be audited or in the affairs of the officer or officers handling such accounts. The results of any such audit shall be made available for public inspection immediately after its completion.

ARTICLE XVIII

DEPARTMENT OF CITY TREASURER

Section 1801. City Treasurer. There shall be a Department of City Treasurer, of which the City Treasurer shall be the head. He shall be elected and give bond as now provided by law and shall hold office for four years and until his successor shall qualify, but shall not be eligible for the term next succeeding the one for which he may be elected.

Section 1802. Assistant Treasurer and Employees. The City Treasurer shall appoint an assistant treasurer who, in the absence or incapacity of the City Treasurer to act, or if there is a vacancy in his office, shall have the powers and perform the duties of the City Treasurer until he returns or his incapacity is removed or a new City Treasurer assumes office, as the case may be. The City Treasurer shall appoint such other officers and employees as may be provided by ordinance.

Section 1803. Powers and Duties. The City Treasurer, in addition to all other powers and duties prescribed by law or ordinance, shall have the following powers and duties:

(a) He shall daily demand and receive from all persons any money received by them for the City. The City Treasurer shall daily deposit all such moneys in the name of the City in the banks or institutions designed by Council which shall give security as provided by law.

(b) He shall pay all warrants duly issued and countersigned. No money shall be drawn from the City treasury except by due process of law or upon warrants signed by the heads of the appropriate departments, or by deputies authorized to sign by such department heads, or by such other persons as may be designed by the City Controller. All such warrants shall state the consideration for the same and the particular funds or appropriations to which they are chargeable.

(c) He shall make detailed reports daily to the City Controller of all receipts and deposits and of all moneys withdrawn from the treasury, and shall present and verify his cash account in such manner and as often as may be required by the City Controller.

ARTICLE XIX

BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF CITY TRUSTS

Section 1901. Members of Board. There shall be a Board of Directors of City Trusts to consist of the Mayor and the president of Council ex-officio with the power to vote and thirteen persons appointed by the judges of the courts of common pleas of the County in which the City is situated. Each appointment to the board shall be made for a term of five years, and no appointee shall be eligible to succeed himself. However, this section shall not affect the tenure of office of any member of a board now existing which is charged with the handling of City trusts.

Section 1902. Function of Board. The Board of Directors of City Trusts shall have charge of all trusts the administration of which is or shall be vested in the City. It shall have the same powers and duties as may now be vested in any existing board in the City charged with the handling of such trusts

ARTICLE XX

ASSESSMENTS

Section 2001. Bureau of Assessments. There shall be in the Department of Finance a Bureau of Assessments, the purpose of which shall be to assess uniformly and equitably all real property within the City and all taxable personal property. The head of the Bureau of Assessments shall be the Chief Assessor, who shall be appointed by the Mayor.

Section 2002. System of Assessments. The Chief Assessor shall cause to be installed and maintained a system for making assessments of real property, which system shall include, in addition to other records, lot and block maps, land value maps, and permanent record cards, which maps and cards shall be open to public inspection.

(a) The lot and block maps shall show the dimensions of each separately assessed parcel of land, suitably identified by lot and block numbers.

(b) The land value maps shall show the value per front foot by a standard unit of depth of all land abutting on roads, streets, or highways. The land value maps shall also show the value per square foot of those tracts of land used primarily for industrial as contrasted to mercantile or residential purposes and shall also show the value per acre of rural land.

(c) The permanent record cards shall set forth separately the factors affecting the value of each assessed parcel of land and the factors affecting the value of any buildings or other improvements thereon. As to land, the cards shall show, in addition to other data, frontage, depth, corner influence, and alley influence. As to buildings and other improvements, the cards shall show, in addition to other data, the nature of the improvement, age, reproduction cost, depreciation, and obsolescence.

Section 2003. Specialization in Assessments. In order to effect specialization in the work of making assessments, the Chief Assessor shall classify all property on a functional or other suitable basis and shall designate deputy assessors to make assessments for the types of property for which they are particularly qualified, as determined by Civil Service examination.

Section 2004. Full Value Assessment. The system of assessments provided in this Act shall be used to assess, rate, and value all real property in the city according to the full actual value thereof, and at such rates and prices for which the same would separately bona fide sell. Each assessment shall be recorded on a permanent record card so as to show separately the value of the parcel of land and the value of building, together with other improvements thereon. An assessment may be changed from time to time during any year up to the completion by the Chief Assessor of the assessment rolls for that year.

Section 2005. General Assessments. After the first general assessment has been made pursuant to this article, general assessments with re-examinations of the properties shall be made when Council shall make appropriation therefor. However, a general assessment shall not be made oftener than once every three years and shall be made at least once every ten years. After certification of the assessment rolls as hereinafter provided, the first assessment and general assessments thereafter shall be published in book form. The book shall be posted and made available for public inspection at convenient places. The books may also be sold in such manner and at such price as the Chief Assessor shall determine. The money received from such sales shall be paid into the City treasury.

Section 2006. Horizontal Assessment Changes. After a public hearing pursuant to public notice, the Chief Assessor may order for the entire City a uniform horizontal percentage increase or decrease in assessments prior to the preparation of the annual assessment rolls if he finds such change warranted by valuation circumstances, except that no such change shall be made within two years of a previous horizontal assessment change.

Section 2007. Assessment Rolls. The Bureau of Assessments shall in each year prepare assessment rolls of all real property within the City, showing each separately assessed parcel of real estate and as of April first of that year the valuation placed upon the land and the valuation placed upon the building, together with other improvements thereon. The assessment rolls shall be completed before July first and shall be open to the public for inspection to and including July twentieth.

Section 2008. Notice and Publication. Public notice of the right to inspect the assessment rolls and of the right to file a petition not later than July twentieth for a change in assessment shall be given as soon as the rolls are open for public inspection. A similar notice, together with a notice of the change in assessment, shall be mailed prior to July first to the last known address of each owner whose assessment has been increased or decreased of a reason other than a uniform horizontal percentage change.

Section 2009. Petition for Assessment Changes. During the first twenty days of July any person claiming to be aggrieved by an assessment may file with the Bureau of Assessments in the form prescribed by the Chief Assessor a written petition which shall specify clearly the grounds of the objection to the assessment. The petition shall have stamped thereon the date of its receipt by the bureau and shall thereupon become a part of the official records of the bureau.

Section 2010. Hearings on Petitions. The Chief Assessor personally shall conduct hearings on petition for changes in assessments and shall complete such hearings before August tenth. He may increase or decrease assessments, except that no change shall be made because of any change in valuation after April first. The reason for any changes in assessments shall be recorded by the Chief Assessor upon the permanent record cards. Notice of the disposition of the petition, together with notice of the right to file a written appeal with the Board of Assessment Appeals before September tenth, shall be sent by the bureau to the address of the petitioner as shown on the petition.

Section 2011. Certification of Assessment Rolls by Chief Assessor. Before August thirty-first the assessment rolls as changed by the Chief Assessor shall be signed and certified by him and shall be delivered to the Board of Assessment Appeals. At the same time he shall forward to the Mayor a certificate showing the aggregate valuation of taxable real property in the City.

Section 2012. Board of Assessment Appeals. There shall also be in the Department of Finance a Board of Assessment Appeals to receive, hear, and dispose of all appeals from the final rulings of the Chief Assessor on petitions for changes in assessments.

Section 2013. Members of the Board. The Board of Assessment Appeals shall consist of five members appointed by the judges of the courts of common pleas of the County in which the city is situated. The board shall elect one of its members to serve as chairman. The Chief Assessor shall be the secretary of the board. Members of the board shall hold office for five years, except that the term of the first five members shall be one, two, three, four, and five years respectively, as shall be indicated at the time of their appointment. No member shall hold any other public or political office or employment. During the period of most active duty from September fifth to December fifteenth, each member shall devote fulltime to his work as a member of the board. Each member shall receive as compensation a per diem of twenty-five dollars ($25.00).

Section 2014. Personnel. The Chief Assessor shall act as secretary of the board and shall furnish to the board necessary clerical assistants. The Chief Assessor and the clerical assistants shall serve without additional compensation.

Section 2015. Filing Appeals. Any person who has filed a petition with the Chief Assessor for a change in assessment may appeal from an adverse final ruling of the Chief Assessor by filing with the board prior to September tenth a written appeal under oath on a appropriate form to be provided by the board. The oath to the appeal shall be taken only before the secretary of the board or any member of the board, who is hereby authorized to administer such oaths. On each appeal there shall be endorsed the date of filing, and thereupon the appeal shall become a part of the official records of the board.

Section 2016. Hearing Appeals. The Board of Assessment Appeals shall hold regular hearings on appeals from September fifth to November fifteenth inclusive. All hearings before the board shall be public and shall be conducted in accordance with regulations prescribed by the board. In every hearing the board shall keep a full and complete record, including notes of testimony. Persons shall be entitled to be heard in person or by attorney. Any member of the board is authorized to swear or affirm any person in such proceedings. The Chief Assessor and such deputy assessors as the board designates shall attend all hearings and furnish such information as the board may desire. In all hearings the board shall not be required to follow established rules of evidence or court procedure but shall seek all information and evidence bearing on the merits of the case. The assessment which appears on the assessment rolls shall be deemed the correct and valid assessment unless the contrary is shown by clear and convincing evidence. The decision of the board together with the reason therefor, shall be in writing. A copy of the decision shall be mailed to the appellant at the address shown on the appeal. The board shall hand down decisions on the appeals on or before December fifteenth and shall receive no compensation after that date for services in connection with decisions on such appeals.

Section 2017. CERTIFICATION OF ASSESSMENT ROLLS BY BOARD. On or before December fifteenth the assessment rolls, with such changes thereon as have been made by the board pursuant to written decisions, shall be duly signed and certified by the board and shall be delivered to the Director of Finance.

Section 2018. APPEALS TO COURT. Within fifteen days after the mailing of a decision by the board an appeal may be taken therefrom to the court of common pleas by the person who filed the appeal, by the Chief Assessor, or by any person who objected before the board to a change in the assessment. If an appeal is taken by the Chief Assessor, he shall be represented by the City Solicitor, and the person who objected to the assessment by the Chief Assessor shall be named as respondent. In all other appeals the board shall be named as respondent and shall be represented by the City Solicitor. The appeal shall not prevent the collection of taxes upon the assessment, but in case the assessment shall be changed pursuant to proceedings provided for in this section, the difference in the amount of the tax shall be returned to or collected from the person or persons who shall have paid the tax. The appeal shall be by way of petition, setting forth specifically the error of the Board of Assessment Appeals, which petition shall be accompanied by a copy of the notes of testimony before the board and of the decision of the board, both duly certified by the secretary of the board. Certified copies shall be supplied by the secretary of the board at cost, and the money received therefrom shall be paid into the City treasury, except that no money need be paid in the event of an appeal by the Chief Assessor. No additional evidence of the valuation of the property shall be received at the hearing on the petition, and the decision of the board shall not be vacated or set aside except for error of law or violation of constitutional rights. If any decision of the board is vacated or set aside, a new hearing shall be held by the board in conformity with the order of the court, and the decision thereon shall be appealable in the same manner as an original decision. Appeals from the final orders of the court of common pleas can be taken by any party in the lower court to the Superior Court or to the Supreme Court in the same manner as appeals are taken in other cases to the Superior or Supreme Court.

Section 2019. PERSONAL PROPERTY RETURNS. The Department of Finance shall furnish blanks for the use of taxpayers to make, on or before February fifteenth of each year, a return as provided by law of all their taxable personal property as of the day between January first and January fifteenth inclusive fixed by the Chief Assessor and printed or stamped on the blank. The personal property tax shall become due on February fifteenth. Upon the refusal or failure of a taxable person to make a return as provided by law, an estimated return shall be made by an assessor and the penalty provided by law shall be added thereto by the Department of Finance. The aggregate amount so obtained shall be the basis for taxation, unless on an appeal to the Board of Assessment Appeals within thirty days after notice of the estimated return has been mailed to the last known address of the taxpayer satisfactory reasons are presented excusing the failure to make a proper return and a substituted return by the taxpayer is permitted. The Department of Finance shall not be estopped by the addition of the penalty or by the allowance of a substituted return from assessing or reassessing personal property and collecting additional taxes and interest as provided by law.

Section 2020. CHANGES IN PERSONNEL PROPERTY RETURNS. Changes in the return of a taxpayer may be made by an assessor. Notice of any such change and of the right to petition the Chief Assessor for a change therefrom shall be mailed to the taxpayer at his last known address or to his executor or administration, as the case may be. The procedure in connection with changes in personal property returns shall be as follows:

(a) The Chief Assessor shall personally conduct hearings on written petitions by any person claimed to be aggrieved by a change in a return. Such a petition must be filed within thirty days of the mailing of a notice of a change and shall specify clearly the grounds of the objection. Notice of the disposition of the petition, together with notice of the right to file a written appeal with the Board of Assessment Appeals, shall be mailed to the address of the petitioner as shown on the petition.

(b) The provisions as to the filing and hearing of appeals as to real property assessments shall be applicable to the filing and hearing of appeals as to personal property returns, except that (1) the appeal must be filed within thirty days of the mailing of the notice, (2) regular meetings of the Board of Assessment Appeals need not be held, and (3) the decision on each appeal shall be handed down within thirty days after the completion of the hearing.

(c) The procedure as to appeals relating to personal property returns from the Board of Assessment Appeals to the courts shall be the same as the procedure provided herein for appeals to the courts as to real property assessments.

Section 2021. BOARD OF ASSESSMENT APPEALS TO SERVE AS BOARD OF VIEW. Whenever hereafter a petition shall be presented to any court judge or judges of the Commonwealth praying the appointment of viewers, reviewers, or re-reviewers, or of a jury of view, or of a road jury, or of commissioners of view, with regard to property located in the City, the board of view shall be appointed from among the members of the Board of Assessment Appeals.

ARTICLE XXI

CURRENT BUDGET

Section 2101. FISCAL YEAR. The fiscal year of the City shall be the calendar year.

Section 2102. CERTIFICATE BY CITY CONTROLLER OF REVENUE AND LIABILITIES. On or before September first of each year the City Controller shall furnish to the Mayor a certificate of revenue and liabilities containing:

(a) his detailed estimate of receipts from each existing source from which receipts will be derived in the ensuing fiscal year other than real estate taxes which will become due in that year, including without limitation revenue, reimbursements, refunds, and taxes; but no estimate of revenue from a source which existed throughout the last complete fiscal year at the same rate shall exceed the amount actually received during that year from that source;

(b) his estimate of revenue in the ensuing year from each new source which is provided by statute or ordinance, but his estimate shall not include any anticipated receipts from the sale of property or from capital transactions;

(c) an estimate as to the percentage of real estate taxes levied for the ensuing year which he is of the opinion will be collected in the ensuing year, but such percentage shall not exceed the percentage of real estate taxes levied for the last complete fiscal year which were collected during that year;

(d) the liabilities of the City which are fixed in amount and will be due and payable in the ensuing year other than obligations to be paid from sinking funds; from other special funds; or from the proceeds of bond issues, including without limitation payments to any sinking fund and other required payments with respect to loans except as above provided; rentals, obligations on contracts; and amounts due on judgments, whether evidenced by writs of mandamus, execution, or otherwise;

(e) his detailed estimate of obligations which are not fixed in amount and will become payable in the ensuing year, such estimate to be not less than the average amount of such obligations for the last five complete fiscal years and to include without limitation all obligations for tort claims, demolition of unsafe buildings, and pension funds; and

(f) the surplus or deficit at the end of the last complete fiscal year and his estimate of the surplus or deficit for the current fiscal year

Section 2103. SUPPLEMENTAL CERTIFICATES. The City Controller may not revise his certificate of revenue and liabilities after its submission to the Mayor, except that he may, until the passage of the budget ordinance, certify estimated revenue from sources of revenue made available after his last certification. After the passage of the budget ordinance the City Controller shall not certify additional revenue, except that he may certify for appropriation by Council receipts from a source not included in any of his certificates of revenue and revenue received in excess of his certification of total revenue for that fiscal year.

Section 2104. SUBMISSION OF BUDGET DOCUMENT BY MAYOR TO COUNCIL. On or before September fifteenth the Mayor shall transmit to Council, in such form as Council may request, a budget document which, in addition to such other information as Council may request, shall consist of:

(a) the certificate of the City Controller as to revenue and liabilities, without any change therein;

(b) the certificate of the Chief Assessor as to the aggregate assessed valuation of taxable real property for the ensuing fiscal year;

(c) his detailed estimates of all proposed expenditures to be made out of the City treasury during the ensuing year, showing in addition for each item the appropriation for the current fiscal year and the appropriation and expenditures for the last complete fiscal year; and

(d) his budget message outlining a proposed fiscal policy, describing therein the important features with reference both to proposed expenditure and to anticipated revenue.

Section 2105. BASIC FOR ESTIMATE OF EXPENDITURE. The estimate of proposed expenditures shall be made up by the Mayor from information and requests submitted to him by all departments, offices, courts, boards, commissions, directors of trusts, committees, and other agencies whose expenditures are to be paid in whole or in part out of the City treasury. Such information and requests shall list, in addition to other expenses, the amounts of each type of supplies to be purchased. The information and requests shall be submitted to the Mayor before September first. The Mayor may, in his discretion, revise such requests in submitting his estimate of expenditures to Council.

Section 2106. CONSIDERATION OF BUDGET. Immediately after the receipt of the budget document Council shall consider it in public sessions, affording a reasonable opportunity to any person to be heard thereon. Such sessions shall not extend beyond October first.

Section 2107. ADOPTION OF BUDGET. On or before October fifteenth Council shall adopt a financial program for the ensuing year by passing a single budget ordinance in which Council shall:

(a) appropriate sufficient funds to meet (1) the liabilities for the ensuing year as certified by the City Controller, (2) the amount which the capital budget authorizes to be expended out of revenue in the ensuing year, and (3) the estimated expenditures to be made out of the City treasury for the ensuing year, the character and amount of such expenditures to be determined by Council, except that there shall be included an amount not less than fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) for emergency purchases; and

(b) fix a tax rate and levy a tax, the proceeds of which, on the basis of the assessment certificate of the Chief Assessor and on the basis of probable delinquencies in the payment of such tax as estimated by the City Controller, shall be sufficient, together with the revenue from other sources as estimated by the City Controller, to meet the deficit for the current fiscal year, if any, as estimated by the Controller and the appropriation provided for above.

Section 2108. RESTRICTION OF APPROPRIATIONS. Council shall not (1) appropriate for the payment of any obligation incurred in the absence of or in excess of an appropriation therefor, except as provided in this Act with respect to contracts extending beyond the fiscal year in which they are made; (2) list separately in any appropriation the salaries for positions which are included in the existing classification and compensation plans provided for in this Act; and (3) except by the affirmative vote of two thirds of the Councilmen holding office, make an appropriation for any budget item in excess of the amount estimated by the Mayor in the budget document.

Section 2109. FAILURE TO ADOPT FINANCIAL PROGRAM. If Council shall fail to adopt a financial program on or before October fifteenth as provided herein, each Councilman shall have deducted from his salary fifty dollars ($50) for each day after October fifteenth until a financial program is adopted.

Section 2110. NO EXPENDITURES UNTIL ADOPTION OF FINANCIAL PROGRAM. Except for payments of interest or principal of loans and of sinking fund requirements, the City Controller shall not countersign any warrant for expenditures in any year unless a financial program as herein provided has been adopted for that year.

Section 2111. MONTHLY ALLOCATION OF EXPENSES. After the adoption of a financial program the Budget Director shall establish, subject to the approval of the Mayor, monthly allocations of the appropriations for expenditures. No expenditures shall be made and no obligations shall be incurred in any month in excess of the allocation for that month without the prior consent of the Budget Director and the Mayor.

Section 2112. TRANSFERRED AND ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATIONS. Council shall not transfer all or part of any appropriation from one item of appropriation to another. The unexpended balance of any appropriation may be placed by Council in an account to be called the reserve account if Council, by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of its members holding office, shall pass an ordinance stating that the purpose for which the appropriation was made has been carried out or stating why the purpose cannot be carried out. Council may at any time appropriate for any lawful purpose any part of funds certified by the Controller as additional receipts as provided herein and any part of the balance in the reserve account.

Section 2113. NO LIABILITY FOR PAYMENT IN ABSENCE OF APPROPRIATION. No payment shall be made on any contract, written or oral, formal or informal, unless an appropriation for such payment has been made before the contract was made. No contract or warrant shall be made, issued, or approved by any officer for any item of expenditure by any department, office court, board, commission, committee, or other agency in the absence of or in excess of an appropriation for the item. However, a contract which provides for payments in the fiscal and subsequent years may bind the City if an appropriation has been made for so much of the consideration as shall be furnished to the City within the fiscal year in which the contract is made.

ARTICLE XXII

CAPITAL BUDGET

Section 2201. PREPARATION OF BUDGET. The Mayor shall annually prepare a capital budget on the basis of a comprehensive and farsighted study of capital projects. The term "capital project" shall include any plan for the permanent physical improvement of the City, together with preliminary studies, surveys, property of a permanent nature and original equipment which have been or should be acquired in connection with the project, but shall not include any project for repaving or any project of which at least half of the cost is to be paid from the proceeds of assessments for benefits. The Planning Board shall determine conclusively what is and what is not a capital project.

Section 2202. DATA FOR BUDGET. In preparing the capital budget the Mayor shall consider among other things:

- (a) the master plan in the form approved by council;
- (b) the report of the City Controller to be furnished annually on or before August fifteenth to the Mayor and to the Planning Board, setting forth (1) the amount and the nature of each obligation incurred in pursuance of such authority up to July first; (2) the financial condition of the City, together with comments thereon; and (3) advice as to the maximum amount and the nature of the debt which, in the opinion of the City Controller, the City will be able to incur for capital projects during each of the ten succeeding fiscal years; and

(c) a detailed estimate to be furnished annually on or before August fifteenth to the Mayor and to the Planning Board by the head of each department, office, and agency the capital expenditures of which are paid out of the City treasury with respect to each capital project which is uncompleted or which the head believes should be undertaken within the ten succeeding fiscal years.

Section 2203. SUBMISSION OF BUDGET TO PLANNING BOARD. On or before September first the Mayor shall transmit to the Planning Board the capital budget, which shall set forth clearly:

(a) as to each proposed capital project, a brief description thereof; the department, office, or agency for which it would be constructed; the total estimated cost; the estimated completion date; the estimated cost for the ensuing fiscal year; the estimated economic life; the source of funds to meet such costs, together with the nature, terms, and maximum amount of obligations which may be issued therefor; and the fiscal year in which the Mayor recommends that the project be undertaken;

(b) as to each uncompleted capital project authorized by Council, a brief description thereof, the original estimated cost, the date of authorizing, the amounts of indebtedness authorized, of bonds and notes outstanding, of obligations issued, and of each other liability outstanding, and the unencumbered balances of authorizations on July first, the amount of each liability estimated to be incurred during the balance of the fiscal year, and the estimated costs required for completion, stated year by year;

(c) recommendations for changes or abandonment of previously approved capital projects;

(d) a brief description of each capital project recommended in the several department, office, and agency estimates but not recommended by the Mayor to be undertaken, with his reasons for not recommending it;

(e) the maximum expenditures which, in the opinion of the Mayor, the City may soundly make for capital projects during the ensuing fiscal year, together with the recommended sources for meeting such expenditures and detailed comments on the financial conditions of the City; and

(f) such other information as the Planning Board or Council may have requested.

Section 2204. SUBMISSION OF BUDGET TO COUNCIL. On or before September fifteenth the Planning Board shall submit to Council its revision of the capital budget prepared for the Mayor. The revised capital budget shall set forth the information and recommendations received by the Planning Board, with such additional information and changes as the Planning Board may see fit, except that the aggregate amount of the proposed expenditures for capital projects recommended for the ensuing fiscal year shall not exceed the maximum expenditures which, in the opinion of the Mayor, the City may soundly make for capital projects during the ensuing fiscal year.

Section 2205. CONSIDERATION OF BUDGET. Immediately after the receipt of the capital budget, Council shall consider the budget in public sessions, affording a reasonable opportunity for all persons to be heard thereon. Such session shall not extend beyond October first.

Section 2206. ADOPTION OF BUDGET. On or before October fifteenth Council shall adopt a capital budget. The capital budget submitted by the Planning Board may be adopted with or without modifications by the affirmative vote of a majority of the Councilmen holding office, except that any increase in any item of the capital budget as submitted by the Planning Board shall require the affirmative vote of two thirds of the Councilmen holding office.

Section 2207. CHANGES IN BUDGET. After the adoption of the capital budget it shall not be changed, except that a change recommended by three fourths of the members of the Planning Board may be adopted by Council.

Section 2208. EFFECT OF CAPITAL BUDGET. The adoption of the capital budget shall be an authorization and shall constitute an appropriation of loan funds for carrying out the approved projects in the manner provided therein, except that if funds for any project are to be derived from new debt or from an increase in indebtedness has been authorized in accordance with this Act. The current budget shall include an appropriation equal to the amount which the capital budget authorizes to be expended in that year out of revenue for capital projects. No contract or other obligation of the City in connection with the carrying out of any capital project shall be authorized unless the project is included in the capital budget as adopted by Council, and no contract or other obligation shall be binding unless and until an appropriation has been made therefor as provided in this Act.

Section 2209. LIMITATION ON LOANS FOR PROJECTS. The amount of loans issued for capital projects included in the first capital budget adopted hereunder shall not exceed ninety-eight per centum of the amount authorized in the capital budget to be expended for the ensuing fiscal year. In each succeeding year the permissible percentage shall be reduced by two, so that ultimately capital projects will be paid for wholly out of current revenue and no loans will be procured for capital projects. Notwithstanding the limitations in this section, Council may authorize indebtedness for all or part of the cost of any project which the Planning Board has estimated will cost more than ten million dollars ($10,000,000) or of any self-liquidating project; and such costs shall be excluded in determining the amount of bonds which may be issued in financing the capital budget.

ARTICLE XXIII

LOANS

Section 2301. POWER TO INCUR OR INCREASE INDEBTEDNESS. Subject to the limitations of the Constitution of this Commonwealth, the City may from time to time incur new debt or increase its indebtedness in such amount and in such manner as Council may by ordinance authorize; but the passage of such an ordinance shall require the affirmative vote of two thirds of the Councilmen holding office.

Section 2302. ORDINANCE TO PROVIDE FOR TAX AND TO STATE PURPOSE. In any ordinance authorizing the City to incur new debt or to increase its indebtedness, except temporary loans in anticipation of revenue, Council shall provide for the collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest and also the principal thereof, as is now or may hereafter be required by the Constitution; and any such ordinance shall state the purpose for which the new debt or increase of indebtedness is authorized. If more than one purpose is stated, the ordinance shall specify the amount proposed for each purpose.

Section 2303. COUNCILMANIC LOANS. Subject to the limitation in amount provided by the Constitution, Council may authorize by ordinance new debt to be incurred or the indebtedness to be increased without the consent of the electors of the City. Public notice shall be given of any such ordinance before its passage, except an ordinance to authorize an emergency loan or a temporary loan in anticipation of revenue.

Section 2304. ELECTORAL LOANS. Council may in its discretion submit for the approval of the electors in the manner hereinafter provided a proposal to incur or to increase the indebtedness of the City, and any such new debt or increase of indebtedness approved by the electors shall be excluded in computing the amount of the indebtedness of the City incurred without the consent of the electors.

Section 2305. PROCEDURE FOR ELECTORAL LOANS. In order to incur or to increase the indebtedness of the City with the consent of the electors, whether such consent is necessary by law or deemed advisable by Council, the following procedure shall be complied with.

(a) Certificate of City Controller. After the submission of a bill containing a proposal to incur or to increase the indebtedness, the City Controller shall prepare and deliver to Council his certificate showing the amount of indebtedness which the City has been authorized to incur, the amount of deductions therefrom allowed by law in computing the maximum indebtedness the City may incur, the resultant net indebtedness, the amount of the proposed new debt or increase of indebtedness, and the amount of indebtedness which the City has not yet been authorized to incur but which it may be authorized to incur.

(b) Passage of Ordinance. The proposal to incur or to increase the indebtedness shall be passed as an ordinance as provided in this article, which ordinance, in addition, shall state that the proposal to incur or to increase the indebtedness shall not become an effective authorization until the electors shall consent thereto at a public election to be held on a date fixed in the ordinance.

(c) Fixing Date of Election. Council shall fix the date of the election, which shall be the day of the next municipal, general, or primary election, unless there is insufficient time for the advertisement provided hereinafter, or unless more than ninety days will intervene between the passage of the ordinance and such election.

(d) Notice. Council shall give public notice of the election once a week for four weeks. The notice shall contain a summary of the ordinance proposing the incurrence or increase of indebtedness and a copy of the certificate of the City Controller.

(e) Election. The election shall be held at the places, during the hours, and under the regulations provided by law for holding elections. All penalties for the violation of the said election laws shall apply to the electors and to the election authorities participating in the election. The question whether new debt shall be incurred or indebtedness increased, as proposed in the ordinance, shall be placed upon the ballot or voting machine in brief form, followed by the words "yes" and "no" with appropriate voting squares or vote indicators; and if the question shall be submitted at an election of public officers, it shall be placed below the groups of candidates or on a separate ballot.

(f) Election Returns. The returns of the election shall be made in the manner provided by law. If by the returns of the election it shall appear that a majority of the electors voting thereon gave their consent to incurring new debt or to increasing the indebtedness as proposed in the ordinance, the ordinance shall, as of the date of the certificate by the court of the result thereof, be effective to authorize the new debt to be incurred or the indebtedness to be increased. If, however, it shall appear that a majority of the electors voting thereon did not give their consent, the ordinance shall be ineffective to authorize the new debt to be incurred or the indebtedness to be increased.

Section 2306. CHANGE IN PURPOSE OF INDEBTEDNESS. No change shall be made in the purpose or purposes for which any new debt or increase of indebtedness has been or shall hereafter be authorized except by the affirmative vote of two thirds of the Councilmen holding office and, in the case of an electoral loan, by the consent of the electors obtained at an election to be held at the time and in the manner provided herein as to an election to incur or increase indebtedness. The notice of such an election shall contain a copy of the ordinance proposing the change of purpose and shall state the purpose for which the indebtedness was originally authorized.

Section 2307. CANCELLATION OF AUTHORIZATION OF DEBT. Whenever the City has been authorized to incur or increase its indebtedness, Council, by the affirmative vote of two thirds of its members holding office, may cancel the authority to incur or increase indebtedness; and to the extent that the indebtedness has not actually been incurred or increased, the original authorization shall then be void.

Section 2308. INTERIM LOANS PRIOR TO BOND ISSUE. To meet payments as they become due in the course of construction of projects for which indebtedness has been authorized, Council shall from time to time authorize the City Treasurer to procure interim loans to be evidenced by notes or other forms of indebtedness which shall mature within two years after their execution and delivery. The Treasurer shall procure the loans upon the best terms available after offering the opportunity to make the loan to every bank in the City and, in his discretion, to any other bank, financial institution, or other bidder. Such loans shall be payable at any time before maturity upon ten days' notice. They shall not be renewed. Before the completion of any project for which interim loans have been procured, bonds may be issued to pay interim loans and interest thereon. When any interim loans is about to mature, enough bonds shall be issued so that the proceeds will be sufficient to pay the loan and interest thereon. After the completion of the project, enough bonds shall be issued so that the proceeds will pay all unpaid bills, interim loans, and interest incurred in connection with the project.

Section 2309. AUTHORIZATION OF BOND ISSUE. After the City has been empowered to incur or increase its indebtedness, bonds may be issued by its officers only pursuant to ordinance. Subject to the provisions of this Act, Council may, in any such ordinance, fix the interest date and the terms under which such bonds are to be issued.

Section 2310. ISSUANCE OF BONDS. Bonds shall not be issued by the City for less than par, plus accrued interest thereon. Issues of bonds shall be sold only to the highest responsible bidder or bidders as determined by the Mayor, City Treasurer, and City Controller after public notice given at least three weeks before the opening of bids, under such regulations as may be prescribed by ordinance. The Mayor, City Treasurer, and City Controller may reject all bids or any part of all bids if it shall be deemed for the best interest of the City so to do. The interest rate of bond issues offered for sale on any one date shall be named by the bidders in multiples of one eighth of one per centum and need not be uniform for the entire issue but must be uniform for any one maturity. After the highest responsible bidder has been determined, so much of any issue of such bonds as the Sinking Fund Commission has indicated at least two weeks before the opening of bids that it may desire to purchase shall be offered to the Sinking Fund Commission at the same price. If the Sinking Fund Commission does not accept the offer within three days, the issue may then be sold to the highest responsible bidder or bidders. Every bond shall be given a date which shall not be more than six weeks after the date of sale nor more than six weeks before the date of sale.

Section 2311. FORM, EXECUTION, AND TERMS OF BONDS. The form of all bonds shall be prepared by the City Solicitor. They shall be signed by the City Treasurer and the City Controller. Each issue of bonds shall be in serial form so as to mature in substantially equal annual or semi-annual installments, the last of which shall mature not later than fifty years from the date thereof and not later than the estimated economic life of the improvement for which the bonds have been issued. The estimated economic life as determined and certified by the Planning Board shall be conclusive. The bonds, in the discretion of Council, may provide that they are callable by the City at par on a date or dates stated therein. The City, by the affirmative vote of a majority of the Councilmen holding office, may issue revenue bonds and may issue refunding bonds, the maturity of which shall not extend beyond the maturity of the bonds refunded.

Section 2312. TEMPORARY LOANS IN ANTICIPATION OF REVENUE. If cash shall be needed for the immediate requirements of the City before the receipt of revenue, Council may authorize the City Treasurer to procure temporary loans, in the manner provided herein with reference to interim loans, in an aggregate amount not exceeding at any time ten per centum of the receipts for the year other than from borrowings as estimated by the Controller. The loans shall be made upon notes maturing within that year, and the notes shall not be renewable. Such loans may be procured only from January second to September first inclusive. No such loan shall be made from the loan funds or from trust funds or other special funds which may be created by the City. When such a loan is authorized, Council shall provide for its repayment out of receipts in that year. The intention of this section is that such loans shall be solely for the purpose of anticipating the receipt of revenue in the current year.

Section 2313. EMERGENCY LOANS. If the Mayor certifies that there is an emergency necessitating additional appropriating power, Council, by the affirmative vote of two thirds of its members holding office, may pass an ordinance stating specifically the nature of the emergency, making an appropriation to meet it, and authorizing the City Treasurer to procure one or more emergency loans in the manner provided herein as to interim loans. The aggregate amount of such loans remaining unpaid at any one time shall not exceed two million dollars ($2,000,000). Any such loan which will not be fully paid within the fiscal year in which it is procured shall be included by the City Controller in his next certificate of liabilities and shall be paid out of the revenue of the year following such certification before any expenses other than for debt service may be paid therefrom. No emergency loan shall be valid unless the provisions of this section have been complied with.

Section 2314. SINKING FUNDS. Whenever any debt shall be or shall have been created for which the Constitution of this Commonwealth requires a sinking fund to be established, the proceeds of the taxes levied for the payment of the principal and interest of such debt and all other money pledged or appropriated for the payment of the principal and interest of such debt shall be paid into the sinking funds of such city and shall be inviolably reserved for and applied exclusively to the payment of the principal and interest of such debt.

Section 2315. APPLICATION AND INVESTMENT OF SINKING FUNDS. Whenever there shall be money in the sinking funds in respect to a particular debt in excess of the requirements for the payment, during the twelve months next ensuing, of principal maturing and interest due, such excess money shall be applied to the purchase and cancellation of such debt; but if at any time it shall be impracticable or financially disadvantageous to purchase such debt and excess money, it may be invested temporarily but only in bonds or other evidences of debt of the United States of America of this Commonwealth or of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district of this Commonwealth which is not in default of the payment of any part of the principal or interest owing upon any part of its funded indebtedness.

Section 2316. PURCHASE OF OUTSTANDING DEBT. Council may at any time authorize the purchase by the City of any of its outstanding debt, and any such debt so purchased shall be cancelled.

Section 2317. SINKING FUND COMMISSION. The Sinking Fund Commission shall continue as now established by law.

ARTICLE XXIV

CONTRACTS

Section 2401. CONTRACTS ONLY WITH LOWEST RESPONSIBLE BIDDERS. Except as provided herein with respect to emergency purchases, every contract providing for payments out of the City treasury or out of funds the expenditure of which is within the control of the City shall be made under such regulations as may be prescribed by ordinance only with the lowest responsible bidder, after public notice if the payment is to be more than three hundred dollars ($300), and otherwise after reasonable notice. Bids shall not be invited until the plans and specifications have been approved by the City Controller as provided in this Act. The City may reject all bids or any part of all bids if it shall be deemed for the best interest of the City so to do. The requirement as to the lowest responsible bidder shall not prohibit Council from imposing conditions with reference to the terms under which the contract is to be performed. No contract shall be entered into or executed directly by Council or by a committee thereof.

Section 2402. EMERGENCY PURCHASES. An emergency purchase may be made only when authorized by the Purchasing Bureau. Such purchases may be made without requiring bids. A purchase shall be deemed an emergency purchase only if the purchase is immediately necessary to prevent loss of public property or to avoid serious inconvenience to the public. Council may by ordinance restrict or limit the power to make emergency purchases.

Section 2403. FORM OF CONTRACTS. No contract shall bind the City unless it is in writing and prepared or approved by the City Solicitor. Every contract shall contain a provision that it is subject to the provisions of this Act and that the liability of the City thereon, except as otherwise specifically provided in this Act, shall be limited to the amounts which have been appropriated to meet such liability. This section shall not apply to contracts of employment with persons in the Civil Service of the City.

Section 2404. TERM. No contract except for a capital project shall provide for any payment by the City or for the furnishing of the consideration therefor later than one year from the date of its execution. However, a lease may be made by the City as lessee for a term not in excess of five years from the date of execution of the lease.

Section 2405. EXECUTION. All contracts shall be made in the name of the City and, except as may be otherwise provided by Council, shall be signed and executed by the Mayor or by an officer designated by him. No contract shall be valid or enforceable until endorsed by the City Solicitor and certified by the City Controller as provided in this Act.

Section 2406. CONTRACTS WITH OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES PROHIBITED. No contract providing for any payment out of the City treasury shall be made with any Councilman, officer, or employe of the City, or with any officer or employe whose salary is paid out of the City treasury, or with any firm, partnership, or association of which any such person is a member, or with any corporation in which any such person has a substantial interest. Any such person who knowingly conceals his interest in such a contract or who knowingly acquires an interest in any contract to which the City is a party shall forfeit his office or position.

Section 2407. INSTALLMENT PURCHASING PRO-

HIBITED. No purchase or contract to purchase by the City shall be made on an installment plan, whether by conditional sale, bailment lease, or otherwise. Any such purchase or contract to purchase shall be void and unenforceable.

Section 2408. PAVING, REPAIRING, CLEANING OF STREETS, ET CETERA. Except as hereinafter provided, the City shall with its own force pave, repair, and clean the streets; collect ashes, waste, rubbish, and garbage; and dispose of street sweepings and of ashes, waste, rubbish, and garbage. The City shall have the power to lease, acquire, construct, or cause to be constructed a plant or plants to be used for or in connection with any of the purposes mentioned in this section, and to lease the same to any person, association, or corporation which shall contract in the manner provided herein to perform such work for the City. The City may contract for the paving of streets and for the collection of garbage. The City, after the affirmative vote of the Councilmen holding office, may contract for the repair and cleaning of streets and for the collection of ashes, waste, and rubbish, if it is to the best interests of the City. For the purpose of determining whether it is to the best interest of the City to authorize the performance of any such work by contract, bids shall be invited pursuant to resolution by Council before July first next preceding the year in which the work is to be done. Public notice of the invitation of bids shall be given once a week from July fifteenth to August fifteenth. A summary of the bids shall be included by the Mayor in the budget.

Section 2409. CONTRACT PRICE FOR PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS NOT TO EXCEED ESTIMATE. Before the letting of any contract in connection with a capital project, an estimate of the costs of the various parts of the project shall be made by the department having charge of the construction. The aggregate estimated cost shall not exceed the total cost as provided in the capital budget. No bid for any part of the work in excess of the estimate of the cost thereof shall be accepted. Any estimate or contract as to a part of the project may be limited to any unit or units or any part or parts, and upon the making of a contract therefor the work on such unit or units, part or parts, may proceed to the extent of the funds available for the purposes thereof.

Section 2410. CITY NOT LIABLE FOR ASSESSED IMPROVEMENTS. In all contracts for improvements the cost of which is to be paid by assessment upon the property abutting or benefited, the City shall not be liable on the contracts or for any claim for the amount to be collected from such assessment, but the contractor shall look to the assessment for his compensation.

ARTICLE XXV

OFFICERS AND EMPLOYES IN GENERAL

Section 2501. CONTINUATION IN OFFICE. Any person holding an office shall continue to hold the office until his successor has qualified.

Section 2502. VACANCIES. A vacancy in any office the term of which is fixed by this Act shall be filled only for the unexpired portion of the term.

Section 2503. PERSON TO HOLD ONLY ONE OFFICE. No person shall hold more than one office or position of profit under the City government, and no person shall hold any office or position of profit under the City or any department thereof while holding any other office or position of profit in or under the government of the United States, of the Commonwealth, or of any political subdivision thereof. However, nothing in this section shall apply to the offices of notary public or of commissioner of deeds or to any office in the military or naval service of the United States or of this Commonwealth, and nothing in this section shall prevent persons from holding office ex officio.

Section 2504. RESIDENCE REQUIREMENTS OF ELECTIVE OFFICERS. All officers elected by the qualified voters of the City shall be residents thereof at the time of their nomination and election and shall reside therein during their term of service.

Section 2505. DUTIES OF PERSONS RECEIVING CITY MONEY. Every officer or agency receiving money for the City or money payable into the City treasury shall give bond for the faithful performance of his duty and shall be required to make return to the City Controller, under oath or affirmation administered by him, of each item of the moneys received by him once in every week, or oftener if Council shall so direct, and to pay the amounts in his hands to the City treasurer daily.

Section 2506. COMPENSATION BY SALARY AND NOT BY FEES. No officer or employe of the City shall collect any fees or perquisites for his own use, but all such fees or perquisites collectible under the law shall be paid into the City treasury. Each officer or employe whose salary is paid out of the City treasury shall be paid semi-monthly by check to his order.

Section 2507. PENSION FUNDS. There shall continue to be pension funds for the employes of the City as now provided by law.

Section 2508. IMPEACHMENT, SUSPENSION, AND REMOVAL. (a) Municipal officers shall be liable to impeachment, suspension, and removal from office for any corrupt act or practice, malfeasance, mismanagement, mental incapacity or incompetency for the proper performance of official duties, extortion, receiving any gift or present from any contractor or from any person seeking or engaged in any work for or furnishing material to the City, or from any incumbent or occupant of or candidate or applicant for any municipal office, and for willfully concealing any fraud committed against the City.

(b) Complaint in writing may be made to a court of common pleas of the proper County by not less than twenty qualified electors of the City, each of whom shall write his occupation and residence opposite his signature, charging any municipal officer with any offense, setting forth the facts on which the said charge is founded, supported by the oaths or affirmations of at least five of the complainants according to the best of their knowledge, information, and belief. If in the judgment of the court there appears to be reasonable ground for such proceedings, the court shall direct the complaint to be filed of record and grant a rule upon the accused returnable on a day certain to appear and answer the same.

(c) If on the return day of the rule the court shall find sufficient cause for further proceedings, it shall appoint a committee of five competent and reputable citizens to investigate the charges contained in the complaint who, having been first severally sworn or affirmed to perform the duties of their appointment with fidelity, shall have full authority for that purpose, to examine the books of the office held by accused and any papers, contracts, letters, or documents filed therein, and examine witnesses under oath or affirmation whose attendance the court shall enforce, if necessary, by subpoena and attachment.

(d) It shall be the duty of the committee to make a written report to the court of the facts found by it, which shall be filed of record, accompanied by the testimony taken, within three weeks next after its appointment, unless the time shall be extended by the court upon its application. In any stage of the proceedings, if the public interest so require, the court may, by an order to be filed of record in the case, suspend the accused from office until he shall be tried and acquitted.

(e) If the committee or any three members thereof shall find that any charge made as aforesaid is well founded, it shall in its report so state in specific form; and in such case the court shall cause a certified copy of the whole record with the specifications of the charges against the accused to be transmitted to Council, which shall be assembled within ten days thereafter in special and open session as a court of impeachment, and the members other than a Councilman who is the subject of the charge shall be severally sworn to try and decide the same according to the evidence. A copy of the specifications shall be served on the accused or left at his last place of residence at least five days before the commencement of the trial, and he shall be entitled to be heard thereon in person or by counsel and to produce evidence in his defense, and the prosecution before Council shall be conducted by the committee or by counsel appointed by it. The compensation of counsel and the cost of investigation and prosecution by the committee shall be provided for by ordinance.

(f) The president judge of the said court of common pleas, or in his absence an associate judge thereof, shall preside during the trial and decide finally all questions of law and evidence that may arise in the case. He shall have the power to issue subpoenas for witnesses and compel their attendance by attachment and the production of books, papers, and documentary evidence required or called for by the said court of impeachment and to punish witnesses and others for contempts as fully as any court of this Commonwealth may lawfully do in any case.

(g) The decision of the court of impeachment shall be entered upon the record of its proceedings and certified by the clerk of the court in which the complaint was filed. If the accused shall be found guilty on any of the specifications, the said court of common pleas shall enter judgment accordingly and declare the said office vacant.

ARTICLE XXVI

POWERS OF THE CITY

Section 2601. SPECIFIC POWERS. The City shall be a body corporate and politic with perpetual succession and shall have the following powers to be exercised as now or hereafter provided by law:

A. Corporate Powers. The corporate powers shall include the power to

- (1) sue and be sued;
- (2) acquire property for public use by eminent domain, purchase, lease, gift, or otherwise;
- (3) dispose of property of the City by sale, lease, mortgage, pledge, or otherwise;
- (4) act as trustee and administer trusts;
- (5) grant franchises;
- (6) have and use a corporate seal and alter the same at pleasure; and
- (7) make all contracts and do all other acts in relation to the property and affairs of the City necessary to exercise its corporate or administrative powers.

B. Financial Powers. The financial powers shall include the power to

- (1) levy, assess, and collect taxes on persons, transactions, occupations, privileges, subjects, and real and personal property;
- (2) levy, assess, and collect special assessments for benefits conferred;
- (3) borrow money for the public purposes of the City; and
- (4) provide for the payment of the debts and expenses of the City and appropriate money for these and other public purposes.

C. Public Facilities. The powers as to public facilities shall include the power to

- (1) acquire, own, construct, dispose of, maintain, operate and conduct (a) park and recreation facilities; (b) fire and police facilities and traffic systems; (c) buildings for the transaction of public business; (d) charitable and medical institutions and facilities; (e) institutions and facilities for detention, reformation, and correction; (f) public utilities; (g) public markers; (h) public auditoriums, libraries, memorial buildings, monuments, museums, and aquariums; and (i) comfort stations, waiting stations, and drinking fountains; and

- (2) furnish utility service within and without the limits of the City.

D. Regulatory Powers. The regulatory powers shall include the power to

- (1) license, inspect, or otherwise regulate (a) the construction and maintenance of buildings, fire escapes, engines, and boilers; (b) the installation of standpipes and sprinkler systems; (c) the sale, use, and storage of fireworks, explosives, chemicals, and combustibles; (d) junk shops, rag shops, secondhand stores, and peddlers; (e) transient retail merchants; (f) public dances, balls, theatres, exhibitions, and billiard rooms; (g) employment agencies; (h) sales at public auction; (i) public markets; (j) tenement houses; (k) the transportation by motor vehicles of passengers or property for pay; and

- (1) weights and measures;

- (2) regulate and restrict the location, size; and use of buildings and other structures in the City or any part thereof; and

- (3) regulate wharves, fix wharf lines, and keep navigable waters open.

E. Street Improvements. The powers as to the street improvements shall include the power to

- (1) lay out, widen, grade, pave, maintain, clean, and vacate streets, alleys, footways, sewers bridges, viaducts and piers;

- (2) require the owners of property to lay, set, or repair sidewalks, footways, and curbstones or to pay therefor;

(3) require the owners of property to pay for paving streets, laying sewers, and other abutting improvements; and

(4) plant and maintain shade trees and to compel the abutting owners to pay therefor.

F. Additional Powers. The City shall have the additional power to

(1) organize and reorganize all agencies of the City;

(2) fix the number and compensation of all officers and employees to be paid out of the City treasury;

(3) maintain and improve public health, and for that purpose to regulate and license occupations and activities, inspect buildings, remove and compel the removal of nuisances, and remove and dispose of ashes, rubbish, waste, and garbage;

(4) participate in the establishment of, and deal with, municipal housing and other authorities;

(5) make reservations of land for future acquisition for public use;

(6) create and maintain pension funds for persons paid out of the City treasury;

(7) make contracts with stock or mutual fire insurance companies; and

(8) appropriate money and provide meeting rooms to any organization, society, or institution carrying on a public function in the City.

Section 2602. GENERAL POWERS. In addition to the specific powers above stated the City shall have the power of local self-government and to pass ordinances and resolutions, applicable throughout the whole City or only to specified portions thereof, which are not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act or of the Constitution or laws of the United States or of this Commonwealth;

(a) for the good rule and government of the City;

(b) for the order, protection, and government of persons and property;

(c) for the benefit and preservation of the health, comfort, peace, prosperity, and general welfare of the City and its inhabitants;

(d) to effectuate the purposes and provisions of this Act or of any other laws relating to the City; and

(e) to provide (1) for the enforcement of ordinances and resolutions by legal or equitable proceedings, (2) that violations thereof shall constitute misdemeanors, and (3) for the punishment of violations thereof by forfeiture or by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100) for any one offense recoverable with costs, together with judgment of imprisonment not exceeding thirty days if the amount of the fines and costs shall not be paid within ten days from the date of the imposition thereof.

Section 2603. OTHER POWERS SAVED. All existing powers of the City shall continue, whether or not mentioned herein, except insofar as they are repealed by this Act.

ARTICLE XXVII

HOME RULE

Section 2701. Local Self-Government. The City shall have the right and power to frame and adopt changes in this Act which shall be solely applicable to it and to exercise the power and authority of local self-government, subject, however, to such restrictions, limitations, and regulations as are provided in this article or as may hereafter be imposed by the Legislature. The City may, as provided in this Act, change or supersede any law relating to the self-government of the City.

Section 2702. Changes by Council. Any bill introduced in Council for the purpose of changing this Act, or any other Act which relates to the self-government of the City, shall not be passed until a public hearing has been had thereon pursuant to public notice.

Section 2703. Approval of Electors. Any ordinance passed by Council for the purpose of changing this Act shall be submitted for the approval of the electors at the next general, special, or primary election to be held not less than sixty days after the passage thereof by Council, except that no such approval shall be necessary for a bill which provides for changes in Articles IV to XIII hereof inclusive.

Section 2704. APPROVAL OF LEGISLATURE. An ordinance passed by Council which under this article requires the approval of the electors shall become effective upon the approval thereof by the electors, except that a change in Articles I, II, XVII, XVIII, XXIII, XXVI or XXVII hereof shall not become effective until thirty-one days after the adjournment of a pending or the next session of the General Assembly at which it was possible to consider legislation in regard thereto, and then only to the extent to which such ordinance shall not conflict with an act or acts enacted at such session.

ARTICLE XXVIII

COUNTY OFFICES AFTER CITY-COUNTY CONSOLIDATION

Section 2801. IF, AS, AND WHEN an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth abolishing the County of Philadelphia as a separate political entity shall have been adopted and become effective, the County offices of Sheriff and Coroner shall cease to exist, the functions of the Sheriff being transferred to the Clerk of Quarter Sessions, and the functions of the Coroner being transferred to the City Department of Health; the Office of the County Treasurer shall be merged into the office of the City Treasurer at a compensation to be fixed by the Council; the office and functions of the County Controller shall likewise be merged into the office of City Controller at a compensation to be fixed by the Council.

Section 2802. All County and court officers and employees other than the Sheriff and the Coroner shall become officers and employees of the City and, except as otherwise provided in this article, shall continue to perform their duties and to be elected, appointed, compensated, and organized in such manner as may be provided by the Constitution and laws of the Commonwealth in effect at the time the amendment becomes effective, except that the compensation of all such shall be fixed by the Council unless otherwise fixed by law; that the method of selection of judges, magistrates, City Treasurer, City Controller, District Attorney, and County Commissioners shall be unchanged except as the General Assembly shall otherwise provide; and that the Clerk of Quarter Sessions, the Register of Wills, and the Recorder of Deeds shall hereafter be appointed by the Judges of the courts of common pleas of the City, instead of being elected by the people as heretofore; and that the provisions of the County

Civil Service Act shall be merged into the City Civil Service and shall apply to all such officers and employees except as otherwise provided.

ARTICLE XXIX

CONSTRUCTION OF THIS ACT

Section 2901. LIBERAL CONSTRUCTION. The provisions of this Act shall be construed liberally in order to effect the intent and purpose of the Act.

Section 2902. INCONSISTENT SPECIFIC LAWS. No provisions of existing laws, even though they be specific, shall be effective insofar as they are inconsistent with the provisions of this Act.

ARTICLE XXX

SCHEDULE

Section 3001. CONTINUATION OF OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES. Each member of the Art Jury and of the Board of Plumbing Supervision now in office shall continue in office until his term shall expire. Members of the Zoning Board of Adjustment, Board of Prison Inspectors, Fairmount Park Commission, Board of Revision of Taxes, and City Planning Commission shall not continue in office. All other officers and employees of any department, office, or agency the expenses of which are paid out of the City treasury shall continue in office or employment but shall be under the jurisdiction of the agency to which their functions are assigned by this Act until transferred, superseded, or removed according to law.

Section 3002. CIVIL SERVICE. Any employee who holds a position which is in the classified service as herein defined and which was in the competitive class under the law in force immediately preceding the effective date of this Act shall, if he has successfully completed his probationary period, become a classified service employee under the provisions hereof and continue in that position unless separated therefrom as herein provided. Any such employee who has not completed such probationary period at the time this Act takes effect shall retain his status as a probationary employee until the expiration of that probationary period or until one month after the effective date of this Act, whichever period is longer. Any employee who holds a position which is in the classified service as herein defined and which was in the labor class under the law in force immediately preceding the effective date of this Act shall become a classified service employee under the provisions hereof and continue in that position unless separated therefrom as herein provided. Any employee serving as a provisional or temporary appointee at the time this Act takes effect shall be regarded as a provisional or temporary appointee under this Act and shall be subject to the provisions thereof. Any other employee holding a position in the classified service as herein defined may become a classified service employee upon passing such noncompetitive tests as the Personnel Director may prescribe. Such noncompetitive tests shall be given as soon as practicable, but in any event within six months after the effective date of this Act.

Section 3003. CONTINUATION OF ORDINANCES AND REGULATIONS. All ordinances and all rules and regulations of departments, boards, commissions, and other agencies which are in force in the City and are not inconsistent with this Act, including those passed and adopted in pursuance of laws hereby repealed, shall continue in force until repealed or amended.

Section 3004. CONTINUATION OF RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES. All existing rights, liabilities, actions, and prosecutions shall continue as if this Act had not been enacted.

ARTICLE XXXI

EFFECTIVE DATES

Section 3101. APPROVAL OF ELECTORS. This Act shall be submitted to the electors of any city now of the first class at the first general, special, or primary election following its enactment. In any city which in the future becomes a city of the first class, this Act shall be submitted to the electors at the first general, special, or primary election which is held after it has become a city of the first class. The question shall be submitted to the electors in the following form:

"Do you approve the Act of Assembly of containing the proposed new city Charter?"

Section 3102. NOMINATIONS AND ELECTIONS. The provisions of this Act as to the nomination and election of the Mayor and new Council shall become effective upon the approval of this Act by a majority of the electors voting thereon, and the first election shall be held at the primary and general election of one thousand nine hundred and fifty-one. The repeal of the laws as to the nomination and election of a Mayor, Council, and a Receiver of taxes and of the County officers as herein provided in Article XXVIII shall become effective upon the approval of this Act by the electors.

Section 3103. CURRENT BUDGET. The article of this Act relating to the current budget shall become effective on January first next, after the approval of this Act by a majority of the electors voting thereon, except that (a) the aggregate assessed valuation of taxable property shall be certified by the Board of Revision of Taxes instead of the Chief Assessor, but if the records of that board are not complete, an estimate of the aggregate assessed valuation shall be made and certified by the City Controller; (b) the liabilities in the certificate of revenue and liabilities to be furnished by the Controller may be reduced to the extent that any law permits the existing deficiency to be allocated or funded over one or more years after the next ensuing year; and (c) the provision relating to the transfer of appropriations shall not go into effect until one year after the January first next, after the approval of the Act by the electors; (d) until the general effective date of the Act, the Budget Director shall be appointed by the Mayor and shall be a member of the Mayor's office staff. The repeal of the provisions of law pertaining to the finances and the budget of the City shall become effective upon the effective date of the provision or provisions of this Act by which they are superseded.

Section 3104. GENERAL EFFECTIVE DATE. Except as expressly provided above, this Act shall become effective in the City on the first Monday of January following the election of the Mayor and new Council under the provisions of this Act.

SUBMITTED BY RICHARDSON DILWORTH

It is, of course, true that the key to good government is good public servants. Even the best systems of government can be perverted by incompetent, corrupt public officers. There is no better example of this than the government of the City of Philadelphia. None the less, good public servants should be afforded the advantage of a workable system of government.

It is for this reason important that reforms be gotten under way in the coming session of the Legislature which will give Philadelphia a modern municipal government. This involves several important steps.

1. An amendment to the Pennsylvania State constitution providing for the consideration of the city and county of Philadelphia.

This being a constitutional amendment, it must be passed by two successive legislatures, and then approved by a vote of all the citizens of Pennsylvania. Accordingly, the constitutional amendment cannot go to the voters for final approval until the municipal election in 1951, having first been passed by the 1949 and 1951 sessions of the legislature.

The people of Philadelphia should be reminded that such an amendment was submitted to the voters in 1937 after having been passed by the 1935 and 1937 sessions of the legislature. The amendment received a substantial majority in Philadelphia, but was defeated by a corrupt deal between the Philadelphia Republican organization and Grundy's state organization, whereby the Grundy machine brought about its defeat in the counties which it controls.

The principal advantage of city-county consolidation is that it will make possible proper integration of our city government by the elimination of 13 independent county departments. The authority for all executive and legislative government functions can then be vested in the mayor, his cabinet, and City Council where it belongs.

2. Pending adoption of a constitutional amendment, providing for the city-county merger, a simple new city charter, which includes a home rule provision, should be enacted by the 1949 session of the legislature.

The groundwork for such a charter has already been laid in a study conducted by Thomas Evans, the Chairman of the 1937 Charter Commission, and by the Bureau of Municipal Research. There should be no difficulty in preparing and presenting to the next session of the legislature a workable draft for a city charter.

The most effective means of presenting this would be for the Joint State Government Commission to hold hearings in Philadelphia in the early part of December, at which time all persons interested in reform of our municipal government can present their proposals. We are confident that there will be little disagreement among the students of municipal government as to the kind of city charter we should have. Then, we can all get behind a charter to be presented to the legislature. Generally speaking, this new charter should provide:

- a. A strong mayor as the city's top executive officer.
- b. A small City Council of eleven, six of whom should be elected from the Congressional Districts (one from each District), the remaining five from the city at large.
- c. A home rule provision which will enable the citizens of Philadelphia to change their charter at any general or municipal election, either on the recommendation of City Council, or the initiative of the citizens themselves.

d. A re-written Civil Service Article to remedy the appalling difficulties in the present administration of the Philadelphia City Civil Service.

This new charter should be passed by the 1949 session of the legislature, and submitted to the voters for their approval in the municipal election of 1949. When the city-county constitutional amendment is later approved, the charter can then be amended by vote of the people of Philadelphia so as to take advantage of the elimination of separate county government.

3. Enactment by the 1949 session of the legislature of a bill placing the county offices under the merit system, and designating the Civil Service Commission in the City and its personnel director as the agency to administer the system for the county offices.

This badly needed reform, even if poorly administered by the present rotten commission, can be of material aid in breaking the stranglehold of the Republican organization on the city and county.

4. There should be enacted a constitutional amendment at the next legislature stabilizing the city's debt limit at 12½% of the average yearly assessed valuation of the taxable real estate for the past ten years. Such an amendment would reduce the present wide fluctuations in the debt limit, and provide a stable base.

5. Repeal by the 1949 session of the legislature of the Party Raiding Bill. The Party Raiding Bill was enacted in 1937 by a Democratic Legislature in the hope it would aid them to remain in power. It was a bad bill when it was enacted, and it is a bad bill now, but unfortunately today it suits the purposes of the Philadelphia Republican machine.

Under the Party Raiding Bill only candidates for judicial office can run on more than one party ticket. This means that in Philadelphia candidates on a fusion or citizens' ticket must run on the Democratic ticket, and no other. If the Party Raiding Bill is repealed, candidates could run both on the Democratic ticket and a fusion party ticket.

6. There should be an amendment to the election law to eliminate the present inflexible rule that watchers in polling places must live in the division in which they serve.

There are at present between 80 and 100 divisions in controlled river wards in Philadelphia, where the Democratic Party cannot obtain any competent election officers. The result is wholesale frauds in these divisions, and returns which sometimes run as high as 100 to 1 in such divisions. The law should be amended to provide that upon a proper showing of cause, the election court can appoint any registered voter in Philadelphia as watcher in divisions where such conditions exist.

7. There should be enacted a law similar to New York State's Moreland Act. This is an act which provides for the effective investigation of the affairs of any county or municipality by the Governor.

As the law now stands in Pennsylvania, the Attorney General may supersede the District Attorney in any county, but if he does so, the only investigation he can conduct is a restricted grand jury investigation, and the county or municipality investigated cannot be required to bear the costs of the investigation.

This situation is one of the reasons now hamstringing an effective investigation of the regime in City Hall. That regime is, of course, unwilling to investigate itself. The Attorney General is without sufficient funds to conduct an effective investigation, and unless he can persuade the next session of the legislature to appropriate such funds, the entire investigation will collapse.

Past experience has demonstrated that the legislature is usually unwilling to appropriate moneys for the investigation of the government of a county or municipality. The legislature is naturally reluctant to call on the taxpayers of the entire state to assume the cost of such an investigation. This makes county and municipal governments virtually immune to effective investigation by the state.

A law should, therefore, be enacted to permit the Governor to appoint a commissioner to investigate the conduct of the government of any county or municipality; and, to require that the county or municipality investigated bear the reasonable cost of such an investigation. This law should also give the commissioner the power to subpoena and swear witnesses without the necessity of the present cumbersome grand jury process.

A copy of this entire program has been forwarded to the Governor and to the Attorney General, as well as to the Joint State Government Commission. It is hoped the Joint State Government Commission will commence hearings on a complete legislative program for Philadelphia at the earliest possible moment.

It is absolutely clear that the local Republican organization will oppose these measures with all of its force. City Hall may render lip service, but, if it does, it will then seek to sabotage the entire program by its usual behind-the-scenes tactics. Despite City Hall, if the people of Philadelphia unite behind the program, we reiterate our confident belief that the entire program can be enacted.

We welcome the support of all citizens regardless of party. This should be a bi-partisan effort to give Philadelphia the tools which make decent government easier.

SUBMITTED BY NEGRO CITIZENS LEGAL COMMITTEE

Gentlemen of the Committee:

Good government is the concern of all the citizens of a community. Yet, the interest and opinion of at least 16 per cent of the population of Philadelphia have never been consulted by the various groups which have made proposals to the committee concerning the changes in the form of government for the City and County of Philadelphia.

Although these various groups which have submitted recommendations for changes in the city charter or for consolidation of the City and County government purport to speak for all the people, they in fact only speak for the small upper class which is represented in their membership. The Negro people have been entirely ignored by these groups; despite the fact that Negroes, who form 16 per cent of the population of Philadelphia and have a registered vote of 161,706, suffer most by bad government than any element of the population.

Negroes suffer most from poor enforcement of housing regulations and lack of police protection. More than 50 per cent of the slums of the city are inhabited by Negroes. They pay relatively higher prices than any other group for the necessities of life; such as food, clothing and shelter.

Because Negroes have not been consulted and their attitude on these important matters has not been made known to the committee, many leaders of the Negro people have deemed it necessary that the opinion of Negroes be solicited and their recommendations conveyed to this committee. This is the mission of this committee. It makes no pretense of speaking for any one but the Negro people of Philadelphia.

Negroes are in opposition to the basic approach of the various organizations which have made recommendations to this committee for Charter changes and consolidation of City and County government. These organizations include: Chamber of Commerce of Philadelphia, Bureau of Municipal Research, Citizens' Council on City Planning, Committee of Seventy, Philadelphia Committee of Pennsylvania Economy League and the Institute of City and County Government, all favor greater concentration of authority in the hands of the Mayor and a few other elective offices. They favor only four elective offices; the Mayor, the Controller, District Attorney and City Council. They, consequently, favor a government of indirect responsibility to the masses of voters. For fewer elective offices mean more appointive offices over which the electorate has no direct control.

All these civic, political or commercial organizations seek much greater power and authority for the Mayor of Philadelphia. Their proposal would make him the unrestrained governmental and political ruler of the city. Why do they desire to place these extreme powers in the office of the Mayor? Have the mayors of Philadelphia under the Charter of 1919 been so exceptionally efficient and able that the public is warranted in entrusting this office with these additional powers and authority? Have the mayors of Philadelphia been more efficient in the administration of their duties than other elected officers of the city? Any intelligent citizen consulted by this committee will answer "no" to both of these questions.

With the exception of Mayor Lamberton, who lived to serve the city less than a year, Philadelphia has not elected one capable or efficient mayor in the thirty years that the present Charter has been in effect. Mayor J. Hampton Moore was considered the best of the lot and he was so officially blind that he publicly stated that there were so slums in the city of Philadelphia and, consequently, turned down 75 million dollars of Federal funds which could have been obtained for slum clearance. The citizens of Philadelphia are paying Federal taxes for slum clearance in Chicago, New York and every large city in the United States, but receive little or no benefit for slum clearance in Philadelphia because of the shortsightedness of ex-Mayor J. Hampton Moore.

The reason for vesting greater power and authority in the office of Mayor is not to be found in the sole desire to improve city government, as these proposals appear to be actuated largely by political motives. These small, upper class groups apparently hope to weaken political organizations in Philadelphia by placing all offices under civil service. This would happen to the personnel of any office transferred to the Mayor or to any city office.

If political workers cannot be in some way rewarded, political organizations suffer. If political organizations are made weaker the voices of wealth and prominent names, in politics become stronger. It is these groups which are making the proposals for these undemocratic changes in our city governmental structure.

What is this great principle of government the newspaper and some of these civic leaders are ranting about? They talk about consolidation of city and county government as though it would affect a great financial saving to the people of Philadelphia and would be a cure-all for their defects and abuses in government. Although these are the headlines used by these civic organizations to attract public support, in a pamphlet distributed by these leading organizations, they deny any present overlapping of governmental functions or that there would be any saving to the people of Philadelphia. The specific language of this pamphlet is as follows:

"Consolidation Objectives. It is sometimes said that complete consolidation is desirable for Philadelphia because city and county governments are wastefully duplicating each other's work. But duplication has never been a serious problem and is not now.

"It is said also that consolidation would enable Philadelphians to discontinue some county functions that have outlived their usefulness. This is not correct either, for all the present activities of county officers would have to be continued.

"What advocates of consolidation want is that all the functions of county officers be performed by city officers, and that as many as possible be performed by appointed city officers."

From the admission of these organizations it appears that all the fuss about city and county merger only amounts to a desire to concentrate more power in the hands of the Mayor, to make a different assignment of the functions of the various bureaus and departments and to make more of the heads of Departments appointive.

It is also to be remembered that these same groups in 1937 recommended and fanatically supported a new charter for Philadelphia which provided for proportional representation in Council and a city manager. Experience has shown that both of these proposals are unworkable for a large city. New York City abolished proportional representation after a brief experience. All of which shows that these groups are far from infallible when it comes to public administration and that they are bad guides for public officials to follow.

These groups pretend to be following the example of the Federal government in recommending the concentration of authority in the hands of a few elected officers, but the analogy is not supported by the facts. The reason so much power is concentrated in the hands of the President and not distributed among four or five elected officers is because of the impracticability of conducting a campaign which would enlighten a nation which covers so great an area and where the vote reaches more than 55 million. It is difficult enough to acquaint the nation with the merits and qualifications of a presidential and vice presidential candidate, it would be almost impossible and most confusing to attempt to inform the nation of the qualifications of eight or ten people for office in the course of a two months' campaign.

There is, however, no reason to forsake Democratic principles in a local election, where it is very easy for the public to know and find out the qualifications of their neighbors. Seven or eight people on a ticket for major local offices cannot therefore be said to create a problem.

The Negro people of Philadelphia are for more Democracy in government and not less. They favor more direct responsibility by city officials to the electorate and not less. They believe that the interest of the masses of the people suffer when the responsibility for public office is an indirect one, where inefficiency and even culpability can be hidden by the shift of responsibility through appointive officers.

Negroes oppose weakening political party organizations. They believe that in the long run their interest and that of the community is best served through political parties rather than by a dominant financial or civic clique. Negroes also believe that the one great bulwark against the spread of Communism in Philadelphia and throughout America has been the strength of the Republican and Democratic parties. To the extent that we weaken these two great parties, to that extent, Communism and other foreign ideologies will spread.

Negroes are vitally interested in improving the administration of public office in Philadelphia. They are far from satisfied as they suffered more of the abuses than any other element of the population. Negroes are convinced that most of the proposals submitted by these organizations is not the solution to their problems or the problems of the city as a whole. An efficient honest administration is indeed possible under our present laws without a single change, for efficient administrations almost entirely depend on the people who are holding office, rather than upon laws. An alerted and interested public could do more to improve city government than all of the changes of law which this legislation or any other may enact.

The form of government is however, most important to Negroes and other underprivileged groups; and it is mainly through the ballot that they may hope to better their status. Anything that weakens the ballot weakens their cause and the ballot is weakened whenever public responsibility ceases to be direct.

The wisdom of the saying "not to put all your eggs in one basket" is as true of politics as other phases of life. It is better to entrust the administration of government among eight or ten elected people where that is practical rather than risk all of these functions of government in the hands of one man—the Mayor.

In conformance with the principles herein set forth this committee offers relatively few changes in our governmental structure. All of these changes are for the purpose of logically realigning governmental functions under the proper bureau or department, but at the same time preserving as many elective officers as a democratic government directly responsible for the people should have.

The following are the committee's recommendations:

PROPOSED CHANGES IN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA

1. The functions of the office of City Commissioners should be substantially changed. This department should be confined entirely to the supervision and control of all matters pertaining to registrations and elections. The Commission should be increased from three to seven members, and three of these members should come from the minority party. All other governmental functions now performed by the County Commissioners should be transferred to various other City Departments, as noted in this report.

The duties and powers of the proposed County Commissioner's office would be:

- a. To cover all the functions presently administered by the Registration Commission.
- b. To continue to administer and supervise all matters pertaining to elections, which are now vested in the County Commissioners.

The following duties and powers now vested in the City Commissioners should be transferred to these various departments:

- a. Those relating to weights and measures should be assigned to the City Solicitor's office.
- b. Those relating to the administration of oaths to the City Solicitor's office.
- c. The disbursement of funds now handled by the County Commissioners should be transferred to the City Treasurer.

At present the functions and duties of the County Commissioner's office present a greater conglomeration than any other city department.

2. The office of City Controller should be continued as an elective office as it now exists. It is absolutely necessary that this office, which is a bookkeeping and auditing bureau for all city and county departments should remain over all denomination of any other city official and directly responsible to the people.

3. The office of City Treasurer should be continued as an elective office with all of its present functions, and in addition; shall perform the duties now administered by the Receiver of Taxes.

The office of Receiver of Taxes is peculiar to Philadelphia County. No other large city has the office of Receiver of Taxes. In all other cities the duty and authority to collect money is lodged with the City Treasurer.

4. The office of Coroner should be continued as an elective office as it now exists.

The importance of this office has been minimized by critics, but it is the opinion of this committee that it has an important public use, both in criminal and civil cases, as an independent investigating agency to establish the cause of death.

5. The office of the Recorder of Deeds should be continued as an elective office as it now exists.

6. The office of Register of Wills should be continued as an elective office. One of the qualifications for which should be that the Register of Wills be learned in the law.

7. The office of District Attorney should be continued as an elective office as it now exists.

8. The office of Sheriff should be continued as an elective office as it now exists.

9. The office of Clerk of Quarter Sessions Court would be abolished and its functions transferred to the new Clerk of Courts which would also be an elective office.

10. The new office of Clerk of Courts would administer the following duties:

- a. Those functions now performed by the Clerk of Quarter Sessions Court.

b. Those functions now performed by the Prothonotary.

c. Those functions which the Register of Wills now performs as Clerk of the Orphan's Court.

d. The appointment of Inspectors of the County Prison, who in turn appoint and supervise the personnel in the County Prisons.

e. In addition to certain functions now performed by the County Commissioners.

1. Disbursing payrolls for
 - a. The Courts of Philadelphia, City and County
 - b. Consolidated Trial List
2. To pay bills for
 - a. The Courts

11. The Prothonotary, an officer appointed by the judges of the Common Pleas Court serves as a clerk for all the Common Pleas Courts and performs certain functions as the Clerk of the Municipal Court of Philadelphia would be abolished and its duties transferred to the new Clerk of Courts.

12. The Inspectors of the County Prison, a Board now appointed by the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas, would be transferred to the new Clerk of Court. The Board would consist of eleven members appointed for a one year term by the newly created Clerk of Court, to serve without salary.

13. The Commissioners of Fairmount Park, a body consisting of ex officio members and persons appointed by the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas, would be abolished and its functions transferred as follows:

- a. The policing functions, to the Department of Public Safety.
- b. The construction and maintenance of all parks and highways therein to the Department of Public Works.
- c. The supervision of parks and recreation to the Department of Welfare.

14. The functions of the Board of Revision of Taxes would be enlarged to include those duties and authorities now administered and supervised by the Bureaus of Survey and Zoning. These two bureaus would be abolished, as they are now constituted.

15. The office of Receiver of Taxes would be abolished and its functions transferred to the City Treasurer, as suggested elsewhere in this report.

16. The present Civil Service Commission would be abolished and Civil Service as a method of selecting city employees would be discontinued. In place of the Civil Service Commission a Rating Board would be established. Its duties would be to fix minimum qualifications for all categories of positions in the city and county government. This Board would also act as an appellate body to hear all complaints of employees whose dismissal has been ordered, and who desired a review of the employer's action. The appointing power in all departments of our city government would be lodged with the head of the various departments. The Board of its own motion may direct the dismissal of any employee who does not possess the qualifications set forth by the Board.

17. The Commissioners of the Sinking Funds, a body consisting of the Mayor, the City Controller, and a person elected by the City Council, would remain as it now is, until all sinking fund bonds have been retired.

18. The Registration Commission would be abolished and its functions transferred to the County Commissioners.

19. The Free Library of Philadelphia, a semi-private institution, would remain as it now is.

20. The Commercial Museum, Exhibition and Convention Halls would remain as they now are. However, the governing boards should be so selected as to have representation for all groups of citizens.

21. The Art Jury, a body composed of the Mayor and the Director of the Department of City Architecture serving ex-officio, and eight other persons appointed by the Mayor, would remain as it now is.

22. It is recommended that the office of the Mayor would continue as at present, excepting that the present functions of the budget secretary would be handled by a budget bureau established by City Council and directly responsible to that body.

23. The Department of City Architecture would continue as at present.

24. The Department of Public Safety would continue as at present, except for the addition to its present functions that of the policing of Fairmount Park.

25. The Department of Public Works, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would continue as at present, except for the addition of taking over the maintenance and construction of highways presently under the jurisdiction of the Fairmount Park Commission.

26. The Department of Public Health, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would continue as at present.

27. The Board of Health, which consists of the Director of Public Health and two other persons appointed by the Mayor, would continue as at present.

28. The Department of Public Welfare, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would continue as at present, except for the additional functions of the supervision of public squares now under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of City Property.

29. The Department of Wharves, Docks and Ferries, the head of which is appointed by the Mayor, would continue as at present.

30. The Department of Supplies and Purchases should have the care, management, control and administration of the purchase of supplies of all articles of personal property for the use of both the City and County governments.

The head of this Department should be appointed by Mayor.

31. The present Bureau of Aeronautics should be combined with the Department of City Transit.

32. The Philadelphia Re-Development Authority, which consists of five members appointed by the Mayor, should remain as presently constituted.

33. The Philadelphia Housing Authority consisting of five members, two of whom are appointed by the Mayor, two of whom are appointed by the Comptroller, and the fifth being selected by the other four, should remain as presently constituted.

34. The City Planning Commission, which prepares plans for the information and guidance of the Mayor and City Council in regard to the future development of the City, now consists of nine members appointed by the Mayor. This Commission can, to a great extent on the basis of its recommendations, determine the future picture of our city and should be more responsive to the people and therefore, it is recommended that the members thereof be selected by Council.

35. The Department of Law, which is headed by the City Solicitor, is one of the most important offices of our City Government and serves as the legal advisor and attorney for all the departments of the City Government. It is important that he be independent of the influence of any department or individual that may be affected by his decisions. Particularly, is this true since we have no system of checks and balances in our City Government such as exists in our Federal setup. The City Solicitor must feel free to be as critical and severe in his opinion as the Controller's Office has been in the past. In order to accomplish this, the Solicitor should be an elective officer, serving for a term of four years, and being elected at the same time as the Controller. The City Solicitor's office should be expanded to include the inspection of weights and measures and the administering of oaths, both of which functions are now performed by the County Commissioners. All administrative units of the City-County government should be guided by the advice of this department. Because of the broad judicial duties of this office, it should not be as closely aligned with the executive branch of our Government as it now is, but should be an autonomous agency, directly responsible to the electorate.

Respectfully submitted,

Senator Weldon B. Heyburn, Chairman
Joint State Government Commission
State Capitol
Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Senator Heyburn:

We have studied the several proposed City-County Constitutional amendments and home rule enabling acts for Philadelphia which have been introduced in the Assembly, or will be in the near future. In some instances the proposed legislation is incomplete and does not meet the needs of the City, and in others does not provide for sufficient participation on the part of the electorate. We are, therefore, attaching.

(a) A draft of a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution to abolish the wholly theoretical County of Philadelphia and transfer the County offices to the City of Philadelphia.

(b) A bill to carry into effect the powers of home rule for the City of Philadelphia as provided for in Section 1 of Article 15 of the Constitution.

This proposed legislation has been drawn by a bi-partisan committee whose sole concern is for the welfare of the citizens of Philadelphia and a sound framework of government which will simplify the administrative problems of our public officials. We suggest, therefore, that the Joint State Government Commission consider these proposals and recommend them for enactment to the General Assembly.

As a non-partisan group, we believe it is possible for the political leaders and the representatives of both parties to resolve their differences through these proposed bills and join together in enacting them into law.

I am sending you under separate cover a sufficient number of both proposals so that copies can be made available for each member of the Joint State Government Commission. Representatives of our Committee will be available upon request to attend your meeting or to appear before a committee of the House or Senate to further discuss these proposals.

You will recall that we also presented to your Commission, a booklet by Thomas Evans and a supplemental memo containing a draft of a charter for the City of Philadelphia. May we suggest that your Commission also recommend to the Assembly that action be taken on this proposed legislation.

We deeply appreciate your cooperation in helping to secure for the City the type of remedial legislation that is so badly needed to permit the modernization of our local government.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) WALTER P. MILLER, JR., Chairman

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to article fourteen of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by adding thereto section eight consolidating the city and county of Philadelphia

The General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania hereby resolves as follows:

Section 1. That an amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be and the same is hereby proposed in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof by adding to article fourteen an additional section in manner and form following.

Section 8. The County of Philadelphia as a municipal corporation separate and distinct from the City of Philadelphia and all county offices therein are hereby abolished. All powers property and obligations of the County of Philadelphia are hereby transferred to the City of Philadelphia. Laws heretofore passed applicable to the County of Philadelphia so far as now in force shall be construed to apply to the City of Philadelphia and the General Assembly shall have full power to pass laws or provisions of laws regulating the affairs of the City of Philadelphia only notwithstanding the provisions of section seven of article three of this Constitution.

SCHEDULE

That no inconvenience may arise from the foregoing amendment it is hereby provided that immediately upon its adoption all officers and employes of the County of Philadelphia shall become officers and employes of the City of Philadelphia and until it shall be otherwise provided by law shall continue to perform their duties and receive the same compensation as heretofore.

AN ACT

To carry into effect section one of the article fifteen of the Constitution giving cities of the first class the right and power to frame, adopt and amend their own charters, and to exercise the powers and authority of local self-government; and providing the procedure therefor; imposing certain restrictions, limitations and regulations; imposing duties upon city councils, city officers, county boards of elections, courts of common pleas and the Secretary of the Commonwealth; and providing for the payment of certain expenses by such cities.

The General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania hereby enacts as follows:

ARTICLE I

Adoption, Revision and Amendment of City Charters Section 1. Cities Empowered to Adopt, Revise and Amend Charters. Any city of the first class may frame and adopt a charter for its own government in the manner provided by this act, and may in like manner revise or amend its charter, whether the same has been originally adopted under the provisions of this act, or provided by local, special or general act of the General Assembly.

Section 2. Initiation of Proceeding through Charter Commission. The city council of any city of the first class, by a two-thirds vote of its members may, or upon petition signed by registered electors equal in number to at least five per centum (5%) of the total number of electors registered in such city at the preceding general or municipal election, shall forthwith provide by ordinance for the submission to the qualified electors of such city the question "Shall a commission be chosen to frame a charter for" such city, or "Shall a commission be chosen to frame a revised charter for" such city, or "Shall a commission be chosen to frame amendments to the charter of" such city. But in no case shall more than twenty thousand (20,000) signatures be required on any such petition.

Such ordinance shall require that the question be submitted to the qualified electors at the next general or municipal election occurring at least sixty (60) days after the enactment of the ordinance.

A copy of said ordinance certified by the secretary or clerk of the city council of such city of the first class shall be filed with the county board of elections and with the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Section 3. Nominations of Candidates for Commission, Qualifications. At the same election a charter commission shall be elected. Candidates for the commission shall be nominated by nomination papers filed with the county board of elections at least twenty-eight (28) days before the election. The nomination papers of such candidate shall set forth his name, profession, business or occupation, if any, and his place of residence with street and number, if any, and shall be signed by registered electors equal in number to not less than one per centum (1%) of the total number of electors registered in such city of the first class at the preceding general or municipal election, but in no case shall more than one thousand (1,000) signatures be required for the nomination of any one (1) candidate. Each elector signing a nomination paper shall add to his signature his occupation and residence, giving street and number, if any, and shall also add the date of signing. No elector shall sign nomination papers for more than ten (10) candidates. Nomination papers may be on one (1) or more sheets but each sheet shall have appended to it the affidavit of some person, not necessarily a signer, and not necessarily the same person as on other sheets, setting forth that to the best of affiant's knowledge and belief the signers are registered electors of the city, that they signed with full knowledge of the contents of the nomination papers and that their residences are correctly given. Blank forms of nomination papers shall be prepared by the secretary or clerk of the city council of any city of the first class in form prescribed by the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and copies of such nomination papers shall be furnished by him to candidates upon application.

Section 4. Proceedings to Set Aside Nomination Papers. Application to set aside any nomination paper may be made by petition filed in the court of common pleas within five (5) days after the last day for the filing of nomination papers with the county board of elections, and such petitions shall specifically set forth the matters objected to. Upon the presentation of any such petition, the court shall make an order fixing a time for hearing, which shall be not later than ten (10) days after the last day for filing nomination papers with the county board of elections. The court shall also specify the time and manner of notice that shall be given to the candidate named in the nomination paper sought to be set aside.

No nomination paper shall be set aside except for—
(a) Material errors or defects apparent upon the face thereof or on the face of the appended or accompanying affidavits; or

(b) Material alterations made after signing without the consent of the signers; or

(c) Want of sufficient number of genuine signatures of registered electors.

If the matters objected to are such as are specified in sub-division (a) of this section, the court upon hearing the case may, in its discretion, permit amendments within such time and upon such terms as to the payment of costs as the court may specify.

In case the petition to set aside a nomination paper is dismissed, the petitioners shall pay the whole of the costs of the proceedings, including all witness fees.

Section 5. Form of Question, Arrangement of Names of Candidates. The board of selections shall cause the appropriate question hereinbefore provided for, and the names of the candidates for the charter commission to be printed upon the ballots or ballot labels to be used at the election in the manner provided by the Pennsylvania Election Code. The names of the candidates shall be printed on the ballots or ballot labels without any party designation. The position of the names of the candidates upon the ballots or ballot labels shall be determined by the drawing of lots at a time and place fixed by the board of elections.

Section 6. Number of Candidates to be Voted for Membership of Commission, Tie Votes. Each qualified elector shall be entitled to vote for ten (10) candidates only and the fifteen (15) candidates receiving the highest vote shall be declared elected, and shall constitute the charter commission. In case of a tie vote between two (2) or more candidates, the person to be entitled to membership on the commission shall be selected by the casting of lots before the board of elections at a time and place to be fixed by it.

Section 7. Vacancies. Vacancies in the membership of the commission caused by death, resignation or otherwise shall be filled by the remaining members of the commission.

Section 8. Effect on Negative and Majority Votes; Organization of Commission; Framing of Proposed Charter or Amendment.—If a majority of the qualified electors voting on the question "Shall a commission be chosen to frame a charter for," or "a revised charter for," or "amendments to the charter of" such city shall vote in the negative, then no further proceedings shall be had and all proceedings therefore had shall be of no effect. If a majority of the qualified electors so voting shall vote in the affirmative, then the mayor (or other chief executive) of such city of the first class shall call a meeting of the members of the charter commission within thirty (30) days after said election to be held at a time and place fixed by him in his call, and at such meeting the commission shall organize, adopt rules to govern its proceedings and proceed to frame a charter for the government of such city or a revised charter for its government or amendments to its charter in accordance with the mandate given to the commission by the electors of the city. No member of the commission shall receive any compensation for his or her services on said commission. All meetings of the commission shall be open to the public, except when the commission may desire an executive session.

Section 9. Initiation of Proceeding by City Council or Electors.—A charter for the government of any city of the first class or a revised charter for its government or amendments to its charter may also be proposed by a resolution of the city council, adopted with the concurrence of two-thirds of its members or by a petition filed with the city council setting forth the text of the proposed charter or revised charter or amendments to the charter and signed by registered electors equal in number to not less than five per centum (5%) of the total number of electors registered in such city at the preceding general twenty-five thousand (25,000) signatures be required. Each elector signing a petition shall add to his signature, his occupation and residence and the date of signing. Signatures to the said petition may be on separate sheets, but each sheet shall have appended to it the affidavit of some person, not necessarily a signer and not necessarily the same person as on other sheets, that to the best of affiant's knowledge and belief the signers are registered electors of such city, that they signed with full knowledge of the contents of the petition and that their residences are correctly given.

Section 10. Filing and Distribution of Proposed Charters or Amendments; Framing of Ballot Questions; Separate and Alternative Provisions.—The charter, revised charter or amendments proposed by the charter commission, city council or by a petition of electors shall be filed with the board of elections and with the city council of such city. The city council shall thereupon cause said proposal or proposals together with the form of the question or questions to be printed on the ballots or ballot labels as hereinafter provided to be printed in pamphlet form in sufficient number for general distribution. The said pamphlets shall be made ready for distribution at least seventy (70) days before the election at which the proposals aforesaid are to be voted upon by the electors, and the said proposals, together with the said ballot questions, shall also be advertised once a week for three (3) weeks in two (2) newspapers of general circulation in the city and in the legal newspaper published in such city if such exists. Such advertisements shall appear during the three (3) weeks immediately preceding the election at which the vote is to be taken upon said proposals. The said ballot questions shall be framed in brief form or not more than seventy-five (75) words by the commission, council or electors proposing the charter, revised charter or amendments, as the case may be, and the said questions shall be stated in the report of the commission in the ordinance of council or in the petition proposing said charter or amendments. The ballot questions may be so framed as to submit to the voter on (1) or more main proposals, or a proposed charter or revised charter separately or alternately. All amendments not constituting general revisions of the charter shall be separately submitted. The said ballot questions shall include a brief statement of the nature of the proposal to be submitted to the voters, shall plainly indicate how and by whom proposed, but shall not include the name of any political party. The county board of elections shall cause the said ballot questions to be properly printed on the ballots or ballot labels.

Section 11. Submission of Charter or Amendments to Vote.—The charter, revised charter or amendments shall be submitted to the electors for approval or disapproval by the use of the ballot questions framed as aforesaid at the next general, municipal, special or primary election occurring more than ninety (90) days after the proposed charter, revised charter or amendments are filed with the city council of any first class city as aforesaid.

Section 12. Effect of Adoption of Charter or Amendments on Existing Laws.—Any charter or revised charter or portions thereof or amendments to the charter of any city of the first class thus proposed by the charter commission or by the city council, or by electors which are approved by a majority of the qualified electors voting thereon, subject to the exceptions provided herein, shall become the organic law of such city at such time as may be fixed therein, and all courts shall take judicial notice thereof. So far as the same are consistent with the grant of powers and the limitations, restrictions and regulations hereinafter prescribed, they shall supersede any existing charter and all acts or parts of acts, local, special or general affecting the organization, government and powers of such city, to the extent that they are in conflict therewith. All existing acts or parts of acts and ordinances affecting the organization, government and powers of the city not in conflict with the organic law so adopted, shall remain in full force. No contract existing at the time of the adoption or amendment of a charter by any city of the first class under the provisions of this act, shall be affected thereby, but such contract shall have the same force and effect and be of the same validity as if such charter had not been adopted or amended.

Section 13. Recording and filing of Charter or Amendments; Printing in Pamphlet Laws.—The secretary or clerk of the city council of any city of the first class shall forthwith cause the said charter or amendments thereto as approved by the qualified electors to be recorded in the ordinance book of such city, and in the office of the recorder of deeds of the proper county or counties in a book to be provided and kept for that purpose. He shall also file a certified copy thereof in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth and the text thereof shall be published as an appendix to the next volume of pamphlet laws subsequently published.

Section 14. Conduct of Elections; Returns; Certificate of Election.—All elections provided for in this act shall be conducted by the election officers for such city in accordance with the Pennsylvania Election Code. The election officers shall count the votes cast and make return thereof to the county board of elections. The result of any such election shall be computed by the county board of elections in the same manner as is provided by law for the computation of other returns at any such election. Certificates of the result of any such election shall be filed by the county board of elections with the city council of such city and with the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and certificates of election shall be given by the county board of elections to the candidates elected to any charter commission.

Section 15. Notice of Elections.—At least thirty (30) days notice of each election herein provided for shall be given by proclamation of the mayor or other chief executive of any city of the first class. A copy of such proclamation shall be posted at each polling place of the city on the day of the election, and shall be published in at least one (1) daily newspaper of the city and in the legal newspaper published in such city if such exists once a week for four (4) consecutive weeks prior to the election.

Section 16. Expenses Paid by City.—The expenses of the charter commission and the cost of publishing and distributing and advertising the proposal or proposals of the commission or of electors, and all other expenses incurred in connection with any proceedings hereinbefore provided for shall be paid from the city treasury and the city council or other appropriating authority of said city shall provide therefor.

ARTICLE II

General Grant of Powers, Limitations

Section 17. General Grant of Power and Authority.—Subject to the limitations hereinafter prescribed each city of the first class taking advantage of this act and framing and adopting or revising or amending its charter thereunder, shall have and may exercise all powers and authority of local self-government and shall have complete powers of legislation and administration in municipal affairs. The charter of any city of the first class adopted or amended in accordance with this act may provide for any form or system of municipal government and for the exercise of any and all powers thereof not inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States or of this Commonwealth, to the full extent that the General Assembly may legislate in reference thereto and with like effect, and any city of the first class may enact ordinances, rules and regulations necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers vested in such city by the charter it adopts, or by this or any other law. Ordinances, rules and regulations adopted under the authority of this act or under the provisions of the charters adopted or amended hereunder shall be enforceable by the imposition of fines, forfeitures and penalties not exceeding three hundred ($300) and by imprisonment for a period not exceeding ninety (90) days.

Section 18. Limitations.—Nothing contained in the foregoing grant of powers and authority shall authorize any city of the first class to adopt provisions in any such charter or amendment relating to

(a) The filing and collection of municipal and tax claims or liens, or the sale of real or personal property in satisfaction thereof;

(b) The procedure for the condemnation of property for public purposes;

(c) The assessment of damages and benefits for property taken, injured or destroyed;

(d) Incurring or increasing indebtedness;

(e) The annexation or exclusion or detachment of territory to or from said city;

(f) The regulation of public schools;

(g) The personal registration of electors;

(h) The Courts of Common Pleas or the Municipal Courts or their employees.

Any such charter or amendment thereto may prescribe the manner in which elective city officers may be nominated and elected, but no city of the first class shall exercise any powers or authority beyond the city limits, except such as are conferred by the act of the General Assembly.

Section 19. Subsequent Legislation.—No act of the General Assembly applicable to a class or classes of cities which is enacted after the adoption or amendment of a charter by any city of the first class under the provisions of this act shall be held to apply to such city, unless the act expressly so provides or relates to one of the subjects mentioned in section eighteen of this act.

ARTICLE III

General Provisions

Section 20. Validation of Charter Proceedings.—No charter or amendment when adopted by a majority vote of the qualified electors of any city of the first class voting at any election shall be declared invalid or be set aside on account of any defect, error or omission in the proceedings for the adoption thereof.

Section 21. Construction of Act.—The provisions of this act are declared to be severable and if any of its provisions are declared unconstitutional, such decision shall not affect or impair any of the remaining provisions of this act. It is hereby declared as the legislative intent that this act would have been adopted had such unconstitutional provisions not been included therein.

Section 22. Short Title.—This act shall be known and may be cited as "Home Rule Act for First Class Cities."

Section 23. Repealer.—All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

THE COMMITTEE OF SEVENTY

Founded in 1904

1202 Land Title Building

Philadelphia 10

January 25, 1949

Senator Weldon B. Heyburn, Chairman
Joint State Government Commission
State Capitol
Harrisburg Pennsylvania

Dear Senator Heyburn:

A bill to transfer the duties of the Registration Commission to the County Board of Elections and to place the entire election machinery under one administrative body has been introduced in the Senate. We are advised that another bill proposed that the duties of the County Board of Elections be transferred to and consolidated with the Registration Commission. These proposals are sponsored by the two major political parties, and it may be difficult, therefore, to resolve the differences and to work out a proposition that would be agreeable to both parties in time for the present Legislature to consolidate these two departments.

We believe it is possible for the Legislature to provide for the City of Philadelphia an election commission of three persons appointed by the Governor to administer all matters pertaining to the registration of electors and the conduct of elections, and to transfer to this commission the present duties and responsibilities of both the County Board of Elections and the Registration Commission.

We cannot find any provision in the Constitution which would prevent the establishment of such a commission. However, may we suggest that you refer this question to the Attorney General for his opinion and, if it is favorable, present the proposal at the next meeting of the Joint State Government Commission. We hope that the Commission will then approve the idea and recommend it to the Assembly for consideration and action.

The consolidation of all election matters into one department would fix the responsibility for the administration of these important matters into fewer hands, reduce operating and administration costs and, we believe, provide better enforcement of election and registration laws.

Small election commissions of this type have been working economically and efficiently for many years in practically all of the large metropolitan cities throughout the country.

Very truly yours,

Dear Sir:

It appears from the newspapers that it is again open season for debate on the question of City-County consolidation. This is a subject which has been arising periodically for discussion and debate since most Philadelphians now living have been eligible to cast their first vote. All committees, organizations and citizens, sincere and otherwise, have had an opportunity to express their views in the public press. Perhaps a few words from one who has lived with the "problem child" for more than a decade might be in order at this time.

The main difficulty with our local Government is that there is an over-lapping and division of responsibility within the local Government structure, that is to say, that the duties and obligations of the departments are divided so that the responsibility for their failure to function properly cannot be placed squarely upon a single body or a single person. This gives every department a scapegoat on whom to place the blame for its failure to function efficiently.

In our own office of City and County Commissioners, we experience this very difficulty in divided responsibility. Although we are primarily functioning today as a County Board of Elections and should assume the responsibility for the proper and efficient operation of all of the election machinery, our authority to control it is limited and we are burdened with other duties which are completely foreign to our major duty.

In order to clarify the foregoing, perhaps a few examples would help. Although we are charged with the duty and responsibility for the smooth and efficient operation of the election machinery, the Registration Commission, a separate body appointed by the Governor, is in complete control of the registration and qualification of voters to vote in elections. It is immediately apparent that this division of authority can present many obstacles to the smooth operation of the election machinery. Certainly, it must be admitted that the election machinery would run more smoothly and more economically if the registration and qualification of voters to participate in an election came under the jurisdiction of the same body that operates the election machinery. This duplication is not only cumbersome, but wasteful, because all of the work could be handled by the staff now employed by the County Commissioners.

In addition to the foregoing, the Children's Bureau, for some unknown and unexplainable reason, also comes under the jurisdiction of the County Commissioners. It is obvious from the very name of the Bureau that it could more properly be handled by the Municipal Court which has under its jurisdiction the Juvenile Court and all other family and domestic problems. The Municipal Court is staffed with investigators, social service workers, psychiatrists and psychologists who are no doubt more qualified to handle the problems that come under the Children's Bureau. In any event, the Municipal Court having the staff of trained social workers required to handle these problems at the taxpayers' expense, could handle them more efficiently and more economically than the office of the County Commissioners. This duplication of authority and jurisdiction is also costing the taxpayer money.

Another example is the Bureau of Weights and Measures. The Bureau of Weights and Measures, which is presently under the jurisdiction of the County Commissioners, is mainly an agency to ferret out and prosecute dealers in food or merchandise who cheat or defraud the public in the sale of their wares by inaccurate or false measurement or weight. It is clear to anyone who stops to think, that this is a function which could more properly be carried on by the Police Department with its staff of trained investigators, and is also a duplication which is costing the taxpayers money.

The foregoing problems which I have outlined here are only a few of the many duplications of governmental functions in our local structure which result in a loss to the taxpayers. These are the ones which have come forcibly to my attention as a member of the County Commissioners for the past three years and an employee of the County Commissioners for ten years before that. I have no doubt that similar examples can be uncovered in every department of the City Government.

The most recent suggestion which has come to my attention is that the Governor appoint a commission or body to have charge of the registration of voters and the election machinery. Anyone who has had any experience in municipal government knows that appointive bodies do not and cannot act fairly and impartially. Their term of office can only last as long as their conduct favors the political party that has been responsible for their appointment. A member of a body or commission who has been elected by the people and who need have no fear of dismissal during the term for which he has been elected can and always does act with greater freedom from political pressure. An office which is so fundamentally important as the County Board of Elections must always be answerable to the electorate if it is to have any freedom from political pressure in the exercise of its official duties. A striking example of this kind exists at present in the Registration Commission. A Democratic member of this body died about five months ago and the Governor, for reasons known to him alone, has failed to fill the vacancy. The result is that the Commission carries on its duties without the voice or vote of a Democratic member, although the law requires that there be two Democrats on the Commission.

The main difficulty with the proper and efficient functioning of the County Board of Elections in the past has been the fact that although the law provides for a member of the minority party to sit on the Board of County Commissioners, it has failed to provide him with any power or authority to perform any duties on behalf of the minority party which elected him. In order that the minority member of a board can perform his duties, he must have under his control and supervision employees who are answerable to him for the proper performance of their duties. In my present situation as County Commissioner, I have no power or authority to hire or fire employees and therefore none of the employees of the office is answerable to me for the manner in which they perform their duties or the fact that they do not perform any duties. It is apparent that the Legislature, in providing that a member of the minority party shall sit on the County Board of Elections, instead that the minority member should have a voice in the operation of the body. The Courts have ruled otherwise. The result is that although I sit as a member of the County Commissioners and the County Board of Elections, I have one vote in a body of three. This vote gives me no more voice in the operation of the Board of County Commissioners than a minority stockholder's vote in the Pennsylvania Railroad Company would give him in the control and operation of the railroad company.

My conclusion, therefore, is that the Legislature should by legislative enactment correct these evils by placing all of the election machinery under the jurisdiction of the County Board of Elections, including the registration and qualifications of voters; remove from the jurisdiction of the County Board of Elections the Children's Bureau and the Bureau of Weights and Measures which other agencies are more qualified to handle, and provide the minority member of the Election Board with the power to appoint and remove a one-third proportionate share of the employees under its jurisdiction so that they would be answerable to him for their conduct. We would then have an efficient bi-partisan body running the election machinery in the City of Philadelphia that is not burdened with a lot of collateral duties that other departments are already equipped to handle without additional cost.

I am addressing this letter to you in the hope that the experience I have gained over a period of thirteen years in municipal government service will help to prevent any ill-considered or compromise measures from further complicating a condition that can be remedied by enactment of legislation such as I have outlined here.

Very truly yours,

THOMAS P. McHENRY

Summary of Philadelphia City-County Government Survey

I. PURPOSE OF SURVEY

To afford all interested parties an opportunity to present such facts and views regarding the governments of the City and County of Philadelphia with a view to submitting, through the offices of the Joint State Government Commission, to the General Assembly "a plan which will have the undivided support of all groups within the city."

II. INVESTIGATION

A. Arranged for two hearings in Philadelphia on July 19 and December 15, 1948

B. Invited all interested parties to submit plans and suggestions.

C. Directed the Commission staff to analyze, organize, and consolidate information submitted.

A Report of the

to the

GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA

JANUARY, 1949

The Joint State Government Commission was created by Act No. 459, Session of 1937, as amended by Act No. 380, Session of 1939, and Act No. 4, Session of 1943, as a continuing agency for the development of facts and recommendations on all phases of government for the use of the General Assembly.

JOINT STATE GOVERNMENT COMMISSION

Honorable Weldon B. Heyburn, Chairman; Honorable Baker Royer, Vice Chairman; Honorable Herbert P. Sorg, Secretary-Treasurer.

Senate Members: Joseph M. Barr, Leroy E. Chapman, John H. Dent, Anthony J. DiSilvestro, James A. Geltz, Weldon B. Heyburn, Frederick L. Homsher, A. Evans Kephart, A. H. Letzler, John G. Snowden, O. J. Tallman, M. Harvey Taylor, John M. Walker.

House Members: Hiram G. Andrews, Adam T. Bower, Homer S. Brown, Charles H. Brunner, Jr., Edwin C. Ewing, Ira T. Fiss, Robert D. Fleming, W. Stuart Helm, Earl E. Hewitt, Sr., Thomas H. Lee, Albert S. Readinger, Baker Royer, Herbert P. Sorg.

Guy W. Davis, Counsel and Director; Paul H. Wueller, Associate Director in Charge of Research and Statistics; L. D. Stambaugh, Resident Secretary, and Antoinette S. Giddings, Administrative Assistant.

Subcommittee on Susquehanna River Fishways

Honorable George C. Shoemaker, Chairman; Honorable George B. Scarlett, Vice Chairman.

Senate Members: Frederick L. Homsher, Peter M. Margie, George B. Scarlett, John G. Snowden, George N. Wade.

House Members: W. Henry Elder, George A. Goodling, George C. Shoemaker, Charles W. Tittle, Harold A. Yetzer.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

To the Members of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Pursuant to House Resolution No. 35, Session of 1947, we submit herewith a report dealing with the problem of the construction of fishways or other devices on the lower Susquehanna River to facilitate the migration of fish.

In accordance with Act No. 4, Session of 1943, Section 1, the Commission created a subcommittee to aid in making a study of Susquehanna River fishways.

On behalf of the Commission, the cooperation of the members of the subcommittee is gratefully acknowledged.

- C. Fishways for the Restoration of the Shad Fishery on the Susquehanna by L. E. Cable of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

SUMMARY OF FINDINGS

- I. Prior to 1900, shad fishing on the Susquehanna River was an industry of economic significance.
Today the industry is nonexistent.
Lack of information on the shad has hindered the planning of successful fishways and allows some basis for doubt that the river in its present state would be suited for shad, were there no dams to block migration.
- II. By 1910, the quantity of shad in the Susquehanna had been greatly reduced because of overfishing and to some extent by pollution of the river.
Construction of the Holtwood, Conowingo and Safe Harbor dams subsequently blocked the spawning migrations of the shad from salt water to the fresh water of the upper Susquehanna.

III. Pennsylvania Law (Act No. 263, 1925, May 2, P. L. 448, Sec. 185, as amended by Act No. 259, 1929, April 22, P. L. 621, Sec. 8) provides that anyone erecting or maintaining a dam in the waters of the Commonwealth shall make provision for the free passage of fish at all seasons of the year. Where this is not practicable the Board of Fish Commissioners may require in-lieu payments to the Commonwealth not exceeding $4,000 per year.

The owners of Conowingo and Safe Harbor dams each pay the Commonwealth $4,000 per year. The above mentioned law requires that this money be paid into the fish fund and be used to stock the pools above the dams with food fish.

Two fishways were constructed at the Holtwood Dam prior to 1915 (a modified "Cail" type of fishway on the Lancaster County side and the "Buller" fishway on the York County side). Neither of these is used, and the owner of the dam makes no in-lieu payment to the Commonwealth.

The amount fixed by law in 1929 appears inadequate by present day standards for the purposes originally considered as a basis of payment.

The law did not include in its original maximum figure of $4,000 per year, either maintenance or depreciation.

By 1945, $4,000 would have purchased approximately 42% less fish for stocking the pools than the same sum would have provided in 1930—an increase of 78% in production cost.

IV. The problem of reestablishing the shad is one which Pennsylvania has in common with a number of other Eastern Seaboard States and its solution would benefit them equally.

SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS

- I. That a resolution be introduced at the 1949 session of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania asking that the Congress of the United States direct a general study of the biological and hydraulic factors which need to be known if effective shad fishways are to be constructed.
- II. That an upward adjustment of the in-lieu payments called for by present law be considered by the General Assembly—such adjustment to take account of (a) the inadequacy of the original payments from an in-lieu point of view and (b) subsequent increases in price levels.

Section I

INTRODUCTION

House Resolution No. 35, adopted April 9, 1947, directs the Joint State Government Commission to

1. Study the problem of constructing fishways around the Safe Harbor, Holtwood, and Conowingo dams on the lower Susquehanna River to allow migratory fish to ascend the river at spawning time;
2. Study possibility of utilization of newly developed devices for preventing the loss of fish in the hydraulic power plants in the river;
3. If construction of fishways is found practicable, institute suitable action to require their construction by the owners of said dams.

In accordance with the above mandate, the Subcommittee on Susquehanna River Fishways of the Joint State Government Commission took the following steps:

1. Collected and studied available information on the subject;
2. Held a hearing in Harrisburg on November 19, 1947, at which the companies owning the dams in question and members of the Pennsylvania Fish Commission presented such facts and views as in their judgment pertained to the problem under review;

3. Visited and inspected the dam sites on July 15, 1948.

4. Held a hearing in Harrisburg on August 19, 1948, at which authorities on shad from the United States Fish and Wildlife Service presented pertinent information; and thereafter obtained additional data from the Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission.

The salient facts pertaining to the problem of constructing workable fishways at the dams on the lower Susquehanna are detailed in the subsequent sections.

Since the shad was the most important migratory fish in this area, the report deals primarily with shad.

Section II

SHAD AND SHAD FISHERIES

A. Characteristics of the Shad

Knowledge of the life cycle and habits of the shad is limited.

The shad is a valuable food fish in some sections of the country. On the Atlantic coast, the shad range extends from Florida to the St. Lawrence River. The fish live in salt water and ascend fresh water rivers to spawn. Since the locations of the shad in the Atlantic are unknown, the fish are caught commercially only during the migratory periods, which take place early in May and in September. In approximately three years the fish mature and seek their original spawning grounds.

Shad travel mostly at night. When moving in bright sunlight they are often frightened and temporarily halted by the shadow of a bridge across the water. They are rheotropic,—that is, they will head into the strongest of currents. They are not a particularly sporting fish, and unlike the salmon, will not jump to overcome obstacles.

B. Shad Fisheries on the Susquehanna

Before 1900 the shad fishery on the Susquehanna River was among the most important on the Atlantic Coast. The heedless use of fish baskets, continued pollution, and the building of dams caused the fishery to decline. By 1928, the fisheries were nonexistent and Pennsylvania had lost an industry of economic significance.

Fish bones found in the ashes of fires of Pennsylvania Indian villages along the Susquehanna indicate large catches of shad. In the 1700's, white men developed shad fisheries along the river, and by the early 1800's, some forty established fisheries flourished between Northumberland and Towanda. As far as the records go, it appears the catches were around ten thousand shad per year per fishery, with a reported shad weight of between eight and nine pounds.

About 1865, a dam was built across the Susquehanna at Columbia. This dam was considered a barrier to the ascension of fish and an infringement upon the rights of persons who fished the rivers above the dam. The General Assembly in 1866 passed an act requiring companies owning or maintaining dams on the Susquehanna to install devices to permit the free passage of fish and spawn.¹ Pursuant to the provisions of this act, a fishway was constructed, but the desired passage of the fish was not effected.

In 1873, the Fish Commissioners studied the Susquehanna shad fishery and concluded that its decline was caused by: (1) the practice of fishing with drift nets in the lower portions of the river (2) the inadequacy of and the failure to observe the "close time," the time during which fishing was forbidden and (3) the destruction, by fish baskets, of the fingerlings on their trip to the sea.

In 1880, Pennsylvania made an unsuccessful effort to reach an agreement with Maryland to limit open shad fishing to certain days.

The curtailment of illegal and destructive fishing was a long, slow process and did not have the support of Susquehanna fishermen. During this period, three more fishways were built in the Columbia Dam, every one of which proved a failure.

The McCall's Ferry Dam (now known as Holtwood) was completed in the summer of 1910. Simultaneously, as required by the Act of 1901,² two fishways were completed. These fishways, like comparable structures built in the past, failed to produce the desired results.

In 1916, Dr. R. E. Coker of the United States Bureau of Fisheries³ made a study of conditions at Holtwood (McCall's Ferry), and concluded that the decline of the shad was due to: (1) overfishing (2) disturbance of the original condition of stream flow and (3) pollution.

Dr. Coker was of the opinion that no fishway had been designed which would work successfully for shad under conditions existing at Holtwood. He enumerates the following unfavorable conditions: height of the dam, extremes of flood stages, small storage capacity of pools inherent in the form of the prism of the river valley, and the quantity of ice brought down by the spring floods. These conditions have not changed with the passage of time.

The dams in the Susquehanna River which have made the shad migration impossible are shown on the Map (appended). The Conowingo Dam, completed in 1928, presents the first obstruction to migratory fish. Although this dam is located in Maryland, it prevents Susquehanna shad runs from reaching Pennsylvania. The Holtwood Dam, further up the Susquehanna, was completed in 1910. Safe Harbor Dam, completed in 1932, is the third obstruction. Before the shad run can return to the waters above these dams, workable fishways must be installed.

Section III

CURRENT LEGISLATION REGARDING OBSTRUCTIONS TO FISH MIGRATIONS

The Act of 1925 (amended in 1929), as it relates to fishways,⁴ requires any person erecting or maintaining a dam in the waters of the Commonwealth to install a device to permit the passage of fish at all seasons of the year. If, however, the Board of Fish Commissioners does not deem a given device practicable, the Board may enter into agreement with the owner, lessee or operator of the dam for payments in lieu of fishways. The payments in lieu of fishways are to compensate for the blockage of the fish runs and must be spent "for the purpose of stocking with food fish the waters of the pool above said dam, and for the purpose of propagating, rearing and distributing the fish actually placed in said waters, and the acquisition of the necessary facilities therefor."⁵

A. Determination of Payments

According to the act⁵ the payments are to be four and one-half per cent upon the cost of the fishways, but not more than $4,000. The law does not include any charge in lieu of either maintenance or depreciation of a fishway.

Since the fishways were never constructed, no actual cost figures are available. However, a memorandum of a conference, July 27, 1927, between the Commission of Fisheries of Pennsylvania and the Conservation Commissioner of Maryland in regard to the fisheries problem presented by the owners of the Conowingo Dam indicates that the cost of two fishways, at that time, would not have been less than $200,000 and that the maintenance cost would not have been less than $10,000 per year. Allocating one fishway to Pennsylvania, the original cost becomes $100,000 and the maintenance cost $5,000.

Table I shows the estimated construction costs of fishways for 1929 and 1947, and the corresponding annual carrying charges.

It will be noted that, because of the rise in construction costs and the fall of interest rates, the interest charges and the depreciation costs are approximately the same for 1929 and 1947. However, maintenance acosts which would have been $5,000 in 1929 rise to $9,970 in 1947. The estimated annual cost of fishways increased from $9,628 to $16,274, or 69%.

B. Payments Made in Lieu of Fishways

There are no fishways in the Safe Harbor and Conowingo dams, and in accordance with the provisions of the Act of 1925, as amended, their owners have each entered into an agreement with the Commonwealth for in-lieu payments.

At the time the dam at Holtwood was completed, there was no provision in the law for payments in lieu of fishways. The Act of 1901 made such installation mandatory. In 1910, two fishways of the modified Cail type, each 8 feet 10 inches wide, were constructed on the east (Lancaster County) side of the river. These were later remodeled to form a single channel. In 1913 the "Buller" fishway was built on the west (York County) side of the dam with a channel 40 to 50 feet wide and some 600 feet long. Neither of these devices is used at present. The one on the east side is no longer maintained and has no contact with the river above the dam. The other on the west side was, when inspected, obstructed at the upper end by a wooden barricade designed to raise the water level of the lake above the dam. Neither fishway has ever been used by shad. No in-lieu payments are made by the owner of the Holtwood dam.

Since the completion of the Conowingo dam in 1928, owners of the dam have paid the Commonwealth $4,000 annually, a total of $84,000 for the 21 years.

The dam at Safe Harbor was completed in 1932. Since that year, its owner has paid $4,000 annually to the Commonwealth, or a total of $68,000 for the 17 years. During this period, fish value at more than $77,000 have been placed in the pool above the dam (See Table II).

The Commonwealth has deposited into the Fish Fund a total of $152,000 received as payments in lieu of fishways. With this money the Fish Commission has stocked the pools above the two dams. Table II shows the type, quantity, and value of fish placed in Lake Clark, the pool above Safe Harbor, from 1932 to 1947 inclusive. Corresponding stocking figures for the pool above the Conowingo dam are not available.

In 1930, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service reported that the cost of propagating one million eggs, fry, and fingerlings was $120,500. In 1945, the corresponding cost was $214,150, a cost increase of 78 per cent.⁶ Translating this cost figure into terms of a $4,000 in-lieu payment, in 1930 the $4,000 would have purchased approximately 33,000 fish; in 1945, the same amount would have purchased approximately 19,000 fish.

Section IV

RESTORATION OF THE SUSQUEHANNA SHAD FISHERIES TO PENNSYLVANIA

The restoration of the Susquehanna shad fisheries poses several problems: first, whether installation of practicable fishways, if they can be successfully designed, would be justified on an economic basis; second, the regulation of shad fishing; third, the effect of pollution of the river on shad runs; and finally the reintroduction of shad into the river.

A. Cost, Economic Justification and Design of Effective Fishways

1. Testimony of the Owners of the Three Dams

The joint statement of the Pennsylvania Water & Power Company and the Safe Harbor Water Power Corporation, owners of the dams at Holtwood and Safe Harbor, alleges that the shad industry along the Susquehanna was declining steadily before the construction of the dams in the river.⁷ This statement attributes the great diminution in the quantity of shad entering the Susquehanna largely to overfishing and lack of good conservation practices, particularly in the salt water areas of the Chesapeake Bay. It is further contended that even with the construction of effective fishways a greatly increased supply of shad, the value of the catch in Pennsylvania would not compensate, from an economic point of view, for the great expense of fishway construction which would have to be borne by the consumers of electric power generated at the plants affected.

The Philadelphia Electric Power Company and The Susquehanna Power Company, owners of the Conowingo development, concur in this point of view.

In addition, the owners of the Conowingo dam express concern over the quantity of water that might be required to maintain an effective fishway. They assert that any fishway requiring in excess of 20 cubic feet of water per second would reduce the capacity of the Conowingo project.⁸

2. Testimony of Experts of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service

L. E. Cable, Aquatic Biologist, in Charge, Shad Investigations, United States Fish and Wildlife Service, summarized the discussion of the question of the restoration of the shad fishery on the Susquehanna as follows:⁹

A valuable fishery has been lost to the State of Pennsylvania because the construction of dams across the Susquehanna has prevented access of shad to their spawning grounds. The fishway, which has been suggested as a remedy for the situation, has been applied in various forms to dams across several shad rivers on the East Coast with negative results. The fishway now operating at Bonneville Dam is the only type that is effective in getting shad over a dam. This fishway is prodigal of water while in operation.

The short season of adult and juvenile shad migrations and the nocturnal habits of the fish, however, would make it possible to impound the water most of the year.

There are a great many dams on the Susquehanna and each one, beginning with the Conowingo Dam, must be provided with a fishway that will be used freely by shad before the run in the river can be re-established. When construction of fishways has been accomplished, it may be found that the environment of so much of the river has been changed by impoundments that shad will not thrive or that the young will not survive descent over so many dams.

C. E. Atkinson, Chief of the Middle Atlantic Investigations, United States Fish and Wildlife Service, points out that basic biological and hydraulic information is needed before a usable fishway can be constructed.

3. Bonneville Dam (Columbia River, Oregon) Fishways

The only fishways used by shad are in Bonneville dam. The total construction cost of the project, as formally authorized in 1935, amounted to approximately $80,400,- 000, of which nine per cent, or $7,236,000, represents fishway costs.

There are three fishways in the Bonneville dam, each consisting of a collecting system, a fishladder, and a pair of fish-locks. In addition the installation includes four by-passes for the downstream migration of fish. During the years 1938 to 1945, the average annual count of shad through the fishways was 22,261.

The Bonneville fishways would require considerable adaption to become effective on the Susquehanna.

B. Regulation of Shad Fishing

1. Shad Runs in the Hudson River

In 1940, the total shad catch from the Atlantic Coast had declined 80 per cent from the peak catch of 1897. (See Table III.) The Hudson River presents an exception to this general picture of decline. There are no dams to interfere with the shad migrations, and, as the spawning beds are far up the river, pollution in the Hudson has not proved detrimental to the run. In 1916, the shad catch in the Hudson was at an all-time low of 40,000 pounds, but the catch has increased to between 3 and 5 million pounds annually in recent years. A moderate rate of fishing, which allows approximately 50 per cent of each run to spawn, has brought about this recovery. W. A. Heydecker, Secretary-Treasurer, Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission, reports:

"While the run was gaining in volume the states [New York and New Jersey] had recognized the situation by agreeing upon certain basic conservation measures designed to assure a minimum escapement of approximately 40 per cent of the run. This was achieved by shortening the open season and by requiring that the nets be lifted out of the water entirely for a minimum period of 36 hours every weekend. Other conservation measures were adopted by the two states. New York protected the spawning grounds and New Jersey limited the number of nets, and established minimum distances between nets."¹⁰

2. Regulation for the Susquehanna

The question of unrestricted fishing in Maryland and Virginia and its effect on the shad runs in the Susquehanna is considered in all discussions of fishways along the Susquehanna. The problem is modified to some extent by the established fact that there are separate shad populations for each area; that is, there is one particular run of shad in the Susquehanna, while similar runs seek other tributaries of the Chesapeake. The main body of the Susquehanna shad population travel through the Chesapeake Bay along the deep main channel where nets are not set. An experiment conducted by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service from 1939 to 1943 showed that only about one per cent of the catch in Maryland and Virginia fisheries in the lower portions of the Bay were Susquehanna shad.

L. E. Cable discusses this question in a letter to the Joint State Government Commission as follows:

"More important than the catch of the fisheries in the lower Bay, will be the catches made at the head of the Bay and in that section of the Susquehanna within the State of Maryland. As in the Hudson, where without controlled fishing in New Jersey waters by Interstate agreement, New Jersey fishermen could remove almost all of the shad before they reach the New York portion of the river not closed to fishing by shipping interests, so in the Susquehanna, most of the shad could be taken by Maryland fishermen before they could cross the Pennsylvania State line. Agreements between Pennsylvania and Maryland would be required to protect the interests of Pennsylvania fishermen on the Susquehanna. Reduced fishing in Maryland to extend the spawning and nursery grounds into Pennsylvania would be mutually beneficial."

Maryland now has "controlled fishing."¹¹ Licenses are issued only to those who used nets more than 40 years in length during the calendar year of 1940 or 1941, and the allowable units are limited to the number used during that year. Additional licenses may be issued when in the judgment of the Commissioner of Tidewater Fisheries they can be issued without injury to the fishery.

"The principles of its [Maryland's] fishery management law are among the most forward-looking of any in operation today. . . . Admittedly there were already too many nets for the size of the shad populations in Maryland, but that number, at least, can be maintained without further increase until it can be shown scientifically that growth of the shad populations warrant issuance of more licenses."¹²

C. Pollution of the Susquehanna River

The degree of pollution in the Susquehanna River today is less than that of the Delaware River approximately twenty-five years ago. It was at that time that the shad run there began to decline because of pollution. However, it is not known whether the pollution typical of the Susquehanna at this time would make the establishment of spawning beds impossible, assuming that devices can be developed that will overcome obstacles presented by the dams.

D. Reintroduction of Shad to the River

Shad can be introduced to the Susquehanna by artificial propagation; but during the early stages of reintroduction, shad fishing must be carried on at a moderate rate. However, before reintroduction is considered, changes in the Susquehanna River bed which may have been brought about by various impoundments, such as industrial and commercial developments, dykes and other flood protection devices, need to be investigated. Conceivably, the changes in question may have made the Susquehanna unattractive to shad.

Section V

DEVICES FOR PREVENTING LOSS OF FISH IN HYDRAULIC POWER PLANTS

Electric impulses have been used to direct fish away from the machinery of hydraulic power plants. Such devices (first used in the West in an attempt to prevent fish from running into irrigation ditches) are expensive to operate.

At Bonneville, special fingerling by-passes have been constructed in an attempt to assure safe passage for the down-stream migrants.

Section VI

RECOMMENDATIONS

The facts presented in Sections I to IV suggest two lines of action: first, a study of the biological and hydraulic factors which need to be known, if effective fishways are to be designed and constructed, and second, an upward adjustment of the in-lieu payments

A. Study of Shad

The shad fishery problem is general to the Atlantic coast. Of the three chief causes responsible for the decline of the shad fishery, pollution and overfishing have been successfully tackled along the Coast. The third cause of decline, power dams, calls for scientific study before effective action can be taken. Such a study must be concerned with the biological and hydraulic conditions suitable to determine shad migration through such artificial barriers.

As regards shad, the study must ascertain, among other factors, rates of water flow and ranges of water temperature and degree of water purity necessary to encourage migration of the fish. Only if and when these facts are known, will it be possible for engineers to design devices which will effectively overcome the obstacles presented by existing dams. Such a study would benefit all states along the Atlantic Seaboard whose rivers have shad runs. Because of the interstate scope of the problems, it is believed that this research and study should be undertaken and financed by the Federal Government; and it is recommended that a resolution be introduced at the 1949 session of the General Assembly asking that the Congress of the United States direct such undertaking.

B. Payments in Lieu of Fishways

It is assumed that payments in lieu of fishways were established to compensate for the loss of fish until such time as effective fishways could be installed. Shad and other migratory fish cannot be stocked in the river above the dams, because by definition, they must have periodic access to the sea. However, many varieties of fish can live and reproduce in the pools above the dams. In-lieu payments are now used to stock these pools with food fish. Criteria to determine the adequacy of stocking are difficult to establish. On the assumption that $4,000 was adequate for stocking in 1929, the increase in price levels suggests an upward adjustment of this figure, if the same quantity and quality of fish are to be introduced into the pools above the dams today.

The in-lieu payments called for in the 1929 amendment were based solely on the interest on estimated costs of constructing fishways.

APPENDIX A

Statement of Pennsylvania Water & Power Company and Safe Harbor Water Power Corporation in re:

Fishways

House Resolution No. 35, adopted during the 1947 session of the General Assembly, authorized a study to be made of the advisability of constructing fishways in the Conowingo, Holtwood, and Safe Harbor dams for the purpose of restoring recreation and employment related to migratory fish which at one time entered the Susquehanna River to spawn. The three dams referred to are located across the lower part of the Susquehanna River—the Conowingo dam in the State of Maryland, and the Holtwood and Safe Harbor dams in the State of Pennsylvania, the relative locations being shown on the attached maps, marked Exhibit "A." Photographs of the Holtwood and Safe Harbor dams are also attached, and identified as Exhibits "B" and "C." The following statement is made on behalf of Pennsylvania Water & Power Company and Safe Harbor Water Power Corporation, the respective owners of the Holtwood and Safe Harbor dams

The only migratory fish which would spawn in the Susquehanna River is the common shad, an anadromous fish native to the Atlantic Coast from the Gulf of Mexico to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The young shad are hatched in fresh or brackish water in May or June and stay in the vicinity of the hatching place until September or October when, as fingerlings, they make their way downstream to salt water and eventually disappear in the ocean. When mature, at the age of about three years, the shad return to fresh or brackish water to spawn, and it is their habit to go to the stream in which they were hatched. If that stream has been blocked, they then spawn at a point below the obstruction, and if the adult fish survive they return year after year to spawn in their regular spawning grounds. Fish scale studies made by the Conservation Department of the State of Maryland show that shad have returned to spawn as many as eight times, thus indicating an age of at least eleven years, but of the shad made available for the market are caught before they reach that age, and usually before they spawn.

It is true that more than 100 years ago shad entered the Susquehanna River in large numbers, and it is also true that they traveled upstream as far as the New York State Line. However, the construction of fishways in the Conowingo, Holtwood, and Safe Harbor dams would not restore this condition, and it would not be restored for several basic reasons which are well known to the experts who have studied the problem of shad fisheries on the Atlantic Coast. The first and most important of these reasons is the fact that the Atlantic shad will not use fishways, fish ladders, or other artificial passageways. This statement is amply supported by experience with fishways in the Susquehanna River, the Connecticut River, and other rivers along the Atlantic Coast. The second basic reason is that for more than 80 years the quantity of shad entering fresh water for spawning has been constantly decreasing, due, primarily to overfishing and lack of conservation laws in the salt water areas.

In view of these facts, it would be not only impractical but a waste of either private or public funds if fishways were to be constructed at the three dams.

The Holtwood development was originated by the McCall Ferry Power Company, and construction was started in 1905 on a dam having a normal head of 51 feet and a height of approximately 65 feet from foundation to crest. When the McCall Ferry Power Company failed in 1907 the dam was only partially completed, and openings had been left so that the unfinished structure did not represent a complete obstruction of the river. In 1910, after the formation of the Pennsylvania Water & Power Company, the construction of the dam was completed and at that time the company, in cooperation with Mr. Wm. E. Meehan, Commissioner of Fisheries of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, designed and constructed a fishway of the modified Cail type. This fishway, which is shown in the attached photographs marked Exhibit "D" and Exhibit "E" is located on the east side of the river at the shore end of the powerhouse, and forms an artificial channel or waterway from the forebay to the tailrace. The original construction consisted of two separate fishways each 8' 10" wide, but after several years the incline was remodeled so as to combine the two passages into one channel. In the remodeled fishway the water flowed in a zigzag course approximately 33 feet across the fishway while passing 13' down the slope, and several pools were created by the construction of baffles. Although shad were frequently observed at the foot of this fishway, it was never used by them as a passageway to the upper level.

In 1913 Mr. Nathan R. Buller, who was Mr. Meehan's successor as Commissioner of Fisheries, designed a fishway to simulate a natural channel, and such a structure was built on the York County side of the dam. This fishway is shown on the attached photographs, marked Exhibit "F." The channel varied from 40' to 50' in width and was approximately 600' in length, thus giving an easy slope from the pond level above the dam to the river channel below the dam. It was constructed of concrete barriers and baffle walls, was paved with rock partly imbedded in concrete, and contained resting pools which were blasted out of solid rock. Notwithstanding the substantial manner in which this fishway was constructed it was several times badly damaged in the early spring by ice floes, and the Pennsylvania Water & Power Company spent large sums of money in repairing and strengthening it. However, although many tests were made it was found that this fishway would not be used by shad.

When the Safe Harbor dam was constructed in 1930, with a normal head of 55 feet and a maximum height of 102 feet, both the Conowingo and Holtwood dams were in place, in view of the experience with fishways at Holtwood and the fact that there were no fishways at Conowingo, it was realized that the construction of fishways at Safe Harbor would not serve any useful purpose. Therefore, in lieu of constructing fishways, the Safe Harbor Water Power Corporation entered into an agreement with the Board of Fish Commissioners whereby the company pays to the Board, annually, the amount of $4,000 to be used for fish stocking. Exhibit "G," attached, shows the total number of fish planted in the lake between 1932 and 1946.

Agitation for the construction of fishways in dams in the Susquehanna River goes back at least to the year 1866, when Colonel James Worrall was appointed Commissioner for the Restoration of Inland Fisheries. At that time the supply of shad in the Susquehanna River was decreasing so rapidly that the authorities were of the opinion that the shad would disappear entirely within a few years if some action were not taken. In an official report dated December 3, 1866, Colonel Worrall stated that the depletion of the shad supply in the Susquehanna River was due solely to the construction of the canal feeder at Columbia. This dam, about 10 feet in height, had been constructed about 1840 for the purpose of creating a pond to connect the southern end of the Pennsylvania Canal at Columbia with the northern end of the Susquehanna and Tidewater Canal at Wrightsville. Colonel Worrall succeeded in having a fishway constructed in the dam, and at the same time attempted to force the Pennsylvania Railroad to install similar fishways in the old canal dams at Middletown and Duncan's Island. However, Colonel Worrall's report contained no mention of the old Safe Harbor canal dam which was constructed about 1843 at a point about 10 miles downstream from the Columbia dam and which was still in existence in 1866. On January 18, 1869 a report made by Colonel Worrall stated that shad had been caught above Columbia and that 5,000 had been caught in the 50 miles of river between Columbia and Clark's Ferry, as compared with 15,000 in the same section for the previous year. In his official report for 1870 Colonel Worrall, after taking credit for the good results obtained by the construction of the fishway in the Columbia dam, went on to say that the shad fisheries below Columbia had deteriorated by the construction of the fairway in the Columbia dam, much in the preceding 30 years that not even five shad were caught in 1869, where 100 were caught in 1839. In 1871 he claimed that the catch at Columbia had exceeded 100,000 shad as a result of the construction of the fishway in the Columbia dam, but this statement may be questioned in view of the fact that in 1873 the State Commissioners of Fisheries, which had succeeded Worrall, spent $11,053 for the construction of a second fishway in the Columbia dam, thus indicating that the first fishway had not been a success. In the report of the State Commissioners of Fisheries for the period 1879 and 1880 there was a description of the third fishway in the Columbia dam, and the catch between Turkey Hill (about 4 miles downstream from Columbia) and Columbia was given as 32,000 in 1879 and 47,000 in 1880. Later official report of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania show that two more fishways were constructed in the old Columbia dam, but after the construction of five fishways the value of the shad catch in the Susquehanna River was given in the 1895 report as $13,420.

In 1896, the dam at Columbia was destroyed by floating ice, and the breaks were not repaired. Many of the other canal feeder dams, particularly the one at Safe Harbor, had also been destroyed or removed so that the river was clear of all obstructions from the mouth to Clark's Ferry—a distance of about 80 miles. Thus, it was expected that the shad catch in the Susquehanna River would show a rapid increase, but in the 1899 report of the Commissioners of Fisheries there was a brief statement to the effect that there were more shad than usual in the Susquehanna River, but that not many were caught because of high, muddy water and the springing up of other industries. It is further stated that 3,000 shad were caught at Newport, 28 miles above Harrisburg, and that some catches were reported from other localities, but that the fishermen "seemed to have lost all interest in the sport, however, and there was no fishing in this neighborhood (Harrisburg) to amount anything." The 1899 report also contains the following statement: "It is feared that the prestige of the Susquehanna as a shad stream is entirely gone and cannot be revived unless the State of Maryland will abolish the use of pound nets, fishpots, and other destructive methods of taking fish, and the mass of fishermen along the stream in Pennsylvania can be induced or compelled to abandon the fishpot, dam, and basket." In the report of the Commissioners of Fisheries of the State of Pennsylvania for the year 1900 we find reference to the fact that in 1880 the value of the shad catch from the Susquehanna River was $85,000; that in 1890 the value of the shad fisheries on the Susquehanna had fallen to $35,000; and that after 1890 the value had fluctuated between $25,000 and $35,000, although these figures are at variance with the figure of $13,420 noted in the 1895 report. Subsequent reports of the Pennsylvania Commissioners of Fisheries for 1901, 1902, 1903, and 1904 indicated a slight improvement in the quantity of shad, and stated that shad had appeared above Clark's Ferry in small numbers.

It can be seen from the above noted abstracts of the official reports of the State of Pennsylvania that long before the beginning of construction of the dam at Holtwood the quantity of shad entering the Susquehanna River was insignificant commercially, having a gross value which varied between $13,000 and $35,000. There was no shad canning industry similar to the salmon canning industry of the West Coast, and in a large measure the fish were consumed as fresh fish in areas close to the river. Some individuals and groups made a practice of salting or smoking the shad, but this was solely for their own consumption and this type of food supply was not on a commercial basis.

The great diminution in the quantity of shad entering the Susquehanna River was due solely to overfishing and lack of good conservation practices, particularly in the salt water areas of the Chesapeake Bay. All of the shad which would normally enter the Susquehanna River must travel for nearly 200 miles through the Chesapeake Bay, where the fisheries are controlled by the states of Virginia and Maryland. As far back as 1876 the Commissioners of Fisheries of Maryland, in an official report, stated that fisheries were becoming less and less productive and that the waters were being depleted of their yield of food fish to an alarming extent. Between the years 1871 and 1879 the catch of shad in the head of the Bay and the mouth of the Susquehanna River decreased from 720,000 to 578,000 pounds. The spawning season of 1901 was the worst experienced up to that time, and from then on the shad catch in Maryland waters fluctuated between good years and bad years, but with a gradually declining trend.

Exhibit "H," attached, is a chart showing the shad catches in Maryland waters in the years from 1880 to 1946. Attention is directed to the fact that between 1890 and 1946 the catch dropped from a peak of over 7,000,000 pounds to approximately 400,000 pounds, and the sharpest part of this drop occurred between the years 1897 and 1904, when there were no obstruction in the Susquehanna River between the mouth and Clark's Ferry.

Reports published by the U. S. Fish Commission, and later by the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, show clearly that prior to the construction of the Holtwood dam the quantity of shad caught was rapidly declining. In 1897 a report made by Chas. H. Stevenson, published in the Bulletin of the U. S. Fish Commission, stated that dams in the river play a very unimportant part in limiting the run of fish "as few shad reach these obstructions," and then went on to point out that whereas in former years the bulk of the yield was obtained from the middle and upper sections of the rivers, at that time nearly all of the catch was obtained in the lower section and in the salt water estuaries. He also pointed out that nearly all of the shad caught in either salt or brackish water were caught before they spawned.

It can be conceded that no shad ascended the Susquehanna River above the Holtwood dam after 1910, but there were still 20 miles of river above tidewater available as a spawning ground. However, in the report of the Pennsylvania Department of Fisheries for the period from December 1, 1910 to November 30, 1911 it was stated that the shad catch in Pennsylvania amounted to 12,701 for Lancaster County and 9,816 for York County, and in the report for the following year these figures were 13,416 and 9,924, respectively. In the report of the same Commission for the period from December 1, 1913 to November 30, 1914 it is stated that the number of shad caught in Pennsylvania below the Holtwood dam amounted to 3,401 for Lancaster County and 4,628 for York County, and in 1915 the total catch amounted to 4,271 which was valued at less than $1,900.

In the report of the Department of Fisheries of the State of Pennsylvania covering the period from December 1, 1914 to November 30, 1915 Mr. Nathan R. Buller, Commissioner, discussed the fishway situation fully and made the statement that "today there is no practical and successful fishway known." Following are further quotations from that report:

"Dam Blamed for a Poor Run of Shad.

"Statements have been made that the dam is to be blamed for a poor run of shad this year. There is no doubt that the run this year has fallen off, but that the dam is to be blamed for it does not seem to be borne out by the 'Report of the Commissioner of Fisheries' for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, (copy of which is attached) and wherein certain of the pertinent statements have been underlined by us.

"Shad and Herring Fisheries of Chesapeake Bay."

"Inquiries conducted by the Bureau (U. S.) show that the spring fishing season of 1913 was the poorest in many years in most parts of the Chesapeake Basin, and the aggregate catch of the principal spring fish, shad and herring—much less than in recent years. The effects of the diminished run of fish will be seen from three to five years hence, when the reduced progeny of the 1913 season's supply comes back to spawn.

"The conditions in the Potomac River, which may be taken as typical for all the major streams, were in some respects the worst in 40 years. The upper reaches of the river were almost barren of fish during the entire season, and nearly all the shad and herring fishermen failed to meet expenses. At Ferry Landing, Va., the largest seine on the river, 1200 fathoms long, discontinued operations in the middle of the season owing to the scarcity of fish. In former years this celebrated fishing shore, with a smaller seine, sometimes yielded 200,000 or more herring at a haul on an average. Only a few years back from 1,000 to 1,500 shad were frequently taken at one set of the seine. In 1913 the largest haul was 3,000 herring and 100 shad, while many times only 6 to 20 shad were taken.

"The shad hatcheries operated by the Bureau on the Potomac and Susquehanna Rivers had a very unsuccessful season. Their operations afford a good criterion of the condition of the fishery in the fresh waters, because the whole field is covered and nearly every ripe fish that is caught by the fishermen is stripped of its eggs by spawn takers and sent out from the hatcheries.

"Shad culture on a scale that is entirely feasible can, with minor protective legislation, maintain the shad fishery in almost any stream, but shad culture under existing conditions is deprived of one very essential requirement, namely, an adequate supply of ripe eggs for hatching purposes.

"The immediate cause of the failure of the shad and herring fisheries in 1913 is the diminished run of spawning fish into the Chesapeake Bay from the sea and the enormous quantity of apparatus among which a limited catch had to be divided. Inasmuch as the great bulk of the yield is taken in salt water, the remnant that was able to reach the spawning grounds in the streams was insignificant and wholly inadequate to maintain the supply.

"The remote cause of the present condition is excessive fishing in former years and the lack of even the minimum amount of protection that is demanded by regard for the most elementary principles of fishery conservation. Fish entering Chesapeake Bay have to run through such a maze of nets that the wonder is that any are able to reach their spawning grounds and deposit their eggs. The mouth of every important shad and herring stream in the Chesapeake Basin is literally clogged with nets, that are set for the special purpose of intercepting every fish, whereas a proper regard for the future welfare of the fisheries and for the needs of the migrating schools would cause the nets to be set so as to insure the escapes of a certain proportion of the spawning fish.

"Adequate protection of the fishes is compatible with great freedom of fishery and with a large and increasing yield. A very slight curtailment of the catch, perhaps as little as 10% in any given year, may be sufficient to perpetuate the species and result in increased production in a few years. To disregard a requirement so small and to permit the continuance of an evil so serious simply invites and encourages the destruction of a most valuable food supply.

"These conditions demand the immediate attention of the States and the application of a radical remedy. Their failure or inability to meet the situation by individual and cooperative action would seem to call for interference on the part of the Federal Government, a course which is being strongly urged by many thoughtful persons in the case of fishes which are migratory and can not be regarded as the property of any particular State."

"There is also attached a statement from the Bureau of Fisheries referred to, indicating the extent of the shad fisheries over the middle Atlantic States for a number of years—1880 to 1909, given for those States having shad rivers. From this it appears that the shad catch has been falling off since the year 1901 up to 1909. In this connection it is to be borne in mind that the Holtwood dam was not closed in until the latter part of 1910 and that shad did go past the dam in 1909.

"An investigation indicates that upon other shad rivers there was complaint this year of the small shad run and naturally upon these rivers there was no opportunity to complain of the Holtwood dam."

In 1925, Secretary of Commerce Hoover called a conference in Washington to discuss the conservation of migratory fish. In his address, Secretary Hoover laid special stress on the shad situation and showed from statistics of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries that the shad fisheries in the waters of every Atlantic coast state had been depleted to such an extent as to threaten extinction. He stated that the annual catch of shad in 1895 in the states from Georgia to New York had been over 50 million pounds, but that in 30 years it had fallen to 13 million pounds—a decrease of 75%.

Investigational Report No. 38, Volume II, entitled "Marketing of Shad on the Atlantic Coast," published by the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries in 1938, shows that for the Chesapeake Bay states (Virginia and Maryland) the big year of the shad catch was 1897, when 17,329,000 pounds were caught. In 1910, the year that the Holtwood dam was closed, the catch had fallen to 8,764,000 pounds, and by 1935 only 2,683,000 pounds were caught.

As can readily be seen, the value of the shad catch in Pennsylvania for more than 50 years has been insignificant. Assuming that the supply of shad should greatly increase and that successful fishways could be designed and constructed in the three dams at Conowingo, Holtwood, and Safe Harbor, the value of the shad catch in the State of Pennsylvania would still be relatively small and under no circumstances would it justify the construction of expensive fishways. This is particularly true in view of the fact that the shad fishing industry is limited to a period of somewhat less than three months in each year. In Maryland waters were the shad fishermen also catch rock, bluefish, perch, Norfolk spot, trout and other species of food fish, the fisheries industry is on a year-round basis. It can be argued that if the State of Maryland found that any substantial quantity of shad were being taken in Pennsylvania waters before spawning, the present regulations of the Conservation Department of the State of Maryland would be altered for the benefit of Maryland fishermen.

Insofar as the individual sport fisherman is concerned, the stocking of the ponds behind the three dams has provided fishing grounds in which he may fish at all times of the year, subject, of course, to the regulations established by the Fish Commissioner. The best description of the benefit derived from the stocking of these ponds is found in the report of the Department of Fisheries of the State of Pennsylvania for the year 1913, where it was stated as follows:

"That the waters in the streams of Pennsylvania will be allowed to go to waste instead of being used as a maker of power is no longer doubtful. They will be dammed and harnessed to plants which will create electric energy that will furnish light, heat and power now created by the burning of fuel, the expense of which is growing heavier every day. Conservation of new energies is now the great question before the people and the elimination of such waters as the untrammelled flow of the rivers to the sea will no longer be permitted. The erection of the dams will create large bodies of waters throughout the State, and each of these bodies of water can become great sources of supplies of fish, because the increase in the water space means more space for fish to live and thrive.

"The only real migratory fish in Pennsylvania are the shad and the eel, and Erie has become the greatest fish market in the world, and has done so without any shad or eels being part of their catch. There are really few streams in Pennsylvania which shad would ascend, even if there were no dams in those streams, while it requires a very small inducement for an eel to make his headway to the upper waters of a stream. Besides this, there is always an equal divide in regard to the eels, one-half of the people being their champions, while the other half regard them as the most undesirable life in the streams.

"During the past year the Department has stocked the huge dam of the Pennsylvania Water & Power Company, at Holtwood, on the Susquehanna, and it proposes to continue this stocking until the dam or lake abounds with fish, ready to give every angler a full string, if he does not have to enter into competition with the violator of the law who uses a gill net and every other destructive means of fishing.

"In by far the larger number of streams of the State the dams are a benefit rather than a detriment to the fish, as the dams make more extensive bodies of water and greater depths, so that there is room for far more fish than there would be in the streams if there were no dams. It is true that it is possible that some of the bass, pike-perch, or other fishes, may get over the dam and be unable to get back, but they will be so few that they are not worth considering. None of the fishes in Pennsylvania, except the shad and eel, are migratory, though it is true they will ascend the stream some distance to spawn so that the Department would rather recommend the damming of the stream as a means for procuring more areas of water in which to raise fish."

The dam of the Safe Harbor Water Power Corporation at Safe Harbor is visited each year by approximately 10,000 fishermen, and at Holtwood nearly 4,000 fishermen use facilities provided by Pennsylvania Water & Power Company. At Conowingo, many thousands fish from the powerhouse of the Susquehanna Power Company and, in addition, untold numbers of fishermen visit various locations on the shore of the ponds behind the three power dams. The Department of Tidewater Fisheries of the State of Maryland considers it to be impractical to install a fishway at the Conowingo dam, but the Conservation Department has employed Dr. Rufus L. Thompson, who is associated with the University of Kansas, to make a complete investigation and report covering the development of the Conowingo pond as a source of supply for nonmigratory fish. It is expected that this report will be available in the latter part of 1948 or the early part of 1949.

It is probable that reports of the large salmon catch in the Columbia River ten years after the completion of the Bonneville dam, with its appurtenant fishways, may have aroused agitation for the construction of fishways at Conowingo, Holtwood, and Safe Harbor to provide passage for shad. In this connection it is pointed out that the chinook, steel head trout, and other species of salmon which frequent the Columbia and other West Coast rivers, are similar to the shad in only one respect, and that is that all are anadromous; beyond that characteristic there is no similarity. The salmon and the shad are hatched from eggs spawned in fresh or brackish water, descend to salt water as fingerlings, and return to the stream of their origin to spawn at the age of three or four years. However, shad will not leap nor fight to reach its spawning grounds, but will deposit its eggs at the foot of a dam or fishway. Salmon and steel head trout of the West Coast will fight their way upstream over falls and through rapids or fishways to reach the spawning ground, where the adult salmon die after breeding. A few of the adult steel head trout return to the ocean with the fingerlings, although the majority die in fresh water. The fishways at Booneville, originally estimated to cost $800,000, have actually cost the taxpayers of the United States over 7 million dollars. However, the total annual income from the salmon fisheries on the Columbia River is estimated at 10 million dollars, although for the 12-year period from 1924 to 1935 the actual value to commercial fishermen in Washington and Oregon was $32,700,000, or slightly over $2,500,000 per year for the 12-year period. Prior to the construction of the Booneville dam it was estimated by the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries that 75% of all salmon entering the Columbia River passed the dam site in their migratory move, hence there was reasonable economic basis to support a substantial expenditure for fishways which the salmon would use. However, there is no such economic justification for even relatively small expenditures on the Susquehanna River as the shad fisheries industry in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has never been of importance except as a food supply for a few weeks in each year for the small segment of the population residing close to the river. Based upon official reports of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, using an average weight of 5 pounds per shad and an average value of 5c per pound, we find that the value of the catch in 1867 was $3,750; in 1868, $1,250; in 1871, $25,000; in 1872, $12,500; in 1895, $13,420 and between 1911 and 1915 it dropped from a value of $5,629 to $1,900.

Pennsylvania Water & Power Company and Safe Harbor Water Power Corporation have made no effort to estimate the present day cost of constructing fishways at Holtwood and Safe Harbor because, on the basis of information received through recent conferences with representatives of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, there is no plan or design for a fishway which will be used by shad in dams of the height of these two. There is no doubt that many years of study and experimentation will be required to produce and test a workable design—if such a design can ever be made. In addition, if a workable fishway is developed, installation of these devices at Conowingo, Holtwood, and Safe Harbor could not be justified on an economic basis even if the states of Virginia and Maryland could be persuaded to permit practically all of the annual shad run to travel through the Chesapeake Bay without hindrance in order to reach the Susquehanna River. Furthermore, consideration should be given to the fact that the ultimate cost of any fishways constructed at the three dams at the expense of the owners of the dams would be borne by the rate payer who consumes the electricity produced at these hydroelectric projects.

It has always been the policy of the Pennsylvania Water & Power Company and Safe Harbor Water Power Corporation to cooperate with the Fish Commissioner of Pennsylvania, and this is evidenced by the construction of fishways at Holtwood, provision of facilities for fishermen at the two plants, and in many other ways. The two companies are planning to spend further sums of money in the next two years to provide additional facilities for the comfort and convenience of the many thousands of fishermen who visit the plants each year. This policy of cooperation will be continued, particularly where it results in developing and maintaining a fish supply in the lakes behind the dams, but it is respectfully submitted that the construction of fishways at Holtwood and Safe Harbor will not accomplish this purpose.

APPENDIX B

Statement in Behalf of Philadelphia Electric Power Company and The Susquehanna Power Company, Owners of the Conowingo Development on the Susquehanna River at Conowingo, Maryland, to the Joint State Government Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania

November 19 1947

The Conowingo Hydro-Electric Project was authorized by the Federal Power Commission by license, dated February 20, 1926, issued jointly to Philadelphia Electric Power Company and The Susquehanna Power Company, both being corporations of the Philadelphia Electric Company System. Philadelphia Electric Power Company, incorporated in Pennsylvania, is the owner of that portion of the project lying within the boundaries of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, consisting principally of a part of the lands inclosing the reservoir above the Dam and transmission lines from the Maryland-Pennsylvania boundary to the point of connection with transmission lines of Philadelphia Electric Company. The Susquehanna Power Company, incorporated in Maryland, owns that part of the project lying within the boundary of the State of Maryland, consisting of the dam and power house and lands inclosing the reservoir above the Dam lying south of the Pennsylvania-Maryland boundary, together with transmission lines connecting the power house with the lines of Philadelphia Electric Power Company.

Article 13 of the Federal Power Commission License, covering Conowingo Project, states that the operation of any navigation facilities constructed in connection with the dam shall be controlled by rules and regulations made by the Secretary of War, which may include the maintenance and operation by The Susquehanna Power Company, at its own expense, of such fishways as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce.

Chapter 268, Laws of Maryland 1908, amending the charter of Susquehanna Power Company (of which The Susquehanna Power Company is successor), granted and affirmed the right of that Company to dam the Susquehanna River, Section 6 required "that in every such dam . . . said company shall construct and maintain sufficient fishways or fish ladders to permit the passage of fish from the waters below to the waters above any such dam."

In view of the above requirements, it is believed that the Joint Government Commission will be interested in a statement as to why no fishways were constructed in connection with the Conowingo Dam.

In 1923, during the period of promotion of the Conowingo Project, the matter of fishway requirements was taken up with the Commission of the Bureau of Fisheries of the U. S. Department of Commerce. This subject had also been brought up by the then Attorney General, Hon. George W. Woodruff, of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, under date of December 10, 1923, when he addressed a communication to the secretary of the Federal Power Commission, copy of which communication is appended hereby and marked Exhibit "A."

After careful consideration of the points brought out by Attorney General Woodruff, the Commissioner of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, under date of December 29, 1923, in a letter to the Federal Power Commission, stated that his office was of the opinion "that a fishway in the Conowingo Dam would not be effective in assisting shad to ascend from a lower to a higher water level." This letter then continued, "It is very doubtful if shad would ascend a fishway of any description or any height. It is also my opinion that none of the fishways as now constructed would be useful in assisting eels or fishes to pass over a dam one hundred feet high. For this reason, a fishway in the Conowingo Dam is not recommended by this office."

Copy of the above-mentioned letter of Commissioner Henry O'Malley of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, dated December 29, 1923, is appended hereto as Exhibit "B."

Dr. W. C. L. Eglin, then chief engineer of Philadelphia Electric Company, and as such, directly interested in the promotion of the Conowingo Project, was informed by the chief engineer of the Federal Power Commission, in a letter dated December 31, 1923, inclosing a copy of the December 29, 1923, report of the Commissioner of Fisheries, that "it appears that there is nothing further for you to take up with the Bureau of Fisheries as the matter is rather definitely disposed of by Mr. O'Malley's letter."

However, under date of January 16, 1925, The Susquehanna Power Company was informed in a communication written by the Commissioner of the Conservation Department of Maryland, Mr. Swepson Earle, that it would be necessary "to provide suitable fishways to protect the fish seeking the spawning grounds in Susquehanna River."

Discussions followed Mr. Earle's communication. In view of the opinion of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries that a fishway on the Conowingo Dam was not practicable, which would permit the free passage of fish from the lower levels to the upper levels of the water above the dam, Mr. Earle, representing the Conservation Department of Maryland, and Mr. N. R. Buller, then Commissioner of Fisheries of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, got together and apparently reached a conclusion in agreement with the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries. Somewhere in here they conceived the idea that the interests of fishing would be best served by providing for the propagation of fish and stocking of the reservoir above the Conowingo Dam. A copy of a memorandum of conference, held July 27, 1927, between Messrs. Buller and Earle, and dealing with this subject, is appended hereto as Exhibit "C."

On March 27, 1928, a conference was held in the Baltimore office of the Conservation Department of Maryland between Mr. Swepson Earle, Commissioner of the Conservation Department of Maryland, Mr. N. R. Buller, Commissioner of Fisheries of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Mr. Milton C. James, representing the Bureau of Fisheries of Washington, and representatives of the power companies. At this meeting, detailed plans for the construction of two fishways of the most modern design, one to be constructed on each side of the Conowingo Dam, were presented by the representatives of the power companies, and the Commissioners were advised that the power companies were ready and willing to commence the construction of these fishways immediately. All of the Commissioners examined the plans and not only had no objections with respect thereto, but were very outspoken of their praise of the way the matter had been worked out. Mr. James particularly said that he had never seen more carefully prepared plans for the building of fishways of the improved Cail type, which was the type always recommended by the Federal Bureau of Fisheries. On the other hand, however, the Fish Commissioners all stated that they did not believe any fishway was practicable. Mr. Buller said that his experience with fishways at Holtwood had led him to the conclusion that any money spent in the construction of a fishway, no matter how good the design may be, is clearly a waste of money. Mr. Earle agreed with him on this point and said that his Department did not want the fishways built. Both Mr. Buller and Mr. Earle again reiterated their desire that the Company should pay a certain amount each year to be used to cover the cost of artificially stocking the Conowingo pool with fish. The power companies' representatives then presented a draft of a proposed agreement to this end, and after the same had been read, all parties agreed that it was substantially in satisfactory form.

Further negotiations resulted in the agreement made June 16, 1928, between the power companies of the first part, the Conservation Department of Maryland of the second part, and the Board of Fish Commissioners of Maryland of the second part, and the Board of Fish Commissioners of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania of the third part. Copy of this agreement is appended hereto, marked Exhibit "D." The substance of this agreement provided as follows:

That, in lieu of the construction of fishways, the power companies agreed to make an annual contribution of $8,000 ($4,000 to each State) for the purpose of stocking the pool above the dam with food fish. That the initial payment of $8,000 would cover the period from date of execution of the agreement until the end of the next session of the Pennsylvania and Maryland Legislatures. The Fish Commissioners agreed to endeavor to secure from their respective Legislatures a repeal of all laws and statutes which then imposed any obligation to construct fishways in Conowingo Dam. The agreement further provided that upon passage of such satisfactory legislation, a permanent agreement would be executed. The permanent agreement, which was attached to the proposed agreement as Exhibit "A," provided for the $8,000 annual payment by the power companies; the power companies granted the Commissioners the right of supervision and control of the pool with respect to fishing and boating; it further provided that if by exercise of any government authority the power companies are required to build a fishway, then, the whole agreement terminates, and the annual payment ceases.

The permanent agreement was executed as of August 1, 1929, the Pennsylvania Legislature having eliminated the fishway obligation by Section 8, P. L. 621, amending Section 185 of the act of May 2, 1925, P. L. 448, relating to fish in the inland waters of the Commonwealth.

The Maryland Legislature in its 1929 session also passed suitable legislation, Chapter 471, Section 13 (Bagby's Code, 1929 Supplement, page 210).

With respect to the effect of the installation of fishways upon the Conowingo Project, we do not know just what is meant by the "recent experience in other States," referred to in Resolution No. 35, adopted April 2, 1947, by the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, and therefore, are unable to comment. We would like to point out, however, that any fishways requiring in excess of 10 cubic feet of water per second would have the effect of reducing the output and capacity of the Conowingo Project to generate electricity.

The Susquehanna River is very variable in its flow, the flow varying from flood stages of as high as 785,000 cubic feet per second (March 20, 1936), to as low as 1,775 cubic feet per second (October 9, 1941, during the period of operation of the Conowingo Project).

It is with the periods of minimum flow that we would be most concerned were it necessary to divert any substantial portion of the flow to serve the fishway. Unless devices have been developed and definitely proven a practicable means for fish to pass from the levels below to the reservoir above a dam of the height of Conowingo (approximately 100 feet), it would seem an economic waste to install a fishway.

Honorable O. C. Merrill
Executive Secretary
Federal Power Commission
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Merrill:

The fifty-foot dam in the Susquehanna River at McCall's Ferry, which was placed there before the passage of the Federal Water Power Act, has as a matter of fact absolutely cut off the migration of shad to higher stretches on that river, whereas formerly they went up the river in large numbers as far as the junction of the North and West branches of the Susquehanna.

Complaints of this interference with the natural migration of fish and statements that it has a destructive influence on fish life not only in the Susquehanna, but on the whole shad industry of the Northeastern United States, have been made.

The proposed Conowingo Dam, which will be one hundred feet high and comparatively near the mouth of the Susquehanna, would seem to even more effectively prevent even eels, which are able to crawl past the McCall's Ferry Dam, to a considerable extent from migrating up the Susquehanna. This matter was before me on a hearing recently, and I made a note to ask you whether it might not be well for you to confer with the Federal Fish Commission on the question as to whether a practicable fishway can be provided in a dam of considerable height placed in a river which at times has a very heavy flow of both water and ice.

I understand from the Pennsylvania Fish Commissioner that he actually does not see any way to protect the fish interests at the McCall's Ferry Dam, which is only fifty feet high, short of prohibitive requirements.

One thought is that in a river which fluctuates from a very heavy flow to nearly complete draught, as is true of the Susquehanna, the placing of "splash-boards" on the top of the dam, after the dry season has begun, often exposes the spawn of fish (like shad), which have been stopped by the dam and have deposited their eggs in shallow places below it, to such shallow water conditions and the glare of the sun for sufficient length of time while the dam is filling to the top of the "splash-boards" that the eggs deposited by the fish at what is to them the practical end of the stream, are all or nearly all destroyed.

If you do take this matter up with the Federal Fish Commission, their views as to whether there are practical methods of establishing operative fishways even for shad in connection with dams in rivers like the Susquehanna will be very welcome to me because it will probably be necessary to follow the complaints from the standpoint of fish life concerning the McCall's Ferry Dam to a conclusion at some time in the comparatively near future.

Yours most sincerely,

/s/ George W. Woodruff,
Attorney General.

Project Maryland (No. 405) Susquehanna Power Co.

Federal Power Commission
Washington, D. C.

Gentlemen:

The receipt is acknowledged of your letter of the 22nd instant, together with a copy of a letter from the Attorney General of the State of Pennsylvania with reference to a fishway in the proposed dam of the Susquehanna Power Company near Conowingo, Maryland, Project No. 405.

The office has given careful consideration to the points brought out by Attorney General Woodruff, and is of the opinion that a fishway in the Conowingo Dam would not be effective in assisting shad to ascend from a lower to a higher water level. It is very doubtful if shad would ascend a fishway of any description or any height. It is also my opinion that none of the fishways as now constructed would be useful in assisting eels or fishes to pass over a dam one hundred feet high. For this reason a fishway in the Conowingo Dam is not recommended by this office.

Very truly yours,

/s/ Henry O'Mally,
Commissioner.

EXHIBIT "C"

Conference Held at Bellevue-Stratford at Philadelphia, July 27, 1927

Those present:

Mr. N. R. Buller, Commissioner of Fisheries of Pennsylvania.

Major Robert H. Archer, Assistant Attorney General of Maryland.

Mr. Swepson Earle, Conservation Commissioner of Maryland.

Subject under Discussion:

The fisheries question in connection with the great lake to be made on completion of the Conowingo Dam extending to McCall's Ferry.

It was agreed by the two Commissioners that between 15,000,000 and 200,000,000 fish could be placed annually into these waters. Mr. Earle for Maryland stated that his State could furnish approximately 100,000,000 yellow and white perch a year. Mr. Buller from Pennsylvania stated that he could furnish 50,000,000 Susquehanna salmon and as many sunfish and catfish as $3,000 could supply. In addition, both states will distribute as many large and small mouth bass for brood stock purposes as possible.

Policing

The policing of this large body of water is one of much importance. Both states would prefer having the Power Company place patrolmen on the lake and the respective states, Maryland and Pennsylvania, would deputize these men as wardens. If each state would have to provide wardens, it would require $2,500 a year to cover one warden for each state and expenses.

The states of Pennsylvania and Maryland will require $6,000 each for their fishery work. This amount would not be more than 6% interest on the cost of two fishways if insisted upon by the state of Maryland, to carry fish over the dam. The maintenance of these fishways, in addition, would cost not less than $10,000 a year.

In consideration of the above, the Commissioners of the two states feel that we are not asking any amount in excess of what is necessary and just for this undertaking.

EXHIBIT "D"

THIS AGREEMENT made this 16th day of June, 1928, by The Susquehanna Power Company, a corporation of the State of Maryland, and Philadelphia Electric Power Company, a corporation of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (hereinafter called "Power Companies"), parties of the first part, and the Conservation Department of Maryland on behalf of the State of Maryland acting by and through Swepson Earle, Conservation Commissioner, and the Board of Public Works of the State of Maryland (hereinafter called "Maryland Fish Commissioners"), parties of the second part, and the Board of Fish Commissioners of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, acting for and on behalf of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by and through N. R. Buller, Commissioners of Fisheries (hereinafter called "Pennsylvania Fish Commissioner"), party of the third part, the said parties of the second and third parts being sometimes hereinafter referred to collectively as "Fish Commissioners";

Whereas, Power Companies, pursuant to the authority vested in them by their respective characters and the issuance to them and each of them respectively of licenses, permits and orders by the duly constituted State and Federal authorities having jurisdiction thereof, have recently at great expense completed the construction of a concrete dam approximately ninety feet high across the Susquehanna River in Harford and Cecil Counties, Maryland, at a point distant a few miles upstream from tidewater and a few miles downstream from what was formerly the Village of Conowingo, said dam being an essential part of what has come to be known as the "Conowingo Project." By reason of the construction of the said dam the waters of the said river above the same have been impounded to form a lake extending for a distance of approximately fourteen miles upstream across the dividing line between the States of Maryland and Pennsylvania to the tailrace of the Holtwood Dam in York and Lancaster Counties, Pennsylvania; and

Whereas, Power Companies have made plans in accordance with the most modern and approved design known to the art for the construction of one or more fishways or fish ladders in connection with said dam, and are now ready and willing to build and construct the same, but the parties of the second and third parts hereto have each and all expressed their disapproval of said construction on the ground that same would not be practical, and the said parties of the second and third parts have each declined and refused to recommend or suggest to Power Companies any type or kind of fishways or fish ladders other than that proposed by Power Companies for the reason that after exhaustive studies and long experimentation they have reached the conclusion that it would be physically impossible to build or construct a fishway or fish ladder in, over, under or around Power Companies' dam aforesaid which would permit the passage of fish from the waters below to the waters above any such dam and which would enable fish to have a free course up and down said waters at all times; and

Whereas, The said Fish Commissioners have requested Power Companies not to spend any additional money in an attempt to do what is conceived by Fish Commissioners to be impossible, viz, the construction of one or more practical fishways or fish ladders in, over, under or around the Conowingo Dam, and they have requested Power Companies to contribute under the provisions of this agreement a sum of money for the purpose of stocking with fish the said waters above and the waters below said dam by artificial propagation; and

Whereas, The Commissioner of Fisheries of the Bureau of Fisheries of the Department of Commerce of the United States has substantially confirmed the conclusions of the Fish Commissioners as to the physical impossibility of constructing a practical fishway or fish ladder in, over, under or around said Conowingo Dam and has advised Power Companies that the Department of Commerce, is confident that the State authorities will handle the matter for the best interest of their people; and

Whereas, Power Companies, after careful studies and experimentation on their part, have been unable to discover or devise any fishway or fish ladder more practical than the ones which they have already designed and are now ready and willing to build as aforesaid, and are desirous of discharging their full duties under the law in this connection and of cooperating with the State and Federal authorities to the end that the fish life in the Susquehanna River both above and below said dam may be preserved and increased to the greatest extent possible by the best methods now known to experts in that field of endeavor, have agreed to adopt the suggestions of the Fish Commissioners and are therefore willing to enter into this agreement.

NOW THEREFORE, THIS AGREEMENT WITNESSETH, that for and in consideration of the sum of $1.00 to each party in hand paid by the other, the receipt hereof is hereby acknowledged, and for and in consideration of the premises and the mutual covenants and agreements herein contained, the parties hereto, have agreed as follows, viz:

1. Power Companies agree to pay or cause to be paid to Fish Commissioners upon the execution of this Agreement the sum of $8,000.00 for the purpose of stocking with food fish the waters of the pool above and of the river below the Conowingo Dam and for the purpose of propagating, rearing and distributing the fish actually placed in said waters, and the acquisition of the necessary facilities therefor during the period from the date hereof until the end of the next sessions of the Legislatures of the State of Maryland and of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania respectively, whichever session shall end the latest. The Fish Commissioners do hereby authorize, empower and direct the Power Companies to pay one-half of said $8,000.00, viz, the sum of $4,000.00 to the Conservation Commissioner of the Conservation Department of the State of Maryland, and do further hereby authorize, empower and direct the said Power Companies to pay the other one-half of said sum of $8,000.00, viz, the sum of $4,000.00 to the Commissioner of Fisheries of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and do hereby constitute and appoint the said officials respectively to be their and each of their agent and attorney-in-fact respectively to receive and collect the respective sums of money as aforesaid aggregating $8,000.00, and the receipts of the said individuals respectively shall constitute a full and complete discharge of Power Companies hereunder.

2. The said Fish Commissioners jointly and severally covenant and agree that neither they nor any of them during the period aforesaid will ask, demand or request or encourage or be a party to any demand or request upon the Power Companies or either of them to build, construct, equip or maintain any fishway or fish ladder or other apparatus relating to fish or fishing in connection with the Conowingo Dam or the pool above or the river below same either in the State of Maryland or in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and the said Fish Commissioners further agree that they will jointly and severally use their best endeavors to secure from the Legislatures of the said State of Maryland and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania at the next session thereof a repeal of all laws and statutes or parts thereof which may in any way seem to impose upon either or both of the Power Companies the duty and/or obligation of constructing one or more fish ladders or fishways or other apparatus of a similar nature in, over, or around said Conowingo Dam.

3. The said Power Companies do hereby grant to the Fish Commissioners insofar as they have the power to do so and for the period from the date hereof until the end of the next sessions of the Legislatures, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, the power and authority (except as hereinafter provided) to exercise, within the respective jurisdictions of the said Fish Commissioners, supervision and control over the said Conowingo Pool and the waters of the river below said pool, together with the necessary ingress and egress to, from and over the same (at such points or places as may be designated from time to time by Power Companies) for the purpose of enforcing all laws either general or local (not in conflict with the purposes and object of this agreement) enacted by the respective law making bodies of the States of Pennsylvania and Maryland for the protection of fish and the regulation of fishing rights in or upon any of the said waters of the said States respectively which are not in force or which may hereafter be enacted, together with the right to said Fish Commissioners (except as hereinafter provided) under such rules or regulations as they may impose to permit the right of fishing and boating in said waters; provided, however, that the rights and privileges in this grant contained shall not be deemed or construed to include any right, power or privilege, the exercise of which by the said Fish Commissioners would in any way limit or interfere with the full and free exercise by Power Companies or either of them or any of their lessees or assignees of the corporate powers secured by their respective charters, or in any way to limit or interfere with the full and free performance by said Power Companies or either of them or any of their lessees or assignees of any and all their respective charter obligations and the obligation imposed by them as licensees under a certain License from the Federal Power Commission dated June 20, 1926; and provided also, nevertheless, that such rules and regulations shall not apply to the agents or employees of the said Power Companies in the course of their employment and shall not decrease to any extent the market value of the property owned by the said Power Companies, which said property may be adapted for any lawful purpose.

4. The said Fish Commissioners further covenant and agree that they will use the money so to be received by them from the Power Companies as hereinabove set forth for the purposes provided in this Agreement. They further covenant and agree that they will keep accurate account of the expenditure of said money and the books and accounts of the said Fish Commissioners respectively will at all times be open to inspection by duly authorized representatives of the Power Companies for the purpose of ascertaining how said money has been expended, and they further respectively covenant and agree that they will within thirty (30) days after the end of the next sessions of the Legislature, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, render to the Power Companies a written account showing in detail how said money so received has been expended.

5. And the said Fish Commissioners further covenant and agree that at the written request of said Power Companies, or either of them, they will suggest and recommend to the Legislatures of the State of Maryland and of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania at the next ensuing sessions thereof the passage of acts ratifying and approving this agreement and repealing such provisions of the laws (if any) of the respective States as may be and/or appear to be in conflict therewith.

6. The Power Companies further covenant and agree that if the Legislatures or other law making bodies of the said respective State of Maryland and Commonwealth of Pennsylvania shall at the next ensuing sessions thereof enact legislation satisfactory to counsel for Power Companies to the end that all statutes and laws or parts thereof now existing (if any) may be repealed which in any manner or degree place upon either or both of said Power Companies a duty or obligation to construct, erect or maintain fishways or fish ladders in connection with said Conowingo Dam to the end that the only duties and obligations of Power Companies relating to fish or fishing in the Susquehanna River shall be covered by the contract hereinafter referred to, then and in that event the Power Companies hereby covenant and agree that they will jointly and severally execute and deliver to the parties of the second part an agreement in substantially the form attached hereto and marked Exhibit "A," which shall thereupon supersede this present Agreement, and the said Fish Commissioners on their part jointly and severally covenant and agree that they will execute and deliver the said proposed Agreement, Exhibit "A," and accept the same as in all respects satisfactory to them and each of them.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the parties hereto have executed this Agreement in five counter-parts by the duly authorized representatives and sealed with their official seals on the day and year aforesaid.

EXHIBIT "A"

THIS AGREEMENT made this first day of August 1929, by The Susquehanna Power Company, a corporation of the State of Maryland, and Philadelphia Electric Power Company, a corporation of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (hereinafter called "Power Companies"), parties of the first part, and the Conservation Department of Maryland on behalf of the State of Maryland acting by and through Swepson Earle, Conservation Commissioner, and the Board of Public Works of the State of Maryland (hereinafter called "Maryland Fish Commissioners"), parties of the second part, and the Board of Fish Commissioners of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, acting for and on behalf of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by and through N. R. Buller, Commissioner of Fisheries (hereinafter called "Pennsylvania Fish Commissioner"), party of the third part, the said parties of the second and third parts being sometimes hereinafter referred to collectively as "Fish Commissioners";

WHEREAS, the parties hereto have heretofore entered into a certain Agreement dated June 16, 1928, which is hereby referred to and made a part hereof, in paragraph 6 of which this present Agreement is referred to as Exhibit "A"; and

WHEREAS, the parties hereto have fully performed the covenants and agreements therein required of them and each of them as conditions precedent to the execution of this Agreement.

NOW, THEREFORE, THIS AGREEMENT WITNESSETH, that for and in consideration of the premises and of the mutual covenants and agreements herein contained, and of the sum of one dollar ($1.00) to each party in hand paid to the other, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, the parties hereto have agreed as follows, viz:

1. Power Companies agree to pay or cause to be paid to Fish Commissioners under the terms and provisions of this Agreement the sum of eight thousand dollars ($8,000.00) annually, for the purpose of stocking with food fish the waters of the pool above and of the river below the Conowingo Dam, and for the purpose of propagating, rearing and distributing the fish actually placed in said waters, and the acquisition of the necessary facilities therefor. The first payment of said eight thousand dollars ($8,000.00) to be due and payable immediately upon the execution and delivery of this agreement, and thereafter, except as otherwise provided herein, said annual payments shall be made on the anniversary of the date of this agreement in each year during the term of this agreement as hereinafter provided. The Fish Commissioners do hereby authorize, empower and direct the Power Companies to pay one-half of said eight thousand dollars ($8,000.00), viz, the sum of four thousand dollars ($4,000.00) to the Conservation Commissioner of the Conservation Department of the State of Maryland, or to his successor in office, and do further hereby authorize, empower and direct the said Power Companies to pay the other one-half of said sum of eight thousand dollars ($8,000.00) viz, the sum of four thousand dollars ($4,000.00) to the Commissioner of Fisheries of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or to his successor in office, and the receipts of the said officials respectively or their said respective successors in office shall constitute a full and complete discharge of Power Companies hereunder.

2. The said Fish Commissioners jointly and severally covenant and agree that neither they nor any of them during the term of this agreement, as hereinafter set forth, will ask, demand or request or encourage or be a party to any demand or request upon the Power Companies or either of them to build, construct, equip or maintain any fishway or fish ladder or other apparatus relating to fish or fishing in connection with the Conowingo Dam or the pool above or the river below same either in the State of Maryland or in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

3. The said Power Companies do hereby grant to the Fish Commissioners insofar as they have the power to do so and for the period from the date hereof until the termination of this agreement as hereinafter set forth, the power and authority (except as hereinafter provided) to exercise, within the respective jurisdictions of the said Fish Commissioners, supervision and control over the said Conowingo Pool and the waters of the river below said pool, together with the necessary ingress and egress to, from and over the same (at such points or places as may be designated from time to time by Power Companies) for the purpose of enforcing all laws either general or local (not in conflict with the purposes and objects of this agreement) enacted by the respective law making bodies of the States of Pennsylvania and Maryland for the protection of fish and the regulation of fishing rights in or upon any of the said waters of the said States respectively which are now in force or which may hereafter be enacted together with the right to said Fish Commissioners (except as hereinafter provided) under such rules or regulations as they may impose to permit the right of fishing and boating in said waters; provided, however that the rights and privileges in this grant contained shall not be deemed or construed to include any right, power or privilege, the exercise of which by the said Fish Commissioners would in any way limit or interfere with the full and free exercise by Power Companies or either of them or any of their lessees or assignees of the corporate powers secured by their respective charters, or in any way to limit or interfere with the full and free performance by said

Power Companies or either of them or any of their lessees or assignees of any and all their respective charter obligations and the obligations imposed by them as licensees under a certain license from the Federal Power Commission dated June 20, 1926; and provided also, nevertheless, that such rules and regulations shall not apply to the agents or employees of the said Power Companies in the course of their employment and shall not decrease to any extent the market value of the property owned by the said Power Companies, which said property may be adapted for any lawful purpose.

4. The said Fish Commissioners further covenant and agree that they will use the money so to be received by them from the Power Companies as hereinabove set forth for the purposes provided in this Agreement. They further covenant and agree that they will keep accurate account of the expenditure of said money and the books and accounts of the said Fish Commissioners respectively will at all times be open to inspection by duly authorized representatives of the Power Companies for the purpose of ascertaining how said money has been expended, and they further respectively covenant and agree that they will at least (30) days prior to the date hereinabove fixed for said annual payments render to the Power Companies a written account showing in detail how said money so received has been expended, and said Fish Commissioners further agree that if by the accounts, or otherwise, it shall appear that any of said moneys so paid by the Power Companies in the previous year shall not have been expended by Fish Commissioners or shall have been expended for purposes not contemplated by this agreement, then and in that event Power Companies are hereby authorized and directed to deduct from the payment or payments thereafter due hereunder an amount equal to such sum not expended and/or wrongfully expended as the case may be and only the balance remaining after said deduction shall be payable by the Power Companies, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

5. This agreement shall continue until such time as by the exercise of any government authority the said Power Companies shall be required to construct one or more fishways or fish ladders or the equivalent thereof in, over, under or around said Conowingo Dam, and unless this said Agreement be previously terminated as aforesaid it shall continue in force for the full period of fifty years from February 20, 1926, the date of a certain License issued by the Federal Power Commission to the Power Companies jointly in behalf of the Conowingo Project.

6. This agreement is also conditioned upon the right of Power Companies to include the payments provided for as part of the operating costs of the Conowingo Project as described in said Federal License and upon the approval, before or after the beginning of said payments, of said payments as such operating costs, by any governmental regulatory body having jurisdiction thereof.

7. And the said Fish Commissioners further covenant and agree that at the written request of said Power Companies, or either of them they will suggest and recommend to the Legislature of the State of Maryland and of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania at the next ensuing sessions thereof the passage of acts ratifying and approving this Agreement.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the parties hereto executed this Agreement in five counter-parts by the duly authorized representatives and sealed with their official seals on the day and year aforesaid.

APPENDIX C

Fishways for the Restoration of the Shad Fishery of the Susquehanna River

By L. E. Cable,

Aquatic Biologist, In Charge, Shad Investigations,
U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service

Before the construction of dams on the Susquehanna River the shad fishery there was among the most important on the Atlantic Coast. The fishery extended from the upper part of Chesapeake Bay to some distance above the New York-Pennsylvania Line. Because portions of the catch were taken in various areas of Chesapeake Bay as well as in the river, and records are fragmentary, it is not possible to obtain a clear estimate, for those years, of total production of shad in the Susquehanna. It seems probable, however, that the catch amounted to several million pounds each year and was second only to that in the Delaware River where from 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 pounds of shad were taken annually during that period before 1900 for which there is a record of the Delaware fishery.

Researches of the Wyoming Historical and Geological Society show that there were many fishing shores along the upper Susquehanna, about 40 in number, above the forks at Sunbury, Pennsylvania. Some of the apparently authentic records report a catch of 9997 shad at a single haul of the seine at Fish Island near Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania; 3800 shad taken in one night just below Nanticoke; 2800 in a single haul at Monacacy Island; 2000 caught in five hauls at the Sterling Island fishery, also large numbers of shad caught in the Juniata and the West Branch Susquehanna. No doubt these catches were exceptional, but they do indicate that shad were once numerous in the upper part of the river.

Nets, mostly seines, were operated from Havre de Grace at the mouth of the river to Binghamton, some distance into New York State, in the Juniata River which joins the Susquehanna 100 miles from its mouth and the West Branch Susquehanna, 75 miles farther up the river. Since shad spawn as far up a river, and its tributaries, as they migrate, it is certain that the upper-most limit of the spawning grounds in the main river was near Binghamton, N. Y., over 350 miles from the mouth of the river and probably to the fall line in each of the two tributaries in which there were important runs.

The decline of this fishery was due almost entirely to the erection of dams that obstruct the passage of the fish to some portion of the spawning grounds. Nanticoke dam, seven miles south of Wilkes-Barre, built in 1830, barred shad from at least 125 miles of spawning area. Five years later the dam at Columbia reduced the spawning area to 43 miles of river and the Conowingo dam, completed in 1927, cut this down to ten miles.

Before the dams were built, the water was shoal and filled with rapids. Now, much of that is changed. Besides the dams just mentioned, there are many, many others, each forming an impoundment of deep water almost devoid of current. Even though fishways were devised to carry shad over the dams to all their original spawning grounds, it is doubtful that, in this changed habitat, reproduction would equal that of former times.

Many types of fishways have been constructed at dam sites on rivers of the East Coast, but none has accomplished the avowed purpose of permitting the passage of shad over the dams. I understand that shortly after 1863 one of these fishways was constructed in the dam at Columbia. At a point about a quarter of a mile from the west bank, a 40 foot section of the dam was removed and in the space a new subdam was constructed. The top was about level with the water below and the slope was inclined at the rate of 1 to 15 feet. The sides of the aperture in the main dam were indented to form eddies in the current passing over the dam. Shad did not use this fishway. In 1873 a fishway of another design was constructed at the same location. This one consisted of a single trough 120 feet long by 60 feet wide running through the dam about 150 feet below and sunk 2 feet below the crest of the dam. This also proved ineffectual. In 1880, a third fishway in the form of an opening 125 feet wide was made and a fourth fishway was built in 1886, both of which failed to let the fish past the dam. Shad ascended the river in considerable numbers only in the years 1873, 1877, 1895 and 1896 when breaks occurred in the dam.

The fishways at Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River are the only ones in this country that shad are known to use at all. There, fish are counted as they make the ascent. Each spring three or four thousand adult shad pass over the dam via the fishways. In 1940, nearly 32,000 shad were counted as they passed through the fishways. It is not known how the juvenile shad reach the lower river in their seaward migration—whether they make the long drop over the dam or go through the turbines—nor is it known whether any of them survive the descent. Either way is rough treatment for the small fish.

The Bonneville fishways are composed of a series of pools each slightly higher than the one downstream from it. In addition there are sub-surface apertures in the baffles obviating the necessity for shad to leap over the baffles. Large quantities of water are released over this fishway to provide a strong current.

Shad are definitely rheotropic. They head into the current when one is present and when more than one is present the stronger one is chosen. Thus, shad pass by the entrances of most fishways to mill around the foot of the dam. Too little water is released over the fishway to attract them from the main stream. They must have water of sufficient depth for swimming upright without exposure above the surface. They will not pass even a small obstacle if the water is too shallow, but they do sometimes pass over a low dam if the river is in flood stage so the water above the dam is fairly deep and almost on a level with that below.

Although expensive, it is possible that fishways of the type used at Bonneville Dam will carry shad over the dams on the Susquehanna. Much water must be released for them during two seasons of the year. Fortunately the seasons both are short and the fishways could be closed the remainder of the year. The period of the spawning migration would be about six weeks in duration beginning May first, and the seaward migration of the juveniles about a month in length probably beginning sometime in September, depending upon several variables in a type of habitat to which the fish are unaccustomed. As shad travel mostly at night, water might be conserved by opening the fishways at night only.

SUMMARY

A valuable fishery has been lost to the State of Pennsylvania because of the construction of dams across the Susquehanna has prevented access of shad to their spawning grounds. The fishway, which has been suggested as a remedy for the situation, has been applied in various forms to dams across several shad rivers on the East Coast with negative results. The fishway now operating at Booneville Dam is the only type that is effective in getting shad over a dam. This fishway is prodigal of water while in operation.

The short season of all adult and juvenile shad migrations and the nocturnal habits of the fish, however, would make it possible to impound the water most of the year.

There are a great many dams on the Susquehanna and each one, beginning with the Conowingo Dam must be provided with a fishway that will be used freely by shad before the run in the river can be reestablished. When construction of fishways has been accomplished, it may be found that the environment of so much of the river has been changed by impoundments that shad will not thrive or that the young will not survive descent over so many dams.

HISTORY

No revision of the penal laws was made between 1860 and 1939.

The criminal law now in force is set forth largely in the Act of June 24, 1939, P. L. 872, known as "The penal Code," and amendments thereto.

The Penal Code of 1939 made no attempt at uniformity or consistency. It did, however, include in one statute the more important criminal laws of the Commonwealth.

The General Assembly, Session of 1945, by Resolution, Serial No. 15, directed the Joint State Government Commission to investigate, survey and consider all penal laws of the Commonwealth and to revise and restate the same in codified form and report its findings and conclusions to the 1947 Session of the General Assembly.

The subcommittee of the Joint State Government Commission charged with the initial study were Paul M. Crider, Chairman, C. Arthur Blass, Israel Stiefel, appointed on the part of the Senate; Francis Worley, Vice Chairman, Charles H. Brunner, Jr., Joseph Skale, appointed on the part of the House; and an advisory committee headed by W. H. Hitchler, Dean of the Dickinson School of Law, included the following: LAW SCHOOLS—C. Gerald Brophy, Dean, School of Law, Duquesne University; Judson A. Crane, Dean, School of Law, University of Pittsburgh; Dr. Edwin R. Keedy, School of Law, University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Negley K. Teeters, Temple University; BAR ASSOCIATION—William B. McClenachan, Jr., Esquire; JUDGES—Hon. Thomas J. Baldrige, Judge of the Superior Court; Hon. M. J. Eagan, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Lackawanna County; Hon. James Gay Gordon, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia County; Hon. Burton R. Laub, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Erie County; Hon. Harry S. McDevitt, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia County; Hon. W. C. Sheely, President Judge, Court of Common Pleas of Adams County; Hon. Joseph Sloane, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia County; Hon. Robert E. Woodside, Jr., Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County; DISTRICT ATTORNEYS—Franklin E. Barr, Assistant District Attorney of Philadelphia County; Edwin M. Clark, District Attorney of Indiana County; George F. P. Langfitt, First Assistant District Attorney of Allegheny County; Leon Schwartz, District Attorney of Luzerne County; Carl B. Shelley, District Attorney of Dauphin County; PRACTITIONERS—Carl Helmetag, Esquire, Thomas D. McBride, Esquire.

The report of that study, submitted to the 1947 Session of the General Assembly, is set forth at pages 27 to 30 of "Summary Report of the Joint State Government Commission, March 21, 1947," and the Commission's recommendations were contained in Senate Bill No. 306 (1947).

The General Assembly after studying the proposals in the committees of both houses during the 1947 Session, by concurrent resolution directed the Joint State Government Commission to continue its survey, investigation and consideration of the penal laws, to revise and restate them and submit a bill embodying same at the 1949 Session.

The revision and restatement recommended by the Joint State Government Commission are embodied in Senate Bill No. 243, Session of 1949, a copy of which is attached hereto.

(See Senate Bill No. 243, Session of 1949).

DIGEST OF SENATE BILL NO. 243 (1949)

1. The bill by its terms is designated the "Crimes Act." It is not a codification of existing law but a revision and redrafting of all of the more important criminal laws.

2. The bill sets forth:

- 13 Offenses against the Government
- 20 Offenses against Public Justice and Administration
- 15 Offenses against the Public Peace
- 23 Offenses against Public Morals and Decency
- 67 Offenses against Public Policy, Economy and Health
- 21 Offenses against the Person
- 59 Offenses against Personal Property and Fraudulent dealing therewith
- 22 Offenses against Real Property and Malicious Mischiefs
- 10 Offenses against the Coin and Forgery

3. Attached hereto is a reference table showing the section titles and section numbers of Senate Bill No. 243 (1949), the corresponding section numbers appearing in Senate Bill No. 306, Printer's No. 571 (1947) and the equivalent sections of the Penal Code of 1939, P. L. 872 and its amendments.

4. General features of Senate Bill No. 243 (1949):

- (a) Eliminates archaic and obsolete language in defining offenses
- (b) Eliminates technical and surplus verbiage
- (c) Groups related provisions together, briefly and concisely
- (d) Restates and clarifies conflicting provisions
- (e) Makes uniform the distinction between felonies and misdemeanors by providing that all crimes punishable by imprisonment of more than three (3) years are felonies; and that all other crimes are misdemeanors. When the offense is summary the text so states. With the offenses thus classified:

- 68 are felonies
- 146 are misdemeanors
- 43 are summary offenses

In some instances a single section contains both a felony and a misdemeanor as illustrated by sections 307 and 318

(f) Makes uniform the method of fixing penalties by providing a fine of $1000 for each year of imprisonment which may be imposed so that where the maximum imprisonment is 1 year the maximum fine is $1000; where the maximum imprisonment is 2 years, the maximum fine is $2000; if 5 years, then $5000 and so on. In order to meet this standard of uniformity it was necessary to change many of the penalties provided for in existing law. These changes are summarized as follows:

- 247 maximum fines were increased
- 82 maximum prison terms were increased
- 53 maximum fines remain unchanged
- 189 maximum prison terms remain unchanged
- 18 maximum fines were decreased
- 47 maximum prison terms were decreased

Considering both the maximum fine and prison term as provided for each offense the change may be summarized as follows:

- for 82 offenses increase in both fine and prison term
- for 15 offenses decrease in both fine and prison term
- for 36 offenses both fine and prison term remain unchanged
- for 150 offenses increase in fine, prison term remains unchanged
- for 3 offenses decrease in fine, prison term remains unchanged
- for 7 offenses decrease in prison term, fine remains unchanged
- for 15 offenses increase in fine, decrease in prison term

The above tabulation takes into account the instances where numerous separate offenses listed in the present law have been consolidated into a single section, and relates the penalty in each case to the penalty provided for in the consolidated section of Senate Bill No. 243, (1949)

(g) There are no penalties that require fine and imprisonment. All penalties provide for fine or imprisonment or both. There are no minimum penalties, all penalties are maximum. A court may suspend sentence, or sentence from one minute or 1c or both, to the maximum penalty provided

(h) Abolishes imprisonment at separate or solitary confinement at hard labor and all modified forms thereof, and provides for "imprisonment" only (section 1111)

(i) Provides for restitution as part of the sentence where property has been stolen or converted (section 1112)

(j) Preserves all offenses now provided for whether at common law or by statute not repealed (section 1101)

(k) In all cases where imprisonment is provided for in Senate Bill No. 243 (1949), imprisonment is provided for by laws now in force.

(1) The following new sections have been included:

Section 409. Furnishing False or Libelous Statements. This permits the prosecution of one furnishing such statements whether or not such are published or broadcast.

Section 415. Loitering and Prowling at Night Time. This is intended to cover the "peeping-tom" offenders.

Section 516. Indecent Liberties. This is intended to cover offenses involving children.

Section 517. Contributing to Child's Delinquency. This offense now is defined only in the Juvenile Court Acts. This section makes the offense punishable whether or not the child affected is a ward of the Juvenile Court.

Section 608. Bribery in Athletic Contests. This section is intended to cover all persons involved in any attempt to "fix" sports or other events.

(m) Introduces into Pennsylvania law the "double finding" in first degree murder cases (section 701). The following is a brief statement of the penalty for murder in the first degree in Pennsylvania submitted by Legislative

Reference Bureau:

"From the earliest time until 1925, the penalty for murder in the first degree was death. In that year the penalty was made either death or life imprisonment, at the discretion of the jury trying the case, or, in the case of pleas of guilty, at the discretion of the court. At no time has the court had discretion to fix the penalty following conviction after plea of not guilty.

"The earliest statute under the Commonwealth was Section 15 of the Act of April 22, 1794, 3 Sm. L. 186, which provided:

'Every person convicted of murder of the first degree, his or her aiders, abettors and counsellors, shall suffer death by hanging by the neck.'

"The Act of 1794 was repealed by the Act of March 31, 1860, P. L. 427, and was reenacted in substantially the same language by section 75 of the Penal Code of March 31, 1860, P. L. 382. This was the law until the Act of May 14, 1925, P. L. 759, which amended section 75 of the Penal Code to read:

'Every person convicted of the crime of murder of the first degree shall be sentenced to suffer death in the manner provided by law, or to undergo imprisonment for life, at the discretion of the jury trying the case, which shall fix the penalty by its verdict. The court shall impose the sentence so fixed, as in other cases. In cases of pleas of guilty, the court, where it determines the crime to be murder of the first degree, shall, at its discretion, impose sentence of death or imprisonment for life.'

"It will be noted that the duty of determining the penalty in cases of pleas of guilty is placed on the court without specifying whether it is to be the court en banc or the trial judge who hears the evidence. In the case of Com. v. Pepperman, et al., 353 Pa. 373, 'the trial court, sitting en banc, heard testimony for the Commonwealth and for the defendants,' and fixed the penalty. This is probably the general practice where there is more than one judge.

"The Penal Code of June 24, 1939, P. L. 872, repeals this provision of the Penal Code of 1860 and its amendments and, in section 701 thereof, substantially reacts the provision to read as follows:

'Whoever is convicted of the crime of murder of the first degree is guilty of a felony and shall be sentenced to suffer death in the manner provided by law, or to undergo imprisonment for life, at the discretion of the jury trying the case which shall fix the penalty by its verdict. The court shall impose the sentence so fixed, as in other cases. In case of pleas of guilty, the court, where it determines the crime to be murder of the first degree, shall, at its discretion, impose sentence of death or imprisonment for life.'

Section 701 of Senate Bill No. 243 (1949) changes the law so that in first degree murder cases the jury will be required to render two findings. In its first finding the jury determines the question of guilt or innocence. If the jury returns a first degree verdict, evidence will then be received to enable the jury to determine whether the guilty accused should receive the death penalty or the lesser penalty of life imprisonment. After receiving this evidence the jury retires and returns with a finding of either death or life imprisonment.

This change is regarded as a desirable advance in the criminal law upon this subject.

JOINT STATE GOVERNMENT COMMISSION

Senate Bill No. 243

An Act to consolidate, amend and revise the penal laws of the Commonwealth

This bill contains the recommendations of the Joint State Government Commission for a revision and codification of the penal laws.

For the convenience of the members of the General Assembly who may wish to compare sections of the proposed act with the equivalent sections of the Act of 1939 P. L. 872 (existing law) and corresponding sections of the code proposed in 1947 (Senate Bill 306), the reference table produced below has been prepared.

Column (1) lists the sections of Senate Bill 243 (1949), column (2) lists the equivalent sections of Senate Bill 306 (1947), column (3), unless otherwise indicated, lists the equivalent sections of the Penal Code of 1939.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

To the Members of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Pursuant to Senate Concurrent Resolution Serial No. 129, Session of 1945; Act No. 55-A, Session of 1945; and Act No. 12-A, Session of 1947, there is herewith presented a report pertaining to the development of a financial highway program for the Commonwealth and the political subdivisions and to the development of an equitable basis for State aid to local governments for highway purposes.

In accordance with Act No. 4, Session of 1943, Section 1, the Commission created a "subcommittee" to facilitate and expedite the study of Pennsylvania's state and local highway financing.

On behalf of the Commission, the cooperation of the members of the subcommittee is gratefully acknowledged.

SUMMARY OF FINDINGS

I. The local governments of Pennsylvania have traditionally occupied a place of importance in road and street administration. (See Section I.)

II. Under the present system of highway management in Pennsylvania, the second-class townships are responsible for a system of roads which contains:

The largest single share of road mileage—45.5% of total road and street mileage in Pennsylvania. (See Section II.)

The smallest proportionate amount of improved mileage—29.61% of total second-class township mileage. (See Section II.)

The smallest proportionate amount of high type improved mileage—0.47% of total second-class township mileage. (See Section II.)

III. In second-class townships both expenditures per mile of locally maintained road and assessed valuation per mile of locally maintained road are less than in other jurisdictions. (See Section II.)

IV. In the United States roads and highways are administered as follows: by the state; by the state and the counties; and by the state and the local subdivisions including or excluding counties. The system of highway administration in Pennsylvania is substantially of the same form as those systems in such states as New York, Illinois and Ohio. (See Section III.)

V. Change from the present system of highway administration would disrupt well established Pennsylvania home rule features.

SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS

The Joint State Government Commission recommends that:

I. State aid to cities, boroughs, incorporated towns, first-class townships and second-class townships be placed on a permanent basis.

II. The roads of second-class townships be classified on the basis of use and function.

III. A Local Unit Road Superintendent be appointed by the Secretary of Highways for each county or counties having not less than 400 miles of local-rural road to act in an administrative and technical advisory capacity to local authorities, and to facilitate the availability of heavy equipment.

IV. Two types of permanent state grants—"basic grants" and "supplemental grants"—from the Motor License Fund to be made available:

"Basic grants" in the amount of $400 per mile per year to cities, boroughs, incorporated towns, and first-class townships and in the amount of $120 per mile per year to second-class townships to be used for purposes authorized by existing law.

"Supplemental grants" for construction, reconstruction, resurfacing and surface maintenance to second-class townships for such roads classified as primary, not exceeding 50 per cent of the cost of the work, provided however, that the "supplemental grant" for a biennial period to any one township shall not exceed one-half the "basic grant" for that period.

Assuming that all jurisdictions would claim their grants in full, the annual cost to the Commonwealth of both types of grants, based on mileages as of January 1, 1948, would be as follows:

|---|------------------------|
| Cities, Boroughs, Towns, and First-Class Townships @ $400 per mile | $ 5,107,836.00 |
| Second-Class Townships | |
| Basic Grant @ $120 per mile | 5,460,289.20 |
| Supplemental Grant—Not more than one-half the basic grant | 2,730,144.60 |
| Total | $13,298,269.80 |
| Current Commonwealth Allocations | $10,000,000.00 |
| Net Additional Commonwealth Allocations | $ 3,298,269.80 |

SECTION I

The History of Highways in Pennsylvania

Analysis of the historical development of highway administration in Pennsylvania shows that local governments have always taken an active part in road affairs while the role of the State has been a changing one.

Before the coming of the English, little attention was paid to road building in Pennsylvania. The early Dutch and Swedish settlers of this area traveled mainly by boat on the rivers and creeks of the territory. However, in 1674 Governor Andros (who was appointed by the Duke of York) ordered that ways between the towns along the Delaware river be made passable, and he charged the magistrates of the courts with the performance of this duty. The magistrates, in turn, either ordered the landowners along the ways to open that part of the route passing through their respective properties or appointed overseers to direct the work. Labor was supplied by a member from every family in each overseer's district. These first roads were no more than widenings of existing horsepaths, and no payment was made for the land thus used.

William Penn early directed that care be taken of the roads and highways, and that they be made straight and commodious. In order to make allowance for roads in the territory, six acres of land were given free with every one hundred acres granted (purchased). Although the law which made this provision was repealed in 1733, the custom long continued.

Penn's Frame of Government vested the power of appointing roads and highways in the Governor and the Provincial Council. However, in practice all except the most important routes were laid out by order of the justices of the county courts. This practice was legalized by the General Road Law of 1700 which empowered the justices to lay out all roads except King's Highways and Public Roads. This law also directed that the value of improved land taken for roads be appraised and that payment therefor be made out of county funds. Nevertheless, the making and maintenance of all roads, King's Highways as well as other roads, was, with few exceptions, entirely the responsibility of the local governments. Even in certain of these exceptions (which were made for special reasons) the manner in which the Colony's road funds were expended was left to the local authorities. Thus, work was usually supervised by township overseers of highways who were responsible to the county courts, and compulsory road service was customarily used.

In 1762, the General Road Law of 1700 was amended. Township supervisors of highways, who were elected by the people, replaced the overseers who had been appointed by the courts. These supervisors were given the power to levy taxes for road purposes. The financial burden for all highways within their respective limits was thus placed almost entirely upon the townships. It is significant that this amendment made the first provision for these localities to levy taxes for road purposes, and although, by this act, requirements for compulsory road service were abandoned, "working out" the road tax was permitted at the option of the localities.

By 1785, several important highways had been opened and were in use. The Bristol and York Roads connected Philadelphia with New York, and the Great Southern Road led from Philadelphia to Wilmington and Baltimore. To the west were the Old Conestoga Road to the Susquehanna, the Lancaster Road (which to a great extent replaced the Old Conestoga after 1733), and the Military Road toward the Ohio (which extended westward from Carlisle through Shippensburg and Bedford).

In 1785, the State's passive role in road affairs began to change to an increasingly active one. Trade from the western counties of Pennsylvania, and from the Ohio and Mississippi valleys beyond Pittsburgh, had begun to move out of the State, and it was thought that good roads across Pennsylvania would both secure this trade for Philadelphia and encourage immigrants to settle in Pennsylvania.

This policy of increased activity on the part of the State government took four distinct forms and continued until 1845. The State appropriated funds for roads which were expended under the supervision of State officers; it made grants to counties to aid them in road building; it continued the policy of laying out roads and ordered them made at the expense of the localities; and, it chartered turnpike companies and encouraged them by subscription to the capital stock. The first State highway was provided for in 1785, and in a few years more State highways were made. By 1791, large numbers of appropriations were being made for roads, and until 1820 the volume of such appropriations was quite great. By 1821, 1,807 miles of turnpikes had been built and 146 turnpike companies had been authorized. By 1831, the State had subscribed in the stock of the turnpike companies to the amount of $2,042,759; by 1832 about 2,400 miles of road had been constructed.

Among the more important roads opened between 1785 and 1845 were the State highways from Cumberland County to Pittsburgh and from the Lehigh Water Gap to Northumberland County on the Susquehanna, the Lancaster turnpike (the first important improved road in America) and the Cumberland Road (a National Road started in 1811 but later taken over by the states).

Canals, in the 1830's, and railroads, a decade later, began to supersede highways as the principal means of transportation, and the interest of the State government shifted to these new systems. The responsibility for the construction and maintenance of State highways again began to fall on the local governments, and the several thousand miles of privately owned turnpike also became a local responsibility through condemnation, abandonment, and sale. As the predominant responsibility for roads gradually developed upon the localities, the State government entered another passive phase in road affairs which was to last for almost 60 years.

The movement for good roads which became nation-wide in extent during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries brought a trend toward increased centralization of highway affairs which was in marked contrast to the preceding pattern of decentralized road responsibility. In 1903 legislative provision was made in Pennsylvania for State aid and cooperation with counties and townships in the improving of roads. A State department of highways was created which acted in an advisory and supervisory capacity although having no power to perform road work. The State department of highways was reorganized and made responsible for the actual construction and maintenance of certain roads in 1911 when the Sproul Act called for the transfer to the State of 8,835 miles of township roads on 296 important routes. Financial aid to localities for certain roads and streets was continued on a matching basis. In subsequent years the legislature steadily added mileage to the State system, and by 1923 the department of highways was responsible for 12,750 miles of roads.

Important steps in the process of centralization were taken in 1929 and 1931. In 1929, the State not only took over 631 miles of county and township roads and 2,127 county bridges on State roads but also assumed responsibility for the maintenance of borough streets forming continuation of State highway routes. The capacity of thousands of miles of township roads had become overtaxed by the traffic which had increased in volume and changed in character, and many townships were burdened with high road tax levies. Thus, in order that the localities might not be greatly handicapped by lack of adequate road development, or by undue tax burdens, there resulted in 1931 the assumption by the State of 20,156 miles of second-class township roads—designated as State rural roads. Certain city streets which formed connecting links in the State system were also taken over for construction and maintenance by the State.

In the years since 1931, many miles of city and borough streets and county and township roads have been added to the State system. By May 16, 1948, there were 40,942.76 miles of State roads, of which 14,612.95 miles are classified as State Highways, and 26,329.81 miles are classified as Rural Roads. The local governments were responsible, on January 1, 1948, for 58,272 miles of roads and streets, of which 45,502.41 miles were second-class township roads, 1,641.74 miles were first-class township roads, 5,569.39 miles were borough streets, and 5,558.46 miles were city streets. In addition counties administered about 826 miles of highways.

Although the direct responsibility of the State for highways increased steadily, aid to the subdivisions was continued. In order to provide better maintenance and reduce local taxes, the responsibility for the maintenance and repair of second-class township roads was transferred to the State department of highways as of January 1, 1934, and it was not until 1939 that responsibility for this work was returned to the townships. Since this return, biennial appropriations for local road purposes have been regularly distributed to the second-class townships on the basis of local mileage. Since 1945, regular biennial appropriations of the same type have been made to cities, boroughs, incorporated towns and first-class townships. The counties, which have received one-half cent per gallon of the liquid fuels tax since 1921, have also provided aid from these funds for road purposes to their component civil divisions.

Thus, the State, which now assumes direct responsibility for the highways of major inter-state and intra-state importance which comprise about 41 per cent of all roads and streets within the State, also provides financial aid to all localities which administer roads and streets within their jurisdictions.

SECTION II

The Present System of Highway Management in Pennsylvania

1. The Division of Road Responsibility

The responsibility for roads, streets, and bridges in Pennsylvania is shared by the State, the counties and the other local subdivisions. The State assumes responsibility for the roads and streets composing highways of major inter-state and intra-state importance. The counties administer many bridges, and in thirteen cases also exercise control over certain roads of county-wide importance.¹ The cities, boroughs, incorporated towns and townships administer the remaining roads and streets within their jurisdictions. Under this division of responsibility 86.4% of all road and street mileage is administered by the State and second-class townships (40.9% and 45.5% respectively) while 13.6% of the total is the responsibility of the counties, cities, boroughs, incorporated towns, and first-class townships (see Table 1).

In general, the amount and type of improved mileage in road and street systems is indicative of both the financial ability of the administering governments and the need for improved types of surfaces occasioned by volumes and types and traffic. In Pennsylvania, there are marked variations in the relative amounts of improved and unimproved mileage in the systems of controlling jurisdictions (see Table 2). In early 1947, the second-class townships as a group had but 29.61% of their total mileage improved, while all other groups had more than 75% of their total mileage improved. High types of improved mileage accounted for the major portion of all road mileage in the State, the counties, and the cities systems. In first-class townships and in boroughs and towns there were relatively greater amounts of high-type improved mileage than light-type improved mileage although in these cases high-type improved mileage was less than 50% of total road mileage. Only 0.47% of the mileage of the second-class townships was high-type improved mileage.

2. The Financial Responsibility for Roads

The State system of highways and roads in Pennsylvania is financed from the Motor License Fund. The receipts of this fund are primarily from highway-user imposts but also include construction and maintenance contributions, interest and miscellaneous revenue, and other receipts.² From this fund are paid the highway expenses and other expenses incident to the highway function of the State.³

The road and street systems of the local governments are financed from local levies which are primarily of a general nature and from State-aids allocated for road purposes. Counties receive one-half cent per gallon of the liquid fuels tax which is distributed among them in the ratio that the average return made during the three preceding years to each county bears to the average amount returned to all counties for the three preceding years. The second-class townships currently receive an appropriation from the Motor License Fund of $10,000,000 for the calendar years 1948 and 1949 which is divided among them in the ratio that the locally-maintained road mileage of each second-class township bears to the total locally-maintained road mileage of all second-class townships. Cities, boroughs and towns, and townships of the first class receive a similar $10,000,000 appropriation for 1948 and 1949 from the Motor License Fund which is also divided on the basis of the ratio of the locally-maintained mileage of each unit to the total locally-maintained mileage of all units.

THE STATE SYSTEM

The expenditures of the Department of Highways in the fiscal year ending May 31, 1948, reached a new high of $122,265,740.39 (see Table 3). This was over $34,000,000 greater than the amount for the preceding year and almost $41,000,000 more than the 1938 expenditure of $81,430,674.60. The major portion of this increase is in the construction and reconstruction expenditure category which has risen more rapidly since the close of the war than other types of road expenditures. For the first time since 1943, construction and reconstruction expenditures in 1948 accounted for more than 50 per cent of the total. The rise in expenditures for highways is mainly attributable to (1) unprecedented volumes of travel, (2) the demands of highway work deferred during the war period and (3) the increased costs of the present period.

THE SYSTEMS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

The amounts and relative importance of road and street expenditures of the local governments vary widely.

In counties and cities, highway expenditures constitute a much smaller percentage of total governmental expenditures than in boroughs and towns, first-class townships and second-class townships (see Table 4). In the city and county of Philadelphia, highway expenditures, including street lighting, accounted for only 9.83% of total governmental expenditures in 1945, while in second-class townships, they constituted 81.03% of total governmental expenditures.

Expenditures per mile of locally-maintained road are usually higher in urban than in rural areas. In 1945, expenditures per mile of road of all second-class townships were 7.0% of the per mile expenditures of all cities, 13.5% of those of all boroughs and incorporated towns, and 18.8% of those of all first-class townships.

The financial capacity of local governments places limits on expenditures for locally-maintained roads. Assessed valuation of real property per mile of locally-maintained road is an approximate measure of the capacities of local governments.

A comparison of the assessed valuations of real property per mile of locally-maintained roads and streets for 1946 shows that the capacity of cities was above that of boroughs, incorporated towns and first-class townships, while the capacity of second-class townships was below that of all other groups (see Table 5). Second-class townships as a group had about 3.04% the per mile capacity of cities, 8.95% that of boroughs and incorporated towns, and 6.39% that of first-class townships.

SECTION III

Systems of Highway Administration and Their Application to Highway Management in Pennsylvania

1. Systems of Highway Administration

Analysis of the distribution of road responsibility between state and local governments in the United States indicates that there are three types of highway administrative systems. The responsibility for virtually Highways (exclusive of city streets which are not integral parts of highway systems) may be held entirely at the state level, may be shared by the state and county levels, or may extend from the level of the state to that of the local subdivisions (including or excluding counties). For convenience of reference, these systems may be termed state, state and counties, and state and local subdivisions systems. States such as Delaware and North Carolina are in the first category. Examples of states in the second category are Michigan and Indiana. Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, Connecticut and Ohio are examples of the third classification.

The range of distribution of road responsibility is quite large (see Table 6). In the ten selected states mentioned above, the percentage of total highways (exclusive of city streets which are not integral parts of highway systems) under state control ranged from 9.06% in Michigan to 100% in Delaware and North Carolina, the percentage under county control in states having county mileage from .95% in Pennsylvania to 90.94% in Michigan, and the percentage under town or township control in states having such mileage from 47.56% in Ohio to 89.57% in Massachusetts.

The revenue policies incident to highway financing in a given state are often determined to a great extent by the system of highway management used. Increased centralization may cause increased dependence for road funds on revenues received from highway users, while more decentralized systems may derive important portions of their funds for the roads of local subdivisions from more general levies such as property taxes. The support of state highway systems is usually derived primarily from user-revenues while the support of local systems is usually derived from general levies supplemented by aid from the state governments.

In many states, direct state-aid is extended to all jurisdictions responsible for roads. State participation may be on a permanent or a temporary basis and may be made by either or both of two different methods. That is, stipulated percentages of certain revenues and/or fixed dollar amounts may be allocated to different types of jurisdictions.

2. The Application of Systems of Highway Administration to Pennsylvania.

Since governmental systems of highway management are partly determined by population and economic factors, systems prevailing in some states are not always readily transferrable to other states.

STATE ADMINISTERED AND FINANCED SYSTEM
(Used in Delaware and North Carolina)

Under this plan, rural roads not at present in the State system would become the responsibility of the Commonwealth. These rural roads consist of second-class township roads, county roads, and those roads and streets of first-class townships and boroughs which are deemed essentially rural. The inclusion of second-class township and county roads would add over 46,000 miles to the State system, placing a total of more than 87,000 miles of highways under state control or about 87% of all roads and streets within the State. If the streets and roads of small boroughs and certain first-class townships were also incorporated into the state system, the mileage would be further increased by more than 1,000 miles.⁴

Under this system, the Commonwealth would become responsible for the planning and laying out of new roads and streets in the smaller jurisdictions, as well as for the construction and maintenance of these roads and the structures thereon.

Assuming continuation of present levels of road service, this increase in the size of Pennsylvania's highway system would increase the expenditures from the Motor License Fund by about $12,000,000 annually.⁵ Under this plan, subventions to urban units would be continued.

The bulk of the local savings consequent upon the transfer of highways would accrue to second-class townships which would be able to reduce their average tax rates from five mills⁶ to approximately 1.2 mills.⁷ Counties, too, would have some savings, primarily in bridge construction and bridge maintenance, because comparatively few counties in the Commonwealth maintain road mileage. However, the counties and second-class townships would continue to have annual highway debt service costs of about $10,000,000 and $1,300,000 respectively.⁸

By removing the road building and road maintenance functions, which accounted for 76% of second-class township budgets in 1946,⁹ the application of the state plan to Pennsylvania would virtually eliminate the 1,514 second-class townships as operating units.

STATE-COUNTIES SYSTEM

(Used in Michigan and Indiana, Among Other States)

Under this plan, rural roads not at present in the state system would become the responsibility of the counties. Establishment of a county unit in Pennsylvania with the inclusion of present county and second-class township roads would result in one unit—Philadelphia—having no mileage, eleven more counties having less than 300 miles of road, forty counties having more than 300 and less than 1,000 miles of road, and fifteen counties having more than 1,000 miles (see Table 7).

Under this system, the costs of construction and maintenance of second-class township roads and bridges would be assumed by the counties. In 1945, this total cost was $9,356,494, of which $3,463,940 were state-aid funds and $329,386 were county-aid funds. In 1946, the total cost was $11,026,148, of which $4,249,438 were state-aid funds and $637,154 were county-aid funds.¹⁰

The principal effects upon the local governments of Pennsylvania would be the same as under the state administered and financed system.

STATE-LOCAL SUBDIVISIONS SYSTEM

(Used in New York, Illinois, Ohio, and Pennsylvania among Other States)

Pennsylvania uses the state-local subdivisions system of highway management. As highway needs have changed in Pennsylvania, the Commonwealth, under this system, has gradually assumed responsibility for roads and streets which have become of major inter-state and intra-state importance. Local governments have retained responsibility for roads and streets of primarily local importance, but are aided by the state in the financing of work performed on their road and street systems.

The provision of improved standards of service in local road and street systems may be encouraged legislatively by action designed to improve state-local highway relations, provide needed financial aid and technical guidance, and encourage planning and operating efficiencies.

SECTION IV

Recommendations for State-Local Highway Administration and Financing

Legislative provision for technical and financial aid to jurisdictions responsible for roads will facilitate the planning and improvement of road, street and highway systems throughout the Commonwealth without destroying traditional home rule features.

1. Permanent State Aid in Fixed Per Mile Amounts to Cities, Boroughs, Incorporated Towns, First-Class Townships and Second-Class Townships

Increasingly effective planning at local levels would be facilitated through the use of permanent grants in fixed per mile amounts. This type of grant would make it possible for local governments to plan on a long-range basis. In addition, the establishment of a permanent system would benefit the Commonwealth by making unnecessary the exacting and continually changing computations used for the distribution of a fixed total amount on a local mileage basis.

2. The Need for Classification of Second-Class Township Roads

Since the second-class township system includes both community-service and property-access roads, the classification of these roads as primary and secondary would facilitate local planning. It is recommended that primary roads be limited to 50% of the locally maintained second-class township mileage, and that the selection be made on the basis of:

Volume of traffic—number of commercial vehicles passenger cars daily;

Character of traffic—used as school bus routes, mail routes and milk or dairy routes, or affording access to churches and other community services.

3. Technical Aid and Heavy Equipment

Increased efficiency in operation and planning can be achieved through the appointment by the Secretary of Highways of local unit road superintendents. To act effectively the local unit road superintendents should have the following duties:

1. Act as an advisor in technical and administrative matters to local authorities.

2. Assist local authorities in the obtaining of heavy equipment when needed, either from the Department of Highways or elsewhere, on a rental basis.

3. Approve all construction and maintenance projects prior to the payment of either supplemental or basic grants.

One superintendent should be provided for each county or counties having not less than 400 miles of local rural road; for purposes of assignment of a local unit road superintendent, two or more counties may combine.

The salaries and expenses of the local unit road superintendent shall be paid by the Department of Highways; in addition, the Department of Highways shall make available adequate office facilities.

Payments on account of salaries, expenses, and office facilities shall not be charged against any local allocation.

4. Two Types of Permanent State Grants to be Made Available from the Motor License Fund

"Basic grants" in the amount of $400 per mile per year to cities, boroughs and towns and first-class townships and, in the amount of $120 per mile per year to second-class townships, not only would provide approximately the present level of aid but also would allow for continuous planning because of the features of permanency in amount and duration.

"Supplemental grants" to second-class townships for roads classified as primary would provide for improved roads and compensate to some extent for generally low taxable capacities. The "supplemental grants" should be for the construction, reconstruction, resurfacing and surface maintenance only for types of roads classified as improved by the Department of Highways and should not exceed 50 per cent of the cost of the work, provided, however, that the "supplemental grant" for a biennial period to any one second-class township shall not exceed one-half of the "basic grant" for that period.

The approximate annual cost to the Commonwealth of these grants, assuming mileages as of January 1, 1948, would be as follows:

|---|-----------------|
| Cities, Boroughs, Towns, and First-Class Townships @ $400 per mile | $5,107,836.00 |
| Second-Class Townships: | |
| Basic grant @ $120 per mile | 5,460,289.20 |
| Supplemental grant—not more than one-half the basic grant | 2,730,144.60 |
| Total | $13,298,269.80 |
| Current Commonwealth Allocation ... | $10,000,000.00 |
| Net Additional Commonwealth Costs .. | $3,298,269.80 |

* These counties and their county road mileages as of January 1, 1947 are:

| County | Miles | County | Miles |
|------------------|--------|--------------------|-------|
| Allegheny | 572.00 | Luzerne | 90.44 |
| Beaver | 4.90 | Montgomery | 81.66 |

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

To the Members of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Pursuant to House Resolution No. 58, we submit herewith a report dealing with the problems of juvenile delinquency and child welfare in Pennsylvania.

In accordance with Act No. 4, Session of 1943, Section 1, the Commission created a "subcommittee" to facilitate and expedite the survey of juvenile delinquency in Pennsylvania.

On behalf of the Commission the cooperation of the members of the subcommittee is gratefully acknowledged.

WELDON B. HEYBURN, Chairman.

SUMMARY OF FINDINGS

I. Juvenile misbehavior, as reflected in juvenile court statistics, increased during the war years and since the war's termination has shown a decline.

During and after the war, extreme misbehavior, as reflected in court records, has been more pronounced in metropolitan areas than in suburban areas. Between 1940 and 1945, juvenile cases brought to the attention of the juvenile courts in Allegheny and Philadelphia Counties increased from 1.30% of the total child population to 2.03%. In 1947 this percentage dropped to 1.51%. Similarly, cases adjudged delinquent as percentages of child population in the juvenile courts of Allegheny and Philadelphia counties increased from .67% in 1940 to .95% in 1945 and decreased to .77% in 1947. In the suburban counties of Berks and Montgomery, cases called to the attention of the juvenile court increased from .28% in 1940 to .52% in 1944 and dropped back to .20% in 1947. The number of cases adjudged delinquent in Berks and Montgomery Counties increased from .24% of the child population in 1940 to .48% in 1944 and dropped back to .19% in 1947.

The sample counties, upon which the above statistics are based, represent approximately 39% of the total population of Pennsylvania and about 37% of the child population.

II. Major offenses are relatively more prevalent in suburban than in metropolitan areas. In 1945, 52% of the offenses before the juvenile courts of Berks and Montgomery Counties were major offenses (stealing, injury to person, sex offenses), whereas but 43% of the offenses before the juvenile courts of Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties were in the comparable category.

III. The available data suggest that 67% of the juvenile delinquents who come to the attention of the juvenile courts are below the age of sixteen.

IV. The amount appropriated for institutions to which youthful offenders are committed was $7,871,127.82 for the biennium 1947-49. It should be noted that these institutions accept juvenile offenders other than those under the jurisdiction of the juvenile courts. Some of the institutions accept youthful offenders up to the age of twenty-five.

V. Youthful offenders convicted of crime by a criminal court are sometimes committed to the State penitentiaries rather than to institutions for juveniles.

VI. The number of repeaters in institutions for youthful offenders and in penitentiaries is relatively great. For example, in 1947, the Pennsylvania Institution for Delinquent (Huntingdon) had 68% repeaters. In the Pennsylvania Industrial School at White Hill, 48% of the inmates were repeaters; the Pennsylvania Industrial Home for Women, 56%; the Eastern State Penitentiary, 73%; and the Western State Penitentiary, 60%.

VII. The larger school districts such as Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and many of the school districts coterminous with third-class cities have child guidance clinics to aid maladjusted children.

VIII. The states of California (1941), Wisconsin (1947), Minnesota (1947) and Massachusetts (1948) have established youth authorities. It is a major function of these authorities to aid in the adjustment of juvenile delinquents who are referred to them by the courts. The length of time a juvenile delinquent remains under the jurisdiction of the youth authority is determined by the authority.

IX. There is apparent need of coordination between the various agencies which handle young people once they get into trouble and, further, between the treatment agencies, and agencies serving youth including the home and the school.

X. In the prevention field, there is need for coordination between home, school and the groups dealing with recreation, health, welfare, and law enforcement. While some localities in Pennsylvania have set up youth advisory groups to function in their own communities, a State youth authority would serve as a coordinating body for those already in existence and encourage the formation of others, as well as provide specialists to those communities having no permanent staff.

XI. Juvenile behavior problems should be treated as individual cases.

SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS

The Joint State Government Commission recommends that:

1. A Youth Conservation Board similar to the agencies established by California, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Massachusetts, be established in Pennsylvania.

II. Two experimental forestry camps be established under the jurisdiction of the Department of Welfare for the accommodation of youthful offenders whose rehabilitation can be furthered by assignment to such camps rather than to currently available institutions.

III. A youth guidance clinic be established in the office of each county superintendent of schools.

IV. Local school districts be encouraged to make their facilities available to child and adult groups after school hours and during vacation periods.

SECTION I

INTRODUCTION

House Resolution No. 58, agreed to June 4, 1947, directs the Joint State Government Commission to "list, study, and appraise the problems relating to juvenile delinquency, namely, its underlying causes, the adequacy of existing governmental and private agencies to prevent juvenile delinquency, and measures which will conserve and improve the conditions of youth in the Commonwealth."

In accordance with the above mandate, the Subcommittee on Juvenile Delinquency and Child Welfare of the Joint State Government Commission surveyed the available literature on the subject and held a public hearing in Harrisburg on February 11, 1948. At the hearing, lay and professional groups were afforded an opportunity to present such facts and views as in their judgment bear pertinently upon the problem under review.

The basic facts constituting the problem of Juvenile delinquency are detailed in the subsequent sections.

SECTION II

Juvenile Misbehavior: Extent of the Problem

The number of cases of children in trouble with courts and other authorities increased steadily from 1940 to an all-time high in 1945. In 1946, the number of juvenile cases dropped sharply and, in 1947, the figures approached those of prewar years.

These statements are broad interpretations of the conditions shown by the records of two metropolitan (Allegheny and Philadelphia) counties and two suburban (Montgomery and Berks) counties for which figures on juvenile misbehavior were available and roughly comparable.

In considering these figures as representative, however, several things should be kept in mind: first, that they show only the misbehavior of the so-called "aggressive" child; and second, that they are based on court records which do not necessarily reflect the total volume of juvenile misbehavior because only those cases referred to the courts are entered on the records, while many are dealt with otherwise and never reach the records, and because they show total number of cases, without indicating those in which the same child is involved several times.

1. The "Aggressive" Child

Observers of juvenile misbehavior differentiate between the "withdrawn" and the "aggressive" child.

Public opinion has been concerned primarily with the so-called "aggressive" child, since it is usually he who runs afoul of established authority and since the legal machinery for dealing with juvenile delinquents has been designed primarily to deal with such behavior patterns. By and large, it is the "aggressive" child who is labeled a delinquent when his misbehavior becomes a matter of official record. In this connection, however, it should be pointed out that the designation "delinquent" covers a multitude of behavior types ranging from truancy and malicious mischief to theft, burglary, assault, sexual offenses and even homicide.

In view of the fact that the public at large is concerned primarily with the problems presented by the behavior patterns of "aggressive" children, this report is confined to that subject.

2. Source of Information on Juvenile Misbehavior

Accurate knowledge of the extent of juvenile misbehavior is lacking. The only statistics which shed light upon the problem are the court records and the compilations of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

For the purpose in hand, the compilations of the Federal Bureau of Investigation seem inadequate because (1) the compilations are based exclusively upon fingerprint records, and (2) the juveniles charged with criminal offenses and fingerprinted represent but a small fraction of the juveniles charged with misbehavior.

In connection with court records, it should be noted that they do not necessarily reflect the total volume of juvenile misbehavior nor the total number of juveniles who have been dealt with by the juvenile courts. The total volume of juvenile misbehavior is not shown completely by court statistics because only those cases referred to the judicial authorities are entered on their records. The number of cases which come to the attention of the courts, in turn, depends upon the procedure of such agencies as the school, the police, public and private youth-serving bureaus and clinics, and the attitude of the community at large.

To the extent that procedures and attitudes differ from community to community, court statistics as measures of juvenile misbehavior are not, strictly speaking, comparable. Again the statistics of a given court for an extended period of time may not be comparable because procedures and attitudes within its community may change with time. Furthermore, court statistics do not necessarily reflect the number of juvenile delinquents because the courts deal with cases, and the same child may appear several times before a court within the time covered by the report.

3. Pattern of Juvenile Misbehavior in Pennsylvania

In Pennsylvania, roughly comparable juvenile court statistics are available but of limited coverage. Tables I and II present such statistics for two metropolitan and two suburban counties above mentioned. These counties combined represent approximately 39%¹ of Pennsylvania's total population and about 37%² of the child population.

Inspection of Table I, Column two, shows that the number of juvenile delinquency cases for Allegheny and Philadelphia Counties increased from 8,546 for the year 1940 to an all-time high of 12,655 for the year 1945 and then decreased to 8,916 by 1947. Similarly, the number of cases adjudged delinquent increased from 4,413 in 1940 to an all-time high of 5,898 in 1945 and decreased to 4,539 in 1947. Regarding the two columns, it may be noted that although total juvenile cases as well as the number of cases adjudged delinquent increased over the period under consideration, total cases increased at a more rapid rate than the number of cases adjudged delinquent.

The seriousness of the problem of juvenile misbehavior can not be approximated by merely inspecting the total number of cases and the number of cases adjudged delinquent. In order to make the two series meaningful, they must be related to total child population. Column four presents the number of children, ages five and one-half to seventeen inclusive, and columns five and six show the number of cases and the number adjudged delinquent, respectively, as percentages of the child population. Inspection of column five shows that in 1940 the number of cases before the juvenile courts of Allegheny County and Philadelphia County represented 1.30% of the child population. In 1945 the comparable percentage reached an all-time high of 2.03%; and in 1947, it dropped back to 1.51%.

Similarly, inspection of column six shows that in 1940 the number adjudged delinquent constituted .67% of the child population. In 1945, the number adjudged delinquent as a percentage of the child population reached an all-time high of .95%; and in 1947, it dropped back to .77%.

In other words, in 1947, only slightly more than three-quarters of one per cent of the child population was guilty of sufficiently serious misconduct to be adjudged delinquent by the juvenile courts.

Table II shows Juvenile Court cases and adjudications for Berks and Montgomery Counties combined.

It is interesting to compare columns five and six of Tables I and II respectively. Such comparison justifies the following generalizations:

(1) From the point of view of behavior pattern, the series for Allegheny and Philadelphia Counties, two predominantly metropolitan areas, and the series for Berks and Montgomery Counties, two suburban regions, are similar. All series rose markedly during the war and post-war periods and declined with the restoration of peace-time living conditions.

(2) Although the pattern of juvenile delinquency in metropolitan and suburban areas is similar, the extent of the problem, as reflected in court statistics, shows marked variations. For example, in 1940 the number of adjudications in the Juvenile Court of Allegheny County and the Juvenile Division of the Philadelphia Municipal Court constituted .67% of the child population. During the same year, the number of adjudications in the juvenile courts of Berks and Montgomery Counties constituted only .24% of the child population. In other words, in the metropolitan counties under review, juvenile delinquency was nearly three times as extensive as in the suburban counties.

Chart I presents a graphic comparison of the present of the child population adjudged delinquent in the metropolitan and the suburban counties.

CHART I

PERCENT OF CHILD POPULATION ADJUDGED DELINQUENT

Allegheny and Philadelphia Counties Combined 1940-47
Berks and Montgomery Counties Combined 1940-47

Tables III and IV show both number and percentage distribution of offenses committed by juveniles.

Comparison and analysis of Tables III and IV indicates the following tentative conclusions:

(1) On the basis of the tables, major offenses seem to be relatively more important in the suburban counties than in the metropolitan counties. For example, in 1945, major offenses accounted for 52% of the total offenses in Berks and Montgomery Counties and for but 43% of the total offenses in the metropolitan counties. However, this does not necessarily mean that juveniles in suburban counties are more apt to commit major crimes. The distribution is probably due in part to the fact that in suburban counties juvenile misbehavior is quite frequently deal with a rather informal manner and hence does not find its way into official statistics unless it approaches a greater degree of seriousness.

(2) Again, it may be observed that in both metropolitan and suburban counties the relative importance of major offenses decreased over the period from 1940 to 1945. For example, in 1940, major offenses constituted 77% of the total recorded juvenile offenses in Berks and Montgomery Counties. By 1945, this percentage had dropped to 52%. The comparable percentages for the metropolitan counties are 48% and 43% respectively.

In the light of the above evidence, it may be well to re-appraise the extent and gravity of the juvenile delinquency problem. If one takes the position that the minor offenses listed in Tables III and IV and graphically presented in Chart II are part and parcel of the process of growing up of the typical youngster, the magnitude of the juvenile "crime" problem is substantially reduced. For example, Table I shows that, in 1945, the child population of Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties combined was 622,835. Table III shows that 5,472 delinquents were guilty of major offenses. Therefore, the "crime" rate among juveniles was .89%. Applying the same reasoning to the suburban sample, a "crime" rate of .23% is obtained.

Chart II presents a graphic comparison of juvenile misbehavior measured in terms of major and minor offenses committed by juveniles in the counties under review.

SECTION III

Control of Juvenile Behavior in Pennsylvania Today

It may be generally agreed that the adequacy of the control of juvenile behavior in the home and in the school in large measure determines the volume and character of juvenile delinquency.

1. In the Home

The Wisconsin Joint Legislative Interim Committee on Juvenile Delinquency³ observes that juvenile misbehavior stems, among other causes, from broken homes caused by death, divorce, or employment of the mother, parental indifference and irresponsibility; drunken, immoral, or criminal parents; absence of religious and moral instruction in the home; insufficiency of family welfare services; and failure to train children for marriage and parenthood.

The importance of parental attitudes and behavior during the child's formative years is indicated in the following observation of the Philadelphia Municipal Court:

The lack of normal family life probably plays a more significant part in the delinquency of girls than of boys. The difficulties which bring girls into court are usually more serious in character and probably more clearly related to home conditions than are the difficulties of boys.

In 52% of the boys' cases but in only 32% of the girls' cases the children were living with both their own parents when referred to court. This difference between boys and girls is probably due to social factors. In only 19% of the boys' cases, but in 24% of the girls' cases, one or both parents were dead.

Of the boys who were living in their own homes with both their own parents married to each other and living together, 33% were probationed or committed as compared with 48% of those who came from broken homes. Fifty-four per cent of the girls from unbroken homes were probationed or committed as contrasted with 66% of those who came from broken homes.⁴

2. In the School

Pennsylvania law provides for compulsory school attendance of all children between the ages of eight and seventeen years.⁵ Under the circumstances, the behavior of children within this age bracket is under the joint control of the parents and the schools. The place of the home and the school in prevention is further emphasized by the Philadelphia Municipal Court which reports that 67% of the juvenile cases which come to the attention of its Juvenile Division are below the age of sixteen.⁶

The available evidence strongly suggests that the schools are an important control agency. For example, the Philadelphia Municipal Court reports that in 1946, 56% of the children whose cases were disposed of were attending school when referred to court and 22% of those referred were truants. However, only 28% of the juveniles attending school were adjudged delinquent, whereas 72% of the truants belonged in this category.⁷

In passing, it may be noted that the General Assembly of 1945 (Act No. 403, May 29, 1945, P. L. 1112) installed a new school subsidy system. Under the new system reimbursement depends upon the average daily membership in the public schools rather than the number of teachers employed by the schools. The available evidence indicates that this new system has gone a long way toward inducing school authorities to encourage pupils to continue in school.

According to the National Conference on Prevention and Control of Juvenile Delinquency the school's responsibility toward the delinquent or potential delinquent is fourfold:

(a) It should plan an adequate school program that fits the needs of all children and results in wholesome growth and development;

(b) it should identify those children who show signs of being susceptible to delinquent patterns of behavior and take proper preventive or remedial measures to insure better adjustments;

(c) it should work closely with parents and neighborhood leaders to assist them in better understanding of the individual child and help them remove any factors in the neighborhood inimical to child welfare;

(d) it should cooperate with all community agencies and resources in a coordinated plan, bringing their combined influence to play on the individual child in such a way that he will receive maximum help when he needs the experiences provided by a particular agency.⁸

3. In Existing Agencies

The larger school districts such as Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and many of the school districts coterminous with third-class cities have child guidance clinics which attempt to aid maladjusted children. However, guidance services are made available to only a limited extent in the rural regions. The establishment of a youth guidance clinic in the office of each county superintendent of schools would provide a more complete coverage of clinical services to children in outlying areas who do not, at present, receive the same benefits provided for children in urban areas.

It is estimated that a county guidance clinic could be effectively operated with a core staff consisting of a psychiatrist, psychologist, and a psychiatric social worker. In terms of present dollars value, the operation of such a clinic would cost approximately $15,000 per year and could service a pupil population of approximately five thousand. To provide the service indicated for every five thousand pupils in average daily membership in fourth-class school districts would cost approximately $1,643,000 per year.

The family and the school are concerned first with prevention; the police, the courts and correctional institutions deal initially with children who have already become delinquent; while rehabilitation is a joint project which must enlist the aid of all these and every other agency which serves youth.

4. In Law Enforcing Agencies

As regards law enforcing agencies, the United States Children's Bureau, in connection with its St. Paul experiment, has made the following observations:

A child's contacts with the law-enforcing agencies differ markedly from those with the school. . . . For many children the policeman is a friendly person in whose footsteps they intend to follow; for others he represents authority that restricts and confines, a force to be outwitted. . . . Most children . . . recognize the police as an integral part of their community. Relatively few children have any direct contacts with the courts or any occasion to see them as part of the community's law-enforcement structure. . . .

Our knowledge of behavior problems in children and of the early symptoms of maladjustment suggest that law-enforcing agencies are not in a position to identify problems at an early date. Their immediate responsibility is with children who show maladjustment by general incorrigibility and by violating laws and ordinances, or who are in need of protection.

They are not in a position to observe minor changes in attitude that may be the forerunners of more serious trouble. The problems coming to them will, in general, be of long standing and from older age groups. . . . Even when emphasis is placed on early identification, law enforcing agencies are not in a position to identify more than a few children when the earliest symptoms appear.⁹

A child may come into contact with law enforcing agencies on arrest or referral. A child who is "alleged" to be delinquent may come before the juvenile court upon petition of a parent, next friend, or citizen, or upon commitment by a magistrate, alderman, or justice of the peace when arrested for any offense other than murder. There is no preliminary hearing, but the juvenile court may make a preliminary inquiry, after which the child may be returned to his parents or guardian, or placed in the charge of a probation officer or in the custody of any appropriate association or society pending final disposition of the case.

a. Hearing of Juvenile Cases

A child or youth appearing in juvenile court is not heard on any specific charge but rather with respect to his peculiar behavior problem. Juvenile court cases are heard separately and without a jury. The delinquency of a child is determined on the basis of a court hearing with the aid of an investigation made by the probation department and the assistance of clinical services if such services are at the command of the court. A child is simply adjudged delinquent and does not receive the usual civil disabilities imposed by the criminal laws of the Commonwealth. The juvenile court may return the child to his own home or place him in a family home under the supervision of a probation officer, or it may commit the child to some appropriate institution or agency, or discharge a child from the care of the juvenile court or from the custody of any institution.

Youths who are under sixteen and who are being tried on a criminal charge other than murder must be heard in juvenile court. Transfer to the juvenile court is discretionary in the case of youths between sixteen and eighteen years of age. The judge of a juvenile court may certify to the district attorney the case of a child above fourteen years of age held for any offense, other than murder, which, in the case of an adult, would be punishable by imprisonment in the state penitentiary. No child under twelve may be committed to an industrial school or correctional institution unless, after the supervision of the child under the probation system, such action is determined to be in the best interests of the child and of the community. Children over sixteen may be committed to any State industrial school or home for the reformation of youths above the age of sixteen.¹⁰

The juvenile court law further provides:

No child under sixteen years of age, pending or after hearing before the juvenile court, shall be confined in any county jail, workhouse, police station, lockup, or other institution in which adults are confined. . . .

The county commissioners in each county shall provide, furnish, and heat a separate room or rooms, or a suitable building, to be used exclusively for the confinement of all children under sixteen years of age who may be in custody awaiting hearing in the juvenile court of the county, and shall provide for the maintenance and care of such children while in custody.^{10a}

When a juvenile is held in a detention place with facilities for medical, psychiatric, and psychological study, the diagnosis is made in the detention home. In the absence of such facilities, the probation officer takes the child to clinics working in cooperation with detention home staff members and juvenile court officers. The child also continues schooling and gets recreation in the detention home if it is equipped for the purpose, or he may be sent outside to school and for recreation when facilities are not available in the home.

Detention of juveniles is arranged for in a variety of ways. Of thirty-five counties reporting facilities, nineteen use a detention home, nine use approved children's homes, two use boarding homes, and five use a room in the county home or a separate room in the city hall.

3. Admission and Discharge Policies

There is no uniformity in admission and discharge policies in detention homes throughout the State. Some homes admit and discharge only through the juvenile court and its probation officers. Some admit through the police, magistrates and the court probation officers. Some receive children through private sources as well as through official sources. Detention homes in Pennsylvania have no uniform standards of administration. Some homes are under the administrative direction of the chief probation officer. Some have a superintendent in charge. Some are under the control of the sheriff. Some employ a matron. The equipment in experience and training of those in charge varies widely.

While the larger juvenile courts of Philadelphia County and Allegheny County have well established clinical services located in the detention homes with necessary staffs of physicians, psychiatrists, and psychologists, clinical services for the juvenile courts are lacking in most of Pennsylvania's counties. Berks County has placed clinical service at the disposal of the court which is financed jointly from public and private sources. A few other counties have followed the same practice. In the Harrisburg area, the federally supported Tri-County Child Guidance Clinic is available to the courts of the region. Courts in other parts of the State use physicians and psychiatrists of the State institutions who hold clinics periodically, usually once or twice a month.

c. State Institutions for Minors

At present there are four State institutions to which minors within the age limits of juvenile court jurisdiction are committed—Huntingdon Institution for Defective Delinquents over 15 years, White Hill Industrial School for Boys, Muncy Industrial Home for Women, and Morgantown Training School for both boys and girls. It is to be noted here that, in 1937, the General Assembly authorized the establishment of the Pennsylvania Industrial School at White Hill to replace the State industrial school located at Huntingdon.¹¹ Upon completion of the new institution at White Hill, the Huntingdon Industrial School was to become the Pennsylvania Institution for Defective Delinquents.¹² In this connection, the Ashe Committee, appointed by Governor Martin in 1944, made the following observation:

Until 1941, the school at Huntingdon continued as the only reformatory in the State. In that year, however, a new Pennsylvania Industrial School was opened at White Hill in Cumberland County. It is a large institution with a total capacity of 1,414. The legislature intended that the new reformatory replace the one at Huntingdon, with the latter institution becoming a school for defective delinquents. This has not been done, and both institutions continue to operate as reformatories.¹³

. . . We do not believe the Huntingdon institution to be proper institution for defectives of this State. In the first place, its capacity is twice as large as is needed; and, further, an institution for defective offenders should be basically of the farm type. The structure at Huntingdon can be more useful as a medium security prison. . . .¹⁴

The Pennsylvania Industrial School at White Hill receives male criminals between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five years not known to have been previously sentenced to any State penal institution.¹⁵ The Industrial Home for Women at Muncy receives females over the age of sixteen who have been convicted of a criminal offense.

The Pennsylvania Training School at Morganza receives delinquent boys and girls under twenty-one on commitment by the courts from the western district of the State.

The Glen Mills School, the Sleighton Farm School at Darlington, the Boys Industrial Home at Oakdale, and George Junior Republic at Grove City are State-aided private corporations and therefore have the legal right to refuse or accept any boy or girl committed by the juvenile court. The managers of Glen Mills and Sleighton Farm may receive, at their discretion, boys under twenty-one and girls under eighteen years of age respectively. The authority of the managers over inmates ceases when they reach twenty-one years of age. The Boys Industrial Home admits dependent, neglected, and incorrigible boys from eight to sixteen years of age on commitment by county juvenile courts, county commissioners, child welfare agencies, and parents. Authority over boys committed to this institution extends until they are eighteen. George Junior Republic accepts boys from ten to seventeen years of age committed principally by the courts of western Pennsylvania.

Costs and expenses for the maintenance of inmates at White Hill, Muncy, and Morganza are paid from the State appropriation, but the Commonwealth is reimbursed by the respective counties from which the inmates are committed. One-half the cost of maintaining children committed to State-aided institutions is borne by the county from which the child is received, and the remainder is paid from the State appropriation. The amount appropriated for institutions to which juvenile delinquents are committed was $7,871,127.82 for the biennium 1947-1949.

d. Admission and Classification

Under Pennsylvania's present system the penal and correctional institutions are mass custody establishments. In them are lumped first offenders, habitual offenders and sex deviates with children who are merely truants from school or impossible home situations. The sick and defective are grouped with the well; near feeble minded with the brilliant psychotic type; the dangerous with the trustworthy; boys of fifteen with men of twenty-nine and girls of sixteen with women as old as eighty. Each institution is under the direction of a separate board of trustees, classification programs differ and rehabilitation efforts are not coordinated.

e. Sentence and Probation

In Pennsylvania, juvenile institutions operate on the basis of an indeterminate sentence under the maximums set by statute. The indeterminate sentence permits the release of an offender as an administrative act. In the case of a child or youth committed by the juvenile court, discretion lies with that court; whereas the Parole Board exercises discretion in the case of an adult offender or a youth sentenced by a criminal court. Glen Mills, Sleighton Farm, and Morganza have their own parole officers who supervise juveniles released from these institutions. Boys released from the Boys Industrial Home and George Junior Republic are supervised by probation officers of the juvenile courts of the counties from which they were committed. With the exception of children and youths committed by the juvenile court, inmates released from Huntingdon, White Hill, and Muncy are supervised by parole officers of the State Parole Board.

4. Coordination Between Agencies Lacking

The facts reviewed above indicate that there is no coordination among the agencies which handle children and youths once they get into trouble; and, further, that there is no coordination between the treatment agencies and the home and school.

The need for coordination has been felt by various citizen groups. For example, referral plans have been instituted in Philadelphia County and Fayette County. The objective of these two programs is to obtain a better understanding of the child and his difficulties in order to bring about a more wholesome adjustment. Briefly, the Philadelphia plan operates through forty-nine organizations throughout the city to whom follow-up referrals are made of boys who have come in contact with the police either as a result of arrest or complaint. In Fayette County, juvenile court delinquents, school pre-delinquents, and home incorrigibles are referred to a Juvenile Committee representing law enforcement agencies, civic groups, professional and business men, churches, and veterans' organizations. In April 1947, it was reported that the Uniontown Committee had enrolled more than 430 youngsters of whom only thirteen had been returned to juvenile court for institutional placement since the committee's organization in March 1943.¹⁸

5. Institutional Treatment

The correctional activities in institutions for the most part, have not proved effective rehabilitation measures. For example, in 1947, the Pennsylvania Institution for Defective Delinquents (Huntingdon) had 67.9% repeaters. In the Pennsylvania Industrial School at White Hill 48.4% of the inmates were repeaters. In the Pennsylvania Industrial Home for Women 55.9% were repeaters; the Eastern Penitentiary, 73.3%; and the Western Penitentiary, 55.9%. Thus it is evident that piecemeal measures are inadequate and that the separate phases of a preventive and correctional program must be integrated into a coordinated approach to the whole problem.

SECTION IV

Remedial Legislation

1. Youth Authority

Effective control of juvenile misbehavior calls for coordinated action at both the State and local levels.

In recent years, the states of California, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Massachusetts have led the way in creating youth authorities to administer correctional programs at the state level and systematically to aid all counties to develop and strengthen the correctional and preventive programs at the local level.

One of the basic principles behind the youth authority idea is the achievement of continuity of treatment from the time the court commits the child, to the final replacement of that child in society.

In treating children, it is generally agreed that the emphasis should be put on rehabilitation rather than punishment. This, the youth authority could do, with treatment applied on an individual basis.

It is the general consensus of opinion that the majority of youthful offenders can be reclaimed.

2. Model Plan

The American Law Institute, in 1940, drafted a model plan for the treatment of youthful offenders.

Briefly, the plan suggested by the model draft provides for the creation of a Youth Correction Authority, to which the courts would commit youthful offenders who need State care. The authority then would exercise complete control over the child through all the steps from commitment to final replacement in society. These steps can be broken down into three major categories:

1. Diagnosis
2. Treatment and training
3. Reestablishment in the community

The plan calls for the establishment of a three-member board operating on a State-wide basis to which the courts would commit offenders under twenty-one years of age. If a death sentence were involved, the case would not go to the youth authority.

The three-member board would first determine why the offender is an offender, and on the basis of diagnosis, proceed with the treatment of the child with a view to his rehabilitation and eventual reestablishment in the community.

The Youth Authority plan also suggests a survey team consisting of specialists in juvenile police work, probation, recreation, community organization, health, child guidance, welfare, and attendance. This team could be sent into a county at the invitation of the county board of supervisors, the judge of the juvenile court, the head of the school system, or other public and private groups serving children one way or another.

The survey group would try to make all agencies serving youth in every locality realize their interdependence and to develop methods of coordinating their activities.

3. Summary

Classification and segregation, adequate personnel, and constructive programs are the tools by which a youthful offender may be rehabilitated. In this connection, the establishment of forestry camps would facilitate the rehabilitation of youthful offenders who required minimum security arrangements. At the present time, the California Youth Authority operates four forestry camps as a part of its Division of Training and Treatment. These camps accommodate between 60 and 70 boys each. Two general types of programs are developed in the camps. The first group is composed of a large number of boys who have completed their training program at one of the institutions and are transferred to a forestry camp to complete their treatment in a 90-day pre-parole camp program. A second group of boys with a less aggravated delinquency record are placed in the camps for their entire period of training and treatment.

Correction and prevention at the local level involves the far larger task of improving all the existing correctional services—police, detention, probation, case work, etc.—in the community. The model act provides that local units may be set up. In California the Youth Authority may establish, or assist in establishing, local public councils or committees whose purpose is the prevention or decrease of misbehavior among young people. The Wisconsin statute provides that the Youth Service Commission shall assist localities to secure specialized services. Massachusetts has followed the pattern set by California in providing for assistance to local authorities of any county or municipality when so requested by the governing body thereof in planning preventive programs and in coordinating existing services.

It has been found that in many cases, a child's first appearance before established authorities was for a minor offense. Had the child received immediate care and treatment, the later offenses might have been avoided. Truancy is often the first offense. Investigation of truancy cases reveals that the child may have been a truant because of failure in school due to bad eyesight, bad hearing or other physical defects, or low mentality. If these children are committed to an institution where they are associated with others with more serious records, they are exposed to an influence which may readily lead to more serious offenses on their part when released, and the defect which prompted their misbehavior in the first place never will have been corrected. Individual treatment of such children through the offices of a Youth Authority might in many instances have remedied the defects and would have prevented contact or association with other types of offenders by segregating the various groups of youthful offenders according to the seriousness of their offenses and according to their individual needs. Under the present system, this is not accomplished except where local youth agencies already have created diagnostic facilities.

The role of the public in the acceptance and support of such a program cannot be overlooked. This has been recognized in the laws of Wisconsin and Massachusetts, where provision has been made for the creation of a citizen advisory board for the purpose of making recommendations, interpreting the program to the public and enlisting public cooperation.

It must be realized that the Youth Authority Plan cannot be regarded as a complete answer to the question. It is generally agreed that there is no cure-all for juvenile misbehavior. However, the youth authority should provide treatment of youthful offenders on an individual basis, in a more scientific manner and without the waste or duplication of work inherent in an uncoordinated system of treatment of juvenile offenders. Also the Youth Authority Plan should serve as a channel for the promotion of a worthwhile crime prevention program on a State-wide basis.

RECOMMENDATIONS

It is recommended that:

I. The General Assembly enact legislation establishing a Youth Conservation Board to serve all youth of the State more effectively, to reduce and prevent delinquency and to carry out a program of rehabilitation having continuity of treatment from commitment to final replacement in society and administered to meet the needs of each individual case.

II. Two experimental forestry camps be established under the jurisdiction of the Department of Welfare for the accommodation of youthful offenders whose rehabilitation can be furthered by assignment to such camps rather than to currently available institutions.

III. A youth guidance clinic be established in the office of each county superintendent of schools.

IV. Local school districts be encouraged to make their facilities available to child and adult groups after school hours and during vacation periods.

INTRODUCTION

Because of the opportunity to obtain advantage to Pennsylvania taxpayers and the public and to further industrial growth in the Commonwealth, it was found desirable to review present provisions of the unemployment compensation laws and to revise them in order to take advantage of these benefits and to provide for improvement in the administration of the law.

The Commission recommends that the waiting period for obtaining merit rating, which reduces the time in which the maximum 2.7% rate has to be paid, be shortened by a year and that certain other changes be made to permit increased administrative efficiency in the operation of the law.

The specific recommendations of the Commission are contained in Senate Bill No. 286 (1949, introduced February 15, 1949). This bill proposes amendments to the Act of December 5, 1936 (1937, P. L. 2897).

For the convenience of the members of the General Assembly, the attached table has been prepared. The first column of the table lists the section of the Act sought to be amended; and the second column sets forth the purpose of the proposed amendments.

The table is divided into three parts as follows:

Part I reproduces obsolete provisions which are to be eliminated.

Part II reproduces provisions with simple editorial changes.

Part III contains provisions which may be partially obsolete, which are in need of clarification, or which are new amendments to the present law.

PART I

TEXT

Section 4(a)

(a) "Base Year" [with respect to each benefit year which begins subsequent to the thirty-first day of May, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five, and prior to the first day of October, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five, means the calendar year one thousand nine hundred and forty-four, and with respect to each benefit year which begins subsequent to the thirtieth day of September, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five] means the first four of the last five completed calendar quarters immediately preceding the first day of [such] an individual's benefit year.

Section 4(b)

(b) "Benefit Year" [(i) with respect to an individual who files a "Valid Application for Benefits" as of a day subsequent to the thirty-first day of May, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five, and prior to the first day of October, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five, means the period beginning with the day for which such "Valid Application for Benefits" is filed and ending the thirty-first day of May, one thousand nine hundred and forty-six, (ii)] with respect to an individual who files or has filed a "Valid Application for Benefits" [as of a day subsequent to the thirtieth day of September, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five,] means the one-year period beginning with the day as of which such "Valid Application for Benefits" is filed, and [(iii)] thereafter the one-year period beginning with the day as of which such individual next files a "Valid Application for Benefits" after the termination of his last benefit year.

Section 4(j) (First paragraph)

(j) "Employer" means every—(1) individual, (2) copartnership, (3) association, (4) corporation (domestic or foreign), (5) the legal representative, trustee in bankruptcy, receiver or trustee of any individual, copartnership, association or corporation, or (6) the legal representative of a deceased person, [(I) who or which employed or employs any employee (whether or not the same employee) in employment subject to this act for some portion of each of some twenty (20) days, each day being in a different calendar week, during the calendar year one thousand nine hundred thirty-six, or during any calendar year thereafter, to and including the calendar year one thousand nine hundred and forty-four, or] who or which employed or employs any employee in employment subject to this act for some portion of a day during [the] a calendar year [one thousand nine hundred and forty-five or for some portion of a day during any calendar year thereafter] or [(II)] who or which has elected to become fully subject to this act, and whose election remains in force.

Section 4(k)

(k) "Employer's Experience" means a percentage obtained by dividing the "Wages of a Compensated Employee," as defined in subsection (v) of this section, paid by an employer to all of his compensated employees during the first twelve (12) of the last fourteen (14) completed calendar quarters immediately preceding the calendar year which includes the calendar quarter to which the contribution rate is applicable [less any credit for reemployment with respect to benefit years ending prior to the first day of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five, which was credited to the employer during such twelve (12) calendar quarters,] by the total wages paid by the employer to all his employees during such twelve (12) calendar quarters. [Credit for reemployment previously allocated to a calendar year shall be deemed to have been allocated as of the last two calendar quarters of such calendar year.]

Section 203(e)

(e) The Governor shall appoint and fix the compensation of such referees as may be deemed necessary with power to take testimony in any appeals coming before the board. Such appointment shall be subject to the provisions of the act, approved the fifth day of August, one thousand nine hundred and forty-one (Pam-

Section 205

Section 205. Stabilization of Employment; Partial and Seasonal Unemployments.—The department shall take appropriate steps to—(a) reduce and prevent unemployment, (b) encourage and assist in the adoption of practical methods of vocational training and guidance, (c) investigate, recommend, advise and assist in the establishment, by political subdivisions, of reserves for public works to be used in times of business depression and unemployment, and (d) promote the reemployment of unemployed workers. [(e) make studies of partial unemployment and recommendations in respect to provisions for the payment of compensation for partial unemployment, and (f) make studies of seasonal unemployment and recommendations in respect to provisions for seasonal industries under this system of unemployment compensation.]

Copies of all such studies and recommendations shall be transmitted to the Governor.

Eliminates provisions the effective date for which has expired.

[Section 313

Section 313. Temporary Contributions by Employers and Experience Rating.—Notwithstanding the provisions of section 301 of this act, if on the first day of April, one thousand nine hundred and forty-seven, the balance in the Unemployment Trust Fund to the credit of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is nine and one tenth per centum or more of the total wages of all employees paid during the first four of the last six completed calendar quarters as reported to the department by the thirty-first day of December, one thousand nine hundred and forty-six, and if an employer has complied with the requirements of section 301 (e) of this act, and also has paid contributions into the fund for one or more quarters in each of the last five completed calendar years, then such employer's rate of contribution for the last three calendar quarters of the year, one thousand nine hundred and forty-seven, as hereby further adjusted, shall be the rate set opposite such employer's adjusted rate under the provisions of said section 301 prior to the amendments thereto made by this amendatory act in the following table:

The effective date of this provision has expired.

| Adjusted Rate under Section 301 hereof | Further Adjusted Rate under this Section |
|---|---|
| 1.0% | .5% |
| 1.5 | .7 |
| 2.0 | 1.0 |
| 2.5 | 1.5 |
| 2.7 | 2.7 |

Provided, however, That if on the first day of July or on the first day of October, one thousand nine hundred and forty-seven, the balance in the Unemployment Trust Fund to the credit of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is less than eight and one-tenth per centum of the total wages of all employees paid during the first four of the last six completed calendar quarters as reported to the department then and in that event the provisions of section 301 (f) prior to the amendments thereto made by this mandatory act shall apply.]

Section 401 (First paragraph)

Section 401. Qualifications Required to Secure Compensation.—Compensation shall be payable to any employee who is or becomes unemployed [except that payment with respect to weeks ending subsequent to the sixth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five, and prior to the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred and forty-six, shall be made only for weeks of total unemployment, as provided in section four hundred and four (c),] and who—

(a) Has, within his base year, been paid wages for employment equal to not less than thirty (30) times his weekly benefit rate;

(b) Has registered for work at, and thereafter continued to report at, an employment office in accordance with such regulations as the secretary may prescribe, except that the secretary may by regulation waive or alter either or both of the requirements of this clause as to individuals attached to regular jobs and as to such other types of cases or situations with respect to which he finds that compliance with such requirements would be oppressive or would be inconsistent with the purposes of the act: Provided, however, That no such regulation shall conflict with section four hundred and one (c) of this act;

(c) Has made a valid application for benefits with respect to the benefit year for which compensation is claimed and has made a claim for compensation in the proper manner and on the form prescribed by the department;

(d) Is able to work and available for suitable work; and

(e) Has been unemployed for a waiting period of one week.

No week shall be counted as a week of unemployment for the purpose of this subsection (1) unless it occurs within the benefit year which includes the week with respect to which such employee claims compensation, or (2) if compensation has been paid or is payable with respect thereto, or (3) unless the employee was eligible for compensation with respect thereto under all other provisions of this section and was not disqualified with respect thereto under Section 402. (a), (b), (d), (e) and (f).

Section 404 (c)

(c) Any otherwise eligible employee shall be entitled during his benefit year to an amount equal to his weekly benefit rate multiplied by the number which appears at the top of a column under "PART C", to be ascertained by locating on the same horizontal line on which his weekly benefit rate appears the interval which includes the total wages paid to him during his base year: Provided, That if at the end of any calendar quarter the balance in the Unemployment Trust Fund to the credit of Pennsylvania is less than one and one-half times the highest amount paid out for compensation less any refunds during any twelve consecutive months, no employee shall be paid compensation with respect to weeks of employment ending during the next calendar quarter in an amount which, together with any amounts previously paid with respect to the same benefit year, would be in excess of sixteen times the employee's weekly benefit rate or two hundred and eighty-eight dollars ($288), whichever is the lesser: [And: Provided further, that no employee shall be paid compensation in excess of twenty times his weekly benefit rate with respect to any benefit year which begins prior to the first day of October, one thousand nine hundred forty-seven.]

[Section 1001

Section 1001. Termination of Compensation Rights of Certain Employees.—No employe shall have or assert any right to unemployment compensation under Unemployment Compensation Law of this Commonwealth with respect to unemployment occurring after June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-nine based upon wages earned for services performed either as an employe, representative, or in the employ of an employer when either such employe, representative, or employer has been determined by the agency or agencies empowered to make such determinations under the provisions of the Act of Congress known as the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act (52 U. S. Stat. 1094), to be subject to the provisions of the aforesaid act or to an Act of Congress establishing an unemployment compensation system of maritime employes, irrespective of when performed; nor shall wages for such services be included for purposes of determining eligibility under section four hundred one, or rate of compensation under section four hundred three, with respect to any benefit year commencing on or after July first, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-nine.]

PART II

Section 201

(a) It shall be the duty of the department to administer and enforce this act through such employment service and public employment offices as have been or may be constituted in accordance with the provisions of this act and existing laws. It shall have power and authority to adopt, amend, and rescind such rules and regulations, require such reports from employers, employes, the board and from any other person deemed by the department to be affected by this act, make such investigations and take such other action as it deems necessary or suitable. Such rules and regulations shall not be inconsistent with the provisions of this act, and shall be effective in the manner the department shall prescribe. The department shall submit to the Governor a biennial report covering the administration and operation of this act and shall make such recommendations for amendments to this act as it deems proper.

PART III

PURPOSE

Section 4(1) (1)

(1) "Employment" means [(i)] all personal service performed [prior to the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred forty-five, which was employment as defined in this section prior to the effective date of this amendment, and (ii) all service performed after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand nine hundred forty-four, which is employment as defined in this section as hereby amended] for wages by an individual under any contract of hire, express or implied, written or oral, including service in interstate commerce and service as an officer of a corporation [performed for remuneration or under any contract of hire, express or implied, written or oral.]

(1) Eliminates provisions the effective period of which has expired.

(2) Expresses more precisely the original intent of the provision.

Section 4(1) (2) (last paragraph)

[An individual performing services for remuneration in an employment subject to this act shall be deemed to be performing such services for wages] Services performed by an individual for wages shall be deemed to be employment subject to this act unless and until it is shown to the satisfaction of the department that—(a) such individual has been and will continue to be free from control or direction over the performance of such services both under his contract of service and in fact; and (b) [that such service is either outside the usual course of the business for which such service is performed, or that such service is performed outside of all the places of business of the enterprise for which such service is performed; and (c) that] as to such services such individual is customarily engaged in an independently established trade, occupation, profession or business.

(1) Expresses more precisely the original intent of the provision.

(2) Eliminates the "three-way" conjunctive test to determine whether or not employment is subject to the act. This "three-way" test was originally adopted by practically all the states but has since been eliminated by many states because it has caused unnecessary confusion. No change in coverage is intended or will occur.

TEXT

Section 4(1) (4) (7)

Service performed in the employe of [a corporation, community chest, fund or foundation, organized and] an organization operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, recreational or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual and no substantial part of the activities of which is carrying on propaganda or otherwise attempting to influence legislation.

Section 4(1) (6)

Notwithstanding any of the other provisions of section four (1), services performed for an employer who with respect to such services is required to pay a Federal tax against which credit may be taken for contributions paid under this act shall be deemed to be employment if with respect to such services a tax is required to be paid under any Federal law imposing a tax against which credit may be taken for contributions required to be paid into a State Unemployment Compensation Fund subject to this act and to be performed for such employer.

Section 4(q)

(q) "Social Security Board" means the Social Security Board established by the Social Security Act or such other agency or agencies of the United State to which the authority of the Social Security Board may be transferred.

Section 4(x) (first paragraph)

(x) "Wages" means all remuneration [for employment] (including the cash value of mediums of payment other than cash) paid with respect to [all services performed subsequent to December thirty-first, one thousand nine hundred and forty-one, and paid or payable with respect to all services performed prior to January first, one thousand nine hundred and forty-two] his employment except that the term "wages" shall not include:

Section 4(x) (1)

1) That part of the remuneration which, [after remuneration equal to] is in excess of the first three thousand dollars ($3,000) [has been] paid, to an individual by [an employer with respect to employment during any calendar year, is paid to such individual by such employer with respect to employment during the calendar year one thousand nine hundred forty and during each calendar year thereafter to and including the calendar year one thousand nine hundred forty-six; and that part of remuneration which after remuneration equal to three thousand dollars ($3,000), with respect to employment after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand nine hundred thirty-nine, has been paid to an individual by an employer during any calendar year after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand nine hundred forty-six, is paid to such individual by such employer during such calendar year.] each of his employers during a calendar year: Provided, That an employer may take credit under this subsection for remuneration which he has paid to an individual in the same calendar year on which contributions have been required and paid by such employer under an unemployment compensation law of another state, but no such credit may be taken for remuneration which has been paid by another employer, whether or not contributions have been paid thereon by such other employer under this act or under any state unemployment compensation law. Remuneration in excess of three thousand dollars ($3000) excluded from the definition of wages under the provisions of this subsection may not be considered in determining the compensation rights of any individual under this act and in determining such rights the first three thousand dollars ($3000) of remuneration on which contributions are payable shall be considered as paid only in the calendar quarter or quarters in which such amount was actually paid.

PURPOSE

Expresses more precisely the original intent of the provision.

The Social Security Board has been replaced by the Social Security Administration under the Federal Security Agency. This amendment obviates the necessity of changing reference to the Social Security Board throughout the act and will cover any future change in name of the Federal agency referred to.

(1) Eliminate provisions the effective period of which has expired.

(2) Expresses more precisely the original intent of the provision.

(1) Eliminates provisions the effective period of which has expired.

(2) Provides that an employer in determining the "first $3000 in wages paid" may consider wages paid which are subject to contribution under another state's unemployment compensation law. Example: If employe A is paid $2000 in 1948 by Employer X for services performed in New Jersey, and is then transferred by X to Pennsylvania, he need only pay contributions on the next $1000 paid to A during 1948. This makes the total reportable wages paid by X equal to the amount which he must report under the Federal Act and permits him to obtain full credit under that act.

(3) Since wages as defined are only the first $3000 earned during a calendar year, this amendment also provides that high salaried employes shall have considered for benefit purposes only the first $3000 earned. Example: Employe A receives $12000 in 1948. Contributions are only paid on the first $3000 (received during the first quarter of 1948). If A becomes unemployed January 1, 1949, his base year will be October, 1947 to September 30, 1948. Based on wages of $3000 reported for the first quarter of 1948, he will be entitled to maximum benefits. However, if he is still unemployed, without any intervening employment, on January 1, 1950, he will not be eligible for a second benefit year as his base period would be October 1, 1948 to September 30, 1949, for although he was paid $3000 during the fourth quarter of 1948, such payments were not "wages" as defined and no contributions were paid thereon. This is no change from the present policy of the Department, but explicitly sets forth in the law the limitation of the rights of such employees. It places high paid workers on the same basis as many low paid employees who are normally not eligible for benefits in two consecutive benefit years without intervening employment.

- (1) Eliminates provisions the effective period for which has expired.
- (2) Expresses more precisely the original intent of the provision. No change from present policy.

Reduces the penalty for failure to report for employers whose contributions amount to less than $5.

- (1) Reduces the period during which an employer must have paid contributions in order to be eligible for consideration for a reduced rate to the minimum allowable under Federal standards.
- (2) Places eligibility on a fiscal year basis to correspond to the basis on which employer's experience is computed.

Section 4(y)

(y) "Wages of a Compensated Employee", [with respect to each benefit year which begins prior to the first day of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five, means wages which were paid to the compensated employee by an employer of such employee in the base year immediately preceding the employee's benefit year and which wages shall be treated as though they had been paid in the calendar quarter in which the first compensation of the employee's benefit year was paid, and with respect to each benefit which begins subsequent to the thirty-first day of May, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five] means the first one thousand three hundred and sixty-six dollars ($1366) in wages which were paid to [the] a compensated employee by [an employer of such employee in] each of such compensated employee's employers during the base year immediately preceding the employee's benefit year and which wages shall be treated as though they had been paid in the calendar quarter in which that amount of compensation was paid, which, together with any amounts of compensation previously paid with respect to such benefit year, equals at least three times the employee's weekly benefit rate; Provided, that, in the event of the transfer of "Employer's Experience" as provided in subsection (g) of section three hundred and one, wages paid by the preceding employer shall be considered, for purposes of this subsection, as wages paid by the successor-in-interest.

Section 206 (last paragraph)

Any employer who has been determined by the department to be subject to the reporting provisions of this act and has been so notified, and who neglects or refuses to file or to complete in such manner as the department may prescribe either the periodic report required by the department to establish the amount of such contributions or the periodic report required by the department showing the amount of wages paid to each employee, or both, on or before the date such reports are required to be filed, shall pay a penalty of [five dollars ($5.00)] one hundred (100) per centum of the total amount of contributions paid or payable by the employer for the period: Provided, That such penalty shall be not less than one dollar ($1.00) or more than five dollars ($5.00). Such penalty shall apply to the reports for each period with respect to which such reports are required to be filed: Provided, That such penalty shall not apply to reports for any period with respect to which the last day for filing such reports is prior to a date on which the department has notified the employer that he has been determined an employer subject to the reporting provisions of this act, unless the reports for such prior periods are not filed within thirty days after the employer has been so notified. The penalties provided by this section shall be in addition to all other penalties provided for in this act.

Section 301(a)

(a) Each employer shall pay contributions with respect to the calendar year one thousand nine hundred [forty-eight] fifty and each calendar year thereafter, at a rate equal to two and seven-tenths per centum of wages paid by him for employment: Provided, however, That such rate shall be adjusted in accordance with the following provisions of this section if the employer has paid contributions under this act for one or more quarters in each of the [five] calendar years immediately preceding the year for which the rate is applicable]

three fiscal years ending the thirtieth day of June immediately preceding the year for which the rate is applicable and has also paid contributions under this act for the first, second or third calendar quarters of the fiscal year ending the thirtieth day of June immediately preceding such three fiscal years.

(A.1) Except as specifically provided under section four hundred four, wages paid with respect to employment performed under shipping articles shall, for the purposes of this act, to be considered as having been paid as of a date determined under rules and regulations of the department irrespective of when actual payment was made to the employee.

Section 301 (b)

(b) Each employer with respect to any period prior to the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred [forty-eight] fifty, shall be liable for contributions in accordance with the provisions of this act applicable to each period in effect prior to the effective date of this amendment, and for these purposes such provisions shall remain in force and effect.

Section 301 (c)

(c) The rate of contribution payable by an employer entitled to an adjustment between the minimum rate of five-tenths (.5) of one per centum and the maximum rate of two and seven-tenths per centum [for each calendar year] shall be determined for each calendar year prior to the due date of his first contribution for the year in accordance with the following table.

Change in text to correspondt with effective date of these amendments.

(1) Changes the standard or basic minimum rates from 1.0, 1.5 per cent, etc., to .5, .7 percent, etc. This represents no change in rates since a corresponding adjustment has been made under Section 301(f) eliminating further reduction from the present 1.0 percent basic minimum. Although employers will not receive lower rates than heretofore, the tables will be much more readily understood by employers and will result in administrative simplicity.

(2) Two additional columns (2.0 and 2.5) are added to the table providing for intermediate rates between 1.5 and 2.7 percent. Under the present provisions, as long as there is a large balance in the fund, employers who are unable to qualify for at least a rate of 1.5 percent must pay 2.7 percent. This is patently inequitable to those comparatively few employers who fall in this group and intermediate graduated rates are hereby provided.

Section 301 (d)

(d) An employer's rate of contribution for each calendar year shall, subject to adjustment as provided in clause (f) hereof, be that specified at the end of the column in which on the line opposite the State Experience there appears the percentage nearest to the Employer's Experience. Provided: That, the rate of contribution of any employer whose employer's experience is in excess of the percentage appearing in column [four] six on the line opposite the state experience shall be two and seven-tenths per centum, and: Provided further, that if the employer experience of any employer computed to an infinite number of decimal places is exactly equally removed from two percentage figures which appear on the line opposite the state experience, the rate of contribution of such employer shall be the rate specified at the end of the column in which appears the higher of such two percentage figures.

Section 301 (e)

(e) No employer's rate of contribution for any calendar year shall be less than two and seven-tenths per centum, unless all his contributions due on wages paid to the end of the second calendar quarter of the preceding calendar year, together with interest and penalties due thereon, have been paid by the thirty-first day of [December] July of such preceding calendar year; Provided, That an employer who has timely filed an appeal as provided in subsection (h) of this section and who has been determined ineligible to receive a reduced rate solely on the basis that he has not paid all contributions, interest and penalties within the time limits as required in this subsection shall have his rate re-determined and shall not be considered ineligible under this subsection if payment of such delinquent contributions, interest and penalties is made within thirty days after the Bureau has notified the employer of the reason for his ineligibility for rate reduction in response to the appeal filed by the employer under subsection (h).

Editorial change to conform with new schedule of contribution rates.

Advances the last day for payment of delinquent contributions in order for an employer to be eligible to receive a reduced rate from December 31, to July 31 preceding the rate year. This will enable the department to make rate determinations prior to the beginning of the year and dispose of most appeals and adjustments before first quarter reports are due. To offset the effect of this earlier date, it is provided that employers who have been denied a reduced rate and who appeal may have such appeal allowed and their rate adjusted if they have been determined ineligible solely because of delinquency and payment is made in full within thirty days after being notified as a result of their appeal of the reason for their initial ineligibility.

PURPOSE

The amendments to this section are related to the amendments to Section 301(c). Since the basic minimum rate is being reduced from 1.0 to .5 percent, the safety factor must become operative when the fund balance is less than 9.1 percent instead of less than 8.1 percent. Provision is also made for a lag of one calendar quarter before a decrease in the balance in the fund operates to increase contribution rates. This lag is necessary for administrative reasons, particularly if full advantage is to be obtained in connection with the two-quarter lag between the three-year base period and the beginning of the rate year provided by amendments enacted by the 1947 session of the General Assembly.

TEXT

Section 301(f)

(f) Fund Stabilization Factor. To assure an adequate balance in the fund to meet the benefit payments which may be expected, and to avoid the accumulation of excessive reserves, the employer's rate of contribution, determined in accordance with subsection (d) of this section, shall be further adjusted as follows. [If at the beginning of the first day of any calendar year the balance in the unemployment trust fund to the credit of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is eight and three tenths per centum or more of the total wages of all employees paid during the first four of the last six completed calendar quarters, as reported to the department by the preceding September thirtieth, then the employer's rate of contribution for such calendar year shall be further adjusted downward in accordance with the following table: Provided, however, that if at the beginning of the first day of any calendar quarter, including the first day of any calendar year, the balance in the Unemployment Trust Fund to the credit of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is less than [eight] nine and one tenth (9.1) per centum of the total wages of all employees paid during the first four calendar quarters of the last [six] five completed calendar quarters as reported to the department by the last day of the [next to the] last completed calendar quarter, then and in that event, the employer's rate of contribution [for such calendar quarter] commencing with the calendar quarter following the calendar quarter at the beginning of which the balance in the Unemployment Trust Fund was determined, shall be further adjusted upward in accordance with the [following] table set forth in this subsection. An employer's rate of contribution having been further adjusted upward, as provided herein, shall not be reduced during the remainder of the calendar year but may be again further adjusted upward, in accordance with the provisions of this subsection, at the beginning of a subsequent calendar quarter during the remainder of such calendar year.

Section 301 (g)

(g) Successor-in-interest [(1) Pursuant to rules adopted by the department, an employer who prior to the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred and forty-six acquires an organization, trade or business, in whole or in part from another employer, shall immediately notify the department, and for the purpose of ascertaining the rate of contribution of the succeeding employer his "Employer's Experience" shall include that of the prior employer as related to the whole or part of the organization, trade or business acquired. Such a succeeding employer shall receive full credit for the years during which the former employer made contributions as to the organization, trade or business acquired.

(2) [An employer who [subsequent to the thirty-first day of December, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five] transfers his or its organization, trade or business in whole or in part, to a successor-in-interest, may jointly make application with such successor-in-interest for transfer of the "Employer's Experience" of the preceding employer to the successor-in-interest, including credit for the years during which contributions were paid by the preceding employer. If an application for transfer of "Employer's Experience" is filed in accordance with the rules and regulations of the department and within the time limits prescribed therein, the department may allow such transfer of "Employer's Experience" [pursuant to rules and regulations adopted by the department] as of the end of the calendar year in which the transfer occurred, or, if not timely filed, as of the end of a subsequent calendar year, as determined by such rules and regulations, only if it finds that the "Employer's Experience" of the preceding employer with respect to the organization, trade or business, or part thereof, as the case may be, which has been transferred, may be considered indicative of the future "Employer's Experience" of the successor-in-interest. In the event of a part transfer of an employer's organization, trade or business only that portion of the "Employer's Experience" relating to the portion of the organization, trade or business transferred, shall be transferred, and credit shall be given to the successor-in-interest only for the years during which contributions were paid by the preceding employer with respect to that part of the organization, trade or business transferred. A transfer of "Employer's Experience", in whole or in part, having been applied for and approved by the department, the preceding employer thereafter shall not be entitled to consideration for an adjusted rate based upon his experience, or part thereof, as the case may be, which has been thus transferred.

A preceding employer or a successor-in-interest who prior to the transfer

(1) Eliminates provisions the effective date of which has expired.

(2) Places in the text of the act the following policies which are now in effect by regulation:

(a) Transfer of employer experience is not made until the end of the calendar year in which the transfer occurred.

(b) A successor who is an employer at the time of the transfer shall not have his rate affected for the remainder of the calendar year in which the transfer occurred.

(c) A successor who is not an employer at the time of the transfer shall automatically receive the rate of the predecessor for the remainder of the calendar year in which the transfer occurred.

(d) A successor may not receive a reduced rate unless all contributions owing by the predecessor have been paid.

PURPOSE

Provides that an employer may not raise a question in connection with a rate appeal as to the clerical accuracy of any benefit wage charges to his account unless he has protested such changes within 60 days after being notified thereof. Explicitly prohibits any question being raised by an employer involving the eligibility of a claimant to receive benefits under the provisions of this section, and requires that such appeals be taken in the manner provided under Section 501.

TEXT

was an employer during the calendar year in which the transfer occurred shall not have his rate of contribution adjusted under the provisions of this section for the remainder of such year. A successor-in-interest who prior to the transfer was not an employer during the calendar year in which the transfer occurred and who has made application for transfer of "Employer's Experience" which has been approved by the department as provided herein and who together with his predecessor has paid contributions for the period required under subsection (a) of section three hundred and one with respect to the organization, trade or business or part thereof which has been transferred, shall be assigned the same rate of contribution as the preceding employer for the remainder of such year, after which his rate of contribution shall be determined on the basis of the "Employer's Experience" which has been transferred combined with any other "Employer's Experience" which such successor-in-interest may have within the three fiscal years ending the thirtieth day of June immediately preceding the year to which the rate is applicable: Provided, That no such successor-in-interest may be assigned an adjusted contribution rate unless all contributions, interest and penalties payable by the predecessor and all contributions, interest and penalties payable by such successor-in-interest with respect to any liability which he may have incurred under the provisions of this act have been paid as provided in subsection (e) of this section.

Section 301 (h)

(h) (1) The department shall periodically furnish each employer with a statement showing the base year wages from such employer and the benefit year to which such wages relate for each of his compensated employees. All questions involving the eligibility of a claimant to receive compensation shall be resolved as provided under the provisions of section five hundred one and such eligibility may not be directly contested by an employer under the provisions of this section. The clerical accuracy of the statement provided under the provisions of this subsection may not be contested by the employer in connection with any future appeal by the employer from the rate of contribution assigned to him, unless within sixty days from the date of mailing of such statement the employer files with the department a protest in writing contesting the clerical accuracy of such statement and setting forth in detail the item or items to which exception is taken and the reason therefor. Such period of sixty days may be extended with the approval of the department upon written application by the employer filed prior to the expiration of such period. Provided that the Department at any time on its own motion may correct any clerical error it has made or adjust such statement if it finds that any claimants listed thereon received benefits to which they were not entitled.

(2) The department shall promptly notify each employer of his rate of contributions for the calendar year, determined as provided in this section, and for each calendar quarter when modifications in rates are made in accordance with paragraph (f). [The department shall furnish each employer with a statement showing the base wages from such employer of each of his compensated employees; and the benefit year to which such wages relate.] The determination of the department shall become conclusive and binding upon the employer, unless within thirty days after the mailing of notice thereof to the employer's last known post office address the employer files an application for review and redetermination, setting forth his reasons therefor: provided that subject to the provisions of subsection (m) of this section the Department at any time on its own motion may adjust an employer's contribution rate if it finds that such rate is incorrect as the result of (1) clerical error made by the department or (2) adjustments made under clause two (2) of paragraph one (1) of this subsection. The department may, if it deems the reasons set forth by the employer insufficient to change the rate of contribution, deny the application, otherwise it shall grant the employer a fair hearing. The employer shall be promptly notified of the denial of his application or of the department's redetermination, both of which shall become final and conclusive within thirty days after the mailing of notice thereof to the employer's last known post office address, unless the employer shall appeal by petition from the action of the department to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County within such time.

Section 301(1)

(1) For purposes of determining whether or not an employer has paid contributions in each of the five calendar years immediately preceding the year for which a rate is applicable three fiscal years ending the thirtieth day of June immediately preceding the year for which the rate is applicable and the first, second or third calendar quarter of the fiscal year ending the thirtieth day of June immediately preceding such three fiscal years, as provided in subsection [(b)] (a) of this section, in order to be eligible for consideration for an adjusted rate, an employer who shall have served in the active military or naval service of the United States at any time after the sixteenth day of September, one thousand nine hundred and forty, and prior to the termination of the present war, and who shall have been discharged or released from active service under conditions other than dishonorable, shall be deemed to have paid contributions under this act during any [calendar] fiscal year ending on the thirtieth day of June any part of which is included in such period of military or naval services: Provided, That he has actually paid contributions under this act for one or more calendar quarters in either the [calendar] fiscal year ending the thirtieth day of June in which he entered such military service or in the immediately preceding [calendar] fiscal year ending the thirtieth day of June.

Section 301(m)

(m) If the department finds that it has erroneously notified an employer that his rate of contribution is less than the rate to which he is entitled, he shall be notified of the revision to his rate and he shall be required to make payment of additional contributions on the basis of the revised rate: Provided, That no such additional contributions shall be required unless the employer is notified of his revised rate within the calendar year to which the rate is applicable, unless the department finds that the employer has directly or indirectly contributed to the error. No interest shall be required to be paid in connection with such additional contributions if they are paid within thirty (30) days from the date that the employer is notified of his revised rate.

Section 304(c)

(c) Any petitioner dissatisfied with the action of the department on his petition for re-assessment may appeal therefrom to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County within thirty days after being notified of the action of the department. Such appeal to the court shall be by petition verified by oath and shall specify all the objections to such assessment or re-assessment, and any objections not specified in the petition shall not be considered by the Court. A copy of such petition shall be served on the secretary or his deputy.

Section 308.1

Section 308.1. Contributions to be Liens; Entry Thereof.—All contributions and the interest and penalties thereon due and payable by an employer under the provisions of this act shall be a lien upon the franchises and property, both real and personal, of the employer liable therefor, from the date a lien for such contributions, interest and penalties is entered of record in the manner hereinafter provided. Whenever the franchises or property of an employer is sold at a judicial sale, all contributions and the interest and penalties thereon thus entered of record shall first be allowed and paid out of the proceeds of such sale in the same manner and to the same extent that State taxes are paid: Provided, however, That the lien hereby created shall not be prior to pre-existing duly recorded real estate mortgages. The department may at any time

This section, which relates to the eligibility of veterans to receive reduced contribution rates, is amended to correspond with the reduced eligibility requirements in Section 301(a).

This is a new section which provides a statute of limitations in the event that the Department erroneously notifies an employer of a rate less than that to which he is entitled. Such erroneous rate may not be revised upward except during the calendar year to which the rate applies unless the employer has contributed to the error.

This amendment is needed in order that the Department may have prompt notice of any appeal to the courts by an employer from a reassessment decision.

In some cases it is urgent that liens be filed without delay. This amendment provides that in such cases prothonotaries shall record the liens and bill the department.

TEXT

transmit to the prothonotaries of the respective counties of the Commonwealth, to be by them entered of record, certified copies of all liens for unpaid contributions, interest and penalties which may now exist or hereafter arise, upon which record it shall be lawful for writs of scire facias to issue and be prosecuted to judgment and execution in the same manner as such writs are ordinarily employed. No prothonotary shall require as a condition precedent to the entry of such liens, the payment of the costs incident thereto.

Section 402(d)

(d) In which his unemployment is due to a stoppage of work which exists because of a labor dispute (other than a lock-out) at the factory, establishment, or other premises at which he is or was last employed: Provided, That this subsection shall not apply if it is shown that (1) he is not participating in or directly interested in the labor dispute which caused the stoppage of work; and (2) he is not a member of an organization which is participating in, or directly interested in, the labor dispute which caused the stoppage of work; and (3) he does not belong to a grade or class of workers of which immediately before the commencement of the stoppage there were members employed at the premises at which the stoppage occurs, any of whom are participating in or directly interested in the dispute.

Section 402(g)

Add at the end of Section 402 the following: (g) Any part of which is included in the one-year period immediately following the date on which he is finally convicted of the illegal receipt of benefits under this act in any penal proceedings instituted against him under the provisions of this act or any other statute of the Commonwealth.

Section 408

Add a new section after Section 407 to read as follows: Section 408. Limitation on the Validity of Claims.—Final payment of compensation claimed under the provisions of this act shall not be made more than two years from the last day of the week for which compensation is claimed if such final payment has not been made within such two-year period because the claimant (1) is reported by the postal authorities as "unknown" at the last address which the employee has given to the department. (2) has failed to properly notify the department that he has not received the compensation claimed. (3) has failed to have presented to the State Treasurer for final payment a check received in payment of the compensation claimed, or (4) has failed to properly request the re-issuance of a check which has become lost or destroyed or the validity date of which has expired: Provided, That one year has elapsed from the date the check was issued, or if no check has been issued, from the last date that the claimant requested payment. The provisions of this section shall also apply to the endorser of any check issued in payment of compensation under the provisions of this act.

Section 501 (e)

(e) Unless the claimant or last employer or base-year employer of the claimant files an appeal with the board, from the determination contained in any notice required to be furnished by the department under section five hundred and one (a), (c) and (d), within ten (10) calendar days after such notice was delivered to him personally, or was mailed to his last known post office address, and applies for a hearing, such determination of the department, with respect to the particular facts set forth in such notice, shall be final and compensation shall be paid or denied in accordance therewith in the event that an appeal is filed with the board, the payment of any contested amount of compensation shall be withheld pending determination of the claim, but any uncontested amount of compensation allowed in any decision shall be paid notwithstanding any appeal which may thereafter be taken: Provided, That when [a referee or] the board affirms a decision of a referee or of the department allowing compensation, such compensa-

PURPOSE

Counsel advises that the term "labor dispute" includes a lock-out. However, under interpretations which have been given to the act as a whole, workers unemployed as a result of a lock-out have not been disqualified under Section 402(d). This amendment therefore does not affect the benefit rights of any workers, but is suggested merely for clarification and better statutory construction.

This is a new section designed to disqualify individuals for a period of one year who have been finally convicted of the illegal receipt of benefits.

This amendment will permit the department and the State Treasurer to close claimant accounts after two years where claimants have failed to "cash" checks or cannot be located.

(1) Under the present provisions of this section, if a referee affirms a decision of the Department allowing benefits, compensation must be paid regardless of further appeal. While this expedites the payment of benefits, it works a hardship on claimants who are paid and then found to be ineligible by the Board of Review, as such payments are then subject to recoupment. The amendment provides for the withholding of payment in the event of further appeal until a decision has been rendered by the Board.

(2) The reference to recoupment in the event of a reversal of the Board by the Court is in line with present practice.

tion shall be paid notwithstanding any further appeal, and provided further, That when a referee affirms a decision of the department allowing compensation, in the event of a further appeal to the board, such compensation shall be paid after a period of thirty days from the date of such further appeal if the board has not rendered a decision prior thereto. However, in the event that such decision of the board is reversed upon further appeal, payments thus made shall be subject to recovery and recoupment as provided in section eight hundred and four.

Section 601 (first paragraph)

Section 601. Unemployment Compensation Fund.—There is hereby created a special fund separate and apart from all public moneys or funds of this Commonwealth to be known as the Unemployment Compensation Fund. All contributions, together with penalties and interest thereon, received or collected by the department from employers under the provisions of this act, except such penalties and interest which are paid into the Special Administration Fund as provided in section six hundred one point one, shall be paid into the Unemployment Compensation Fund, and shall be credited by the department to a ledger account to be known as the Employer's Contribution Account. All moneys from time to time received and credited to the Employers' Contribution Account (exclusive of refunds made under section three hundred eleven and transfer of interest and penalties to the Special Administration Fund) shall be paid promptly by the department into the Unemployment Trust Fund, except as otherwise provided in section six hundred five of this act.

As often as may be necessary, the department shall requisition from the Unemployment Trust Fund such amounts as shall be necessary to provide adequate funds for the payment of compensation, as provided in this act. Upon receipt of such requisitioned funds, the department shall deposit them into the Unemployment Compensation Fund to the credit of a ledger account, to be known as the Compensation Account, and shall expend such moneys solely for the payment of compensation, as provided by this act. All moneys to the credit of the Compensation Account shall be mingled and undivided. The department shall pay all compensation authorized by this act out of moneys standing to the credit of the Compensation Account.

Section 804 (first paragraph)

Section 804. Recovery and Recoupment of Compensation.—Any person who by reason of his fault has received any sum as compensation under this act to which he was not entitled shall be liable to repay to the Unemployment Compensation Fund to the credit of the [Employers' Contribution] Compensation Account a sum equal to the amount so received by him. Such sum shall be collectible (a) in the manner provided in this act for the collection of past due contributions, or (b) by deduction from any future compensation payable to the claimant under this act.

This gives statutory recognition to the department's present practice of depositing interest and penalties together with contributions into the Employer's Contribution Account, and then periodically transferred such interest and penalties into the Special Administration Fund. This merely facilitates bookkeeping and makes no change in the ultimate disposition of funds.

This amendment merely corrects a technical error in the present text of this provision.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

To the Members of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Pursuant to the provisions of Act No. 459, Session of 1937, as amended by Act No. 380, Session of 1939, Section 2 (b), we submit herewith a report dealing with per-pupil costs of vocational education programs in the public schools.

In accordance with Act No. 4, Session of 1943, Section 1 the Commission created a "subcommittee" to facilitate and expedite the investigation.

On behalf of the Commission the cooperation of the members of the subcommittee is gratefully acknowledged.

Findings:

I. In addition to the general appropriations, the Commonwealth makes supplemental appropriations to local school districts for vocational education.

These supplemental appropriations for vocational education are designed to compensate school districts for the alleged differences in cost between vocational curricula and general curricula.

II. At present, the supplemental appropriations for vocational education per-pupil per year are as follows:

| | |
|-----------------------------------|------|
| Agricultural | $35 |
| Industrial | 35 |
| Home economics | 20 |
| Distributive (Salesmanship) | 50 |

III. The adequacy of the above supplemental appropriations has been challenged from time to time.

IV. In view of the situation indicated under III above, the financial records of a sample of school districts have been examined. The examination disclosed that the records of school districts are not designed and maintained to indicate costs for specific educational programs or departments. These records merely show total costs for high and elementary schools. Under the circumstances, it was necessary to develop cost allocation methods. The methods used for the analysis of the local records conform to accepted accounting practice.

V. The methods have been applied to a sample of school districts selected to give representation to: (1) different geographic regions, (2) schools of different size, (3) local capacity, as measured in terms of the assessed valuation per teaching unit, to support education, and (4) specialization of districts in the four types of vocational programs.

These selected districts represent 31.5% of the total population in the Commonwealth.

VI. The financial records of the sample districts were examined for the school years 1945-46 and 1946-47, except in the case of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh the two districts of the Commonwealth which keep their accounts for the calendar year. In these two cases, the calendar years 1945 and 1946 were employed.

The analysis of the records was designed to determine the per-pupil cost differences for vocational education programs as compared to a general high school program based on first, current expense costs, and second, current expenses plus an annual charge for capital outlay. The current expense cost analysis was completed for the entire sample of twenty-six districts. However, only fifteen districts were able to submit sufficient information from which to compute annual charges for capital outlay.

VII. By virtue of the limitations of the financial records from an accounting point of view, per-pupil costs and cost differences, presented subsequently, can indicate only the approximate relationship of the cost of vocational education as compared to general education.

On the basis of the information available in the files of the public schools surveyed, Table I shows the average per-pupil current expense costs and differences for the for the sample districts.

The positive differences indicate the amounts by which the vocational per-pupil costs exceed the general high school whereas the negative differences indicate the amounts by which the vocational per-pupil costs are less than the general high school costs.

Column 4 of Table 1 shows that, for Vocational Industrial programs, the average cost differences were $46.59 and $57.24 on 1945-46 and 1946-47 respectively. These, when compared to the supplemental reimbursements of $35.00, indicates an average "underpayment" to the districts of $11.59 and $22.24.

For Vocational Agricultural programs the average cost difference was negative $1.26 in 1945-46 and positive $6.95 in 1946-47, which, when compared to the current supplemental reimbursement of $35.00, indicates an average "over-payment" to the districts of $35.00 and $28.05.

In 1945-46 the average cost of the Agricultural program was less than the average cost of the General High School program, thereby not only producing an average "over-payment" to the district in the amount of the reimbursement but a "net gain" on the program of $36.26 ($35.00 plus $1.26) for current expenses.

For Vocational Home Economics the average cost difference was negative $1.20 in 1945-46 and positive $10.14 in 1946-47 which, when compared to the current supplemental reimbursement of $20.00 indicates an average "overpayment" of $20.00 in 1945-46 and $9.86 in 1946-47.

In 1945-46 the negative current expense cost difference, when added to the reimbursement of $20.00, produces a "net gain" of $21.20 on the Home Economics program.

For Vocational Distributive the average cost differences were positive $9.52 in 1945-46 and negative $3.76 in 1946-47, which, when compared to the current reimbursement of $50.00 indicates an average "overpayment" in the first year of $40.48 and in the second year $50.00.

The negative current expense cost difference for the Vocational Distributive program, in 1946-47 when added to the reimbursement of $50.00 produces a "net gain" of $53.76.

Table II shows the average per-pupil current expense plus capital outlay costs and differences for the fifteen districts that submitted information on the cost of buildings and equipment. Columns 7 and 8 in this Table show the total average daily membership in each curriculum for the selected districts and the percentage to the total for State.

Column 4, of Table II shows that, for Vocational Industrial programs, the average cost differences—current expense plus capital outlay costs—were $67.09 and $64.31, in 1945-46 and 1946-47 respectively, resulting in a total average "underpayment" of $32.09 and $29.31.

For Vocational Agricultural programs the average cost differences—current expense plus capital outlay costs—were negative $26.02 and positive $13.78, resulting in an average "overpayment" of $35.00 and $21.22.

In 1945-46 the average cost of the Agricultural program was less than the average cost of the General High School program, thereby not only producing an average "overpayment" to the district in the amount of the reimbursement but a "net gain" of $61.02 ($35.00 plus $26.02) for current expense plus capital outlay costs.

For Vocational Home Economics, the average cost difference—current expense plus capital outlay costs—was negative $29.54 and negative $23.64 for the respective years.

The average cost of Vocational Home Economics for both years produces a "net gain" of $49.54 in 1954 in 1945-46 and $43.64 in 1946-47.

No capital outlay data was obtained from which to compute annual charges for Vocational Distributive programs.

VIII. Multiplying the average per-pupil current expense "underpayments" and "overpayments" by the total Commonwealth average daily membership in each vocational program produces a total reimbursement in excess of costs amounting to $438,330.35 in 1945-46 and $45,204.38 in 1946-47. The following schedule shows the "underpayments" and "overpayments" by programs:

REIMBURSEMENTS IN EXCESS OF PROGRAM COSTS

| Type of Program | 1945-46 | 1946-47 |
|-------------------|-----------|-----------|
| Agricultural | $309,085 | $268,719 |
| Home Economics | 303,020 | 151,380 |
| Distributive | 35,865 | 50,000 |
| Total | $647,970 | $470,099 |

REIMBURSEMENTS

PROGRAM COSTS

Industrial $209,640 $424,898

NET EXCESS REIMBURSEMENTS ... $438,330 $45,204

RECOMMENDATIONS:

The Joint State Government Commission recommends:

I. That it be made mandatory upon the Department of Public Instruction to develop a consolidated report form to take the place of the miscellaneous reports which local school boards are now required to file with the Department of Public Instruction and the School Employees' Retirement Board.

II. That this consolidated report form show, along with other items, the current expense and capital costs—determined in accordance with accepted accounting procedures—of specific educational programs.

III. As cost data become available, that school districts be reimbursed for vocational education programs on the basis now employed for general instruction, provided, however that no district receives a per-pupil appropriation in excess of a legislatively stipulated amount.

See Appendix C, Computation of Averages.

APPENDIX

APPENDIX A

1. Nature and Limitation of Data

Section 317 of the School Laws provides that the Secretary of the board of school directors shall furnish "when-ever requested, any and all reports concerning the affairs of the district on such form and in such manner, as the State Board of Education or the Superintendent of Public Instruction may require."

Under this section of the law the Department of Public Instruction is given the power to require each district to submit financial data on prescribed forms but is not authorized to require the maintenance of specific financial records. These reports must be filed by the District before their appropriations are paid.

Among the reports required by the Department is the Annual Financial Report¹ which provides an organization analysis of the financial transactions as recorded by the District. By reference to the reproduction of the Form in Appendix D, it will be noted that there is no provision for reporting program costs separately. As a result the total vocational and general high school costs are reported under the columns entitled "High School."

The majority of districts has adopted the suggested record forms without modification and, as a result, these records reveal no information in addition to that shown on the Annual Reports. The method of prorating expenses to the various types of schools such as elementary, junior high schools, high schools, etc., is not uniform among the districts. Each district, for example, prorates plant operation and plant maintenance costs in whatever ratio the district officials deems advisable, and there is a vast difference in opinion as to the factors to be considered.

The Balance Sheet on the Annual Report provides that assets such as "School Buildings and Sites" and "Text-books and Equipment" should be shown at cost, however, many districts report insurance appraisal values which do not reflect true cost values to be considered in computing amortization of Capital Outlay.

2. Method of Analyzing Costs

Two methods were considered for the determination of per pupil costs and per pupil cost differences for vocational education.²

The method used in this report was to determine the per-pupil current expense cost, in each program in each of the twenty-six districts, by deducting from the total high school expense that amount which was prorated to the vocational programs³ and considering the residual amount as the cost of a general high school education. The vocational programs were charged with their prorated share of all of the expenses of operating the schools in order to arrive at a total per-pupil cost for each program.

In addition to the current expense cost, fifteen of the twenty-six districts submitted data from which annual capital outlay charges were computed.

The costs of buildings and equipment submitted by most districts were estimated by school officials since no records showed original costs. The capital outlay cost for each program was estimated in all of the fifteen districts. Using the data as submitted, two per-pupil cost figures were computed for these districts; one included only current expenses and annual charges for capital outlay.

The disadvantage in computing per-pupil costs under both of these methods is the lack of proper basic data recorded in local districts. However, the computation of program costs under the second method is based upon conditions as they actually exist in each district rather than upon specified assumptions.

² See Appendix D, Reproduction of Annual Financial Report.

³ One of the methods considered for this study was to calculate the difference between salaries of teachers and equipment for a vocational program and the salaries and equipment for general program, then to multiply this figure by the number of vocational teachers. It was to be assumed that, in the absence of a vocational program, a general high school education would be required, and that the same number of teachers, same building capacity, administrative and maintenance costs would be needed, whether the educational program were general or part general and part vocational.

This method was not used because of the questionable validity of the assumption that the same number of teachers and facilities would be needed to conduct only a general high school program where there are now one or more vocational programs in addition to the general courses; the difficulty of determining a standard uniform pupil-teacher load which would properly reflect the possible distribution of vocational students in the general high school curricula; and because of the lack of knowledge of how many students would be leaving school at 17, if no vocational program were offered.

⁴ Appendix B, Computation of Per-Pupil Costs.

APPENDIX B

Per-Pupil Costs

The per-pupil costs shown in this report are based upon figures taken from the limited records of the local districts, supplemented by information from various district officials. In the absence of recorded figures, the oral information received from officials often became of prime importance in prorating expenses or determining cost values of buildings and equipment.

In the following discussions of the four types of vocational education programs, the difference in cost between the vocational and general curricula is given on a per pupil, current expense basis.

Appendix Tables 1 to 4 show the per-pupil current expense cost differences in all of the districts as well as the per-pupil current expense plus capital outlay cost differences for those districts which submitted capital outlay data.

A detailed analysis of per-pupil costs by expense classifications in each program and for each district is set forth in Appendix C, Tables 5 to 13.

APPENDIX C

1. Computation of Per-Pupil Costs

The Annual Financial Reports, of the local districts, which were filed in the Department of Public Instruction for the school years 1945-46 and 1946-47, together with the records of the districts, were used to obtain the basic data for this cost analysis. The Reports as well as the records, since they were planned on an organizational rather than a functional basis, did not furnish directly the information necessary to determine the cost of the various educational programs. As a result it was necessary to set up methods of prorating costs, to the various educational programs carried on in each district.

Two basic factors were used to prorate the costs. First, the percentage of average daily membership in each program as compared to the total average daily membership in the district was computed and is identified as the "Total Average Daily Membership Percentage" (Total ADM percentage). Second, the percentage of average daily membership in each program as compared to the total average daily membership in the high school was computed and is identified as the "High School Average Daily Membership Percentage" (H. S. ADM percentage).

The procedure used in prorating the current expenses is explained below and follows the order of the Account Classifications as set forth in the Annual Financial Report, Appendix D.

A. The Expenses of General Control (Administrative) are the only expenses that are not prorated by the districts, to the types of schools conducted, such as elementary, junior high school, high school and others. Inasmuch as these expenses are recorded in total and represent the cost of administration for the entire district they were prorated by applying the Total ADM percentage.

B. Expenses of Instruction were recorded for the High School, however, it was necessary to determine the portion chargeable to each educational program.

The first seven items of expense in this classification, salaries and expenses of supervisors and principals, were prorated by use of the H. S. ADM percentage with the exception of a few districts where some portion was determined to be directly chargeable.

Item 8, Salaries of Teachers, was prorated by direct charges and a proration of certain salaries. The amount of salaries chargeable directly to each vocational program was taken from the Annual Vocational Reports. In addition to the regular vocational work, the students are given instruction in certain academic courses and are taught by teachers not recorded on the Vocational Report. The portion of academic salaries chargeable to each vocational program was determined by computing the amount of time each teacher spent with the vocational groups providing the vocational students would be placed in separate classes of the average prevailing size.

For example, if an Industrial group was composed of an average daily membership of 100 and the average academic class in that school was 30 there would be $3\frac{1}{3}$ class for each academic subject. In a school where the teacher's day consisted of six periods, $3\frac{1}{3}$ periods or 55½% of an academic teacher's time would be chargeable to the Industrial group. This percentage was then applied to the annual salaries of the teachers affected to obtain the prorated charge which, when added to the salaries charged directly, resulted in the total vocational salaries. This amount was deducted from the total High School salaries to obtain the amount chargeable to General High School.

Item 9a, Textbooks. In a few instances a portion of this item could be directly charged to certain programs, however, in most cases the H. S. ADM percentage was used to prorate the total High School Charge.

Item 9b, Books for School Libraries, was prorated by the H. S. ADM percentage.

Item 10, Supplies. In several schools all or a portion of the charges for supplies in the vocational programs was obtained from the records and by the estimation of school officials. Also estimated costs of general supplies per pupil were determined. Any unallocated balance was prorated by the H. S. ADM percentage.

Item 11, Teachers Institute, was charged to the various programs on the basis of the number of teachers.

Items 13, 14 and 15 were prorated by use of the H. S. ADM percentage.

C. Expenses of Auxiliary Agencies and Coordinate Activities were prorated by application of the H. S. ADM percentage to the expense for the High School.

D. Expenses of Operation of School Plant were prorated by determining the percentage of cubic feet occupied by each group and applying that percentage to the total operating costs. In computing the percentage of space chargeable to each educational group consideration was given to ADM percentages of such space as, auditorium, gymnasiums, corridors, etc., as well as the classroom space.

E. Expenses of Maintenance of School Plant were prorated by the H. S. ADM percentage with the exception of Item 4, Repairs and Replacements of Apparatus used in Instruction, which in a few instances were charged directly to certain programs.

F. Expenses of Fixed Charges were prorated by applying the H. S. ADM percentage to the total for the High School.

2. Computation of Averages

The average per-pupil cost for each program was computed by adding the costs—current expense plus capital outlay—of all schools in which a vocational program was effective and dividing the total so obtained by the total average daily membership.

The average per-pupil cost difference for each program was computed by multiplying the cost difference in each school by its average daily membership in the effective vocational program, adding the products so obtained and then dividing this sum by the total daily membership.

of _____ School District, _____ do hereby swear that the Common Schools of said District have been kept open and in operation according to the requirements of the School Laws, for the term of _____ days during the school year ending on the first Monday of July, 1947. That the several branches of study now required by law to be taught in the Common Schools, including the subject of Physiology and Hygiene, with special reference to the effects of alcoholic drinks, stimulants and narcotics upon the human system, have been regularly introduced and taught in all the schools of the district; that the provisions of the compulsory attendance law have been complied with; that no teacher has been paid a salary less than that prescribed by Section 1241 of the School Laws; that no teacher has been employed for, or had charge of any of the schools of said district during the year specified who had not at the time a VALID CERTIFICATE; that no relative of a member of the school board was employed as teacher without the requisite three-fourths vote of the entire board, as required by Section 1207 of the School Laws; that no teacher has been employed who left the service of another board during the term without the consent of the board first employing the teacher; and that no teacher has been employed in, or has had charge of any school in the district who was not at least eighteen years of age.

I also certify that the ACCOUNTS OF THE DISTRICT TREASURER AND TAX COLLECTOR FOR SAID YEAR HAVE BEEN SETTLED, that statements in full of the financial operations of the district have been published according to law, and that the information contained in this report is true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

To the Members of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Pursuant to House Resolution No. 40, Serial No. 47, Session of 1947, adopted April 15, 1947, we submit herewith a report dealing with the problem of making uniform the practice and procedure before Commonwealth administrative agencies.

In accordance with Act No. 4, Session of 1943, Section 1, the Commission created a subcommittee to facilitate the study.

On behalf of the Commission, the cooperation of the members of the subcommittee is gratefully acknowledged.

WELDON B. HEYBURN, Chairman.

Section I

INTRODUCTION

House Resolution No. 40, Serial No. 47, Session of 1947, adopted April 15, 1947, directed the Joint State Government Commission "to study the problem of making uniform the practice and procedure before the Administrative Agencies of the State Government and of appeals therefrom as well as the review of regulations promulgated by such agencies and to study the problem of publishing all regulations of State Agencies in one register."

In accordance with the above mandate, the Commission has reviewed the regulations of the administrative agencies of the Commonwealth; has considered the statutes of Pennsylvania and other states as they relate to the filing, review and publication of regulations of state agencies, prepared a summary of such statutes (see Appendix A); and has conferred with the Section on Administrative Law of the Pennsylvania Bar Association and members of the former Registry Board.

Section II

FINDINGS

An ever increasing number of the activities of the citizens of the Commonwealth are directly or indirectly affected by the regulations of the Commonwealth's more than two score administrative agencies. Ready ascertainment of the requirements imposed upon the persons whose affairs come within the jurisdiction of administrative agencies and the regulations governing the practice and procedure before them are of vital concern.

The following standards of procedure, if consistently applied, will tend to safeguard the public interest and expedite the administrative process:

1. Regulations should be formulated in a manner that would give reasonable assurance that they meet the tests of constitutionality, legality and reasonableness.
2. Regulations should be readily accessible at a central depository and conveniently available for information and for use as evidence rather than contained in a single bound volume as formerly required by the Pennsylvania Register Act (repealed 1947).

3. Administrative agencies should have the benefit of legal council in the conduct of their business and their adjudications should be in the form prescribed by law.
4. The jurisdiction of courts upon appeals from such agencies, as well as the appropriate appellate court, should be prescribed by law.

The Joint State Government Commission believes that these standards may be attained by the recommendations hereinafter set out.

Section III

RECOMMENDATIONS

The Joint State Government Commission recommends that Act No. 442, approved June 4, 1945, P. L. 1388, be amended to provide that:

1. The following requirements apply to all regulations of the agencies as listed in Section 51 (see Appendix B).
2. Regulations of each such administrative agency (1) be certified on behalf of the agency, (2) be approved as to legality by the Department of Justice, (3) be filed with the Department of State in the form and size prescribed by the Department of State and (4) copies be made available by the agency free of charge upon request.
3. The Department of State (1) keep a permanent record of all regulations filed with it, (2) prepare and maintain an index of all such regulations to be available for inspection, and (3) furnish certified copies of any regulation upon payment of a proper charge.

4. The adjudications of each such agency shall contain findings of fact, a discussion of the questions of fact and law involved, conclusions of law and an order or decree.
5. Before notice of any hearing leading to an adjudication is given, any such agency shall submit the matter to the Department of Justice to determine the legality of the proposed action or defense.
6. The jurisdiction of the court to which an appeal is taken from any such agency shall be clarified as set forth in Section 44 (see Appendix B).
7. Appeal from any decision of a court reviewing an agency's adjudication shall be to the Superior Court

APPENDIX A

Summary of Statutes of Pennsylvania and Other States Relating to the Filing, Review and Publication of Administrative Rules and Regulations of State Administrative Agencies

The statutory requirements regarding the filing, review and publication of administrative rules and regulations of state agencies of Pennsylvania and other states are shown in the following table.

Column 1 shows the name of the state (states not listed in the table have no statutes governing the filing, review or publication of rules and regulations of agencies); column 2 indicates the central depository, if any, where regulations are required to be filed; column 3 shows the agency, if any, which must review rules and regulations issued by administrative agencies; and column 4 contains information relating to the publication of rules and regulations.

TABLE I

Summary of the Laws of Pennsylvania and Other States Regarding the Filing, Review and Publication of Rules and Regulations of State Administrative Agencies *

| State | Central Depository | General Review of Rules | Publication of Rules |
|---------------------|--|---|---|
| (1) | (2) | (3) | (4) |
| California | Secretary of State | | California Administrative Code. Looseleaf; new and additional amendments supplied by replacement sheets. |
| Connecticut | Secretary of State | Submitted to the legislature at each session for approval or disapproval. A rule so disapproved is void and may not be reissued. | Rules are effective upon publication in the Connecticut Law Journal and amendments and additions are published in the Connecticut Supplement. |
| Indiana | Secretary of State and Legislative Bureau | Reviewed by Governor and Attorney General. | Compiled and published in such form that annual accumulations can be inserted in a back pocket of the edition. |
| Kansas | None | | 1947 act ordered each agency to compile all rules in force but failed to direct publication. |
| Kentucky | Secretary of State | | Administrative Code supplemented by an Administrative Register. |
| Maryland | Clerk of Court of Appeal and Department of Legislative Reference | | |
| Massachusetts | | | 1945 act repealed former requirement that all regulations were to be included in the annual report of each officer. Most of these reports are published. |
| Michigan | Secretary of State | Joint Interim Legislative Committee reviews administrative rules upon promulgation by the agency. It may suspend the rule pending action by the legislature. Rules transmitted to legislature for approval or disapproval. | Published in Administrative Code. Supplement every 3 months by an edition called the Register. The Code is to be revised at least every 5 years. |
| Minnesota | Secretary of State | Provision for hearing and notice of hearing to be sent to trade groups and others registered with the Secretary of State prior to the final adoption of any new rule. Interested persons may request reconsideration and public hearing of any rule after its adoption. | Law provides for periodical publication of all rules filed with the Secretary of State. Pending an appropriation each agency is publishing its own rules and regulations. |
| Missouri | Secretary of State | | Published compilation to be supplemented monthly. Revision of compilation required every two years. |

APPENDIX TO THE

| State (1) | Central Depository (2) | General Review of Rules (3) | Publication of Rules (4) |
|---|---|--|--|
| Nebraska | Secretary of State and Clerk of the Legislature | Approval by Attorney General and review by the Legislature. | Published and circulated by each agency in such manner as to bring attention of affected persons to the existence and scope of the rules. |
| New York | Secretary of State | | Published in looseleaf form. Now contains five volumes of 4,000 pages. |
| North Carolina | Secretary of State | | |
| North Dakota | Attorney General | Attorney General must give opinion as to calidity. The rule and his opinion must be filed with the clerk of courts and with the secretary of the state bar. | |
| Ohio | | | Each agency must compile and publish and have available for general distribution in book and pamphlet form all general administrative rules. |
| Oregon | Secretary of State | | Printed as an appendix to the session law. |
| Pennsylvania | | | Publication of all rules 30 days after promulgation is the obligation of the promulgating agency. (Act 541, Session of 1947.) |
| South Carolina | Secretary of State | | Printed as an appendix to the session law. |
| Tennessee | Secretary of State | | |
| Virginia ² | Director of the Division of Statutory Research and Drafting | Public hearing and approval by the Commission on Administrative Agencies. | Publication called the Administrative Code of Virginia. Published in such form that it may be supplemented. |
| Wisconsin | | | Publication in the Wisconsin Red Book to be revised frequently. |
| Model Law of the National Congress of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws | Secretary of State | In judicial review of contested cases, the Model Law restricts consideration to the record from the adjudication of the agency. With the court's permission, new evidence may be heard either by the court or the case may be remanded to the administrative agency. | The Model Law provides that the Secretary of State shall compile, index and publish such rules supplemented by a monthly bulletin. |

¹ Refers only to those administrative agencies which are staffed by members of a profession or calling to regulate and/or license members of their professions. Such agencies as the Public Utility Commission are not so regulated nor are their regulations published.

APPENDIX B

A Proposed Act Providing Amendments to Act 442, Approved June 4, 1945, P. L. 1388

AN ACT

To amend the act, approved the fourth day of June, one thousand nine hundred forty-five (Pamphlet Laws 1388), entitled, "An act relating to the practice, procedure, regulations and adjudications of departments, departmental administrative boards and commissions, independent administrative boards and commissions, officers and other administrative agencies of this Commonwealth, and judicial review thereof; and preserving equitable jurisdiction in certain cases," by redefining "regulation"; changing provisions governing promulgation of regulations; imposing duties on the Department of State; extending the grounds for refusing to affirm adjudications of agencies; requiring all appeals to be taken to the Superior Court; and enumerating the agencies affected and the extent to which they are affected.

The General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania hereby enacts as follows:

Section 1. Clause (e) of section two of the act, approved the fourth day of June, one thousand nine hundred forty-five (Pamphlet Laws 1388), entitled "An act relating to the practice, procedure, regulations and adjudications of departments, departmental administrative boards and commissions, independent administrative boards and commissions, officers and other administrative agencies of this Commonwealth, and judicial review thereof; and preserving equitable jurisdiction in certain cases," is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 2. Definitions.—The following words and terms shall have the following meanings unless the context clearly indicates otherwise.

* * * * *

(e) "Regulation" means any rule, regulation or order [in the nature of a rule or regulation, generally applicable to the public, promulgated by an agency authorized by statute so to do, but shall not be construed to include the name or facts of any adjudication giving rise to such regulation] of general application and future effect, promulgated by an agency under statutory authority, prescribing the practice or procedure before such agency or interpreting or implementing any statute enforced or administered by such agency.

Section 2. Section twenty-one of said act, as amended by the act, approved the seventh day of July, one thousand nine hundred forty-seven (Pamphlet Laws 1367), is hereby further amended to read as follows:

Section 21. Regulations.—[All regulations of any agency which are in effect on the effective date of this act, or which shall be adopted thereafter, shall have no effect, unless they are printed and made available, upon written request, within thirty days after the date of adoption.] All regulations of any agency which are in effect on the effective date of these amendments, or which shall be adopted prior to the first day of December, one thousand nine hundred forty-nine shall expire on the first day of January one thousand nine hundred fifty, unless a copy thereof, certified by the executive officer, chairman, or secretary of the agency and approved as to legality by the Department of Justice, is filed in the Department of State, in such form and size as shall be prescribed by the Department of State, and copies thereof are made available by the adopting agency, upon written request, prior to the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred fifty. Regulations adopted after the thirtieth day of November, one thousand nine hundred forty-nine, shall have no effect unless a copy thereof, certified by the executive officer, chairman, or secretary of the agency and approved as to legality by the Department of Justice, is filed in the Department of State, in such form and size as shall be prescribed by the Department of State, and copies thereof are made available by the adopting agency, upon written request, within thirty days after the date of adoption.

Section 3. Said act is hereby amended by adding, after section twenty-one thereof, a new section to read as follows:

Section 22. Permanent Record of Regulations.—The Department of State shall maintain a permanent record of all regulations filed with it. Such record may be in the form of microfilm or other reproductions, in which event the original certified and approved copies need not be retained. The Department of State shall furnish certified copies of any regulation filed with it, upon the payment of the charges made for certified copies of other records on file in the department. The Department of State shall prepare and publish, in such form and at such time or times as it shall determine, an index of all regulations on file with it and periodic supplements thereto. The Department of State shall have power to adopt and enforce rules governing the physical form and size of regulations to be filed with it, and such other rules as it deems necessary in carrying out its functions under the provisions of this act.

Section 4. Section thirty-four of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 34. Adjudications; Service.—All adjudications shall be in writing, shall contain findings [and the reasons for the adjudication] of fact, a discussion of the questions of fact and law involved, conclusions of law, and an order or decree, and shall be served upon all parties or their counsel personally, or by mail. If service is made by mail the date of mailing shall be the date of service.

Section 5: Said act is hereby amended by adding, after section thirty-five thereof, a new section to read as follows:

Section 36. Notice to Department of Justice.—Before notice of any hearing leading to an adjudication is given, the agency shall submit the matter to its representative in the Department of Justice, who shall pass upon the legality of the proposed action or defense.

Section 6. Sections forty-four, forty-five and fifty-one of said act are hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 44. Disposition of Appeal.—The court to which the appeal is taken shall hear the appeal without a jury on the record certified by the agency. After hearing, the court shall affirm the adjudication unless it shall find that the same is in violation of the constitutional rights of the appellant, or is not in accordance with law, or that the provisions of sections thirty-one to thirty-five inclusive of this act have been violated in the proceeding before the agency, or that any finding of fact made by the agency and necessary to support its adjudication is not supported by substantial evidence in view of the record, or that the adjudication is arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion or otherwise not in accordance with law. If the adjudication is not affirmed, the court may set aside or modify it, in whole, or in part, or may remand the the proceeding to the agency for further disposition in accordance with the order of the court.

Section 45. Appellate Review.—The agency, or any party affected by any decision of a court on an appeal from adjudication may, within thirty days of the filing of such decision, appeal to the Superior [or Supreme] Court [as in other cases].

[Exemptions]

Section 51. (a) None of the provisions of this act, except sections twenty-one to twenty-three inclusive, shall apply to proceedings before the Department of Revenue, Auditor General, Board of Finance and Revenue or Secretary of the Commonwealth, involving the original settlement, resettlement, review or refund of taxes, bonus, interest or payments made into the State Treasury, or judicial review of such proceedings. The provisions of sections thirty-one to forty-five inclusive shall not apply to an adjudication of an agency from which an appeal to a court is provided by another statute, or to an adjudication of an agency, whose adjudication is provided by another statute as final.]

Application of Act

Section 51. (a) Except as hereinafter provided, the provisions of sections twenty-one and twenty-two shall apply to all agencies of the Commonwealth.

(b) Sections forty-one to forty-five inclusive of this act shall not apply to adjudications of the Banking Board or of the Building and Loan Board.

(c) All of the provisions of this act shall apply to the following agencies: (1) Department of Agriculture; (2) Department of State; (3) Insurance Department (except as hereinafter provided); (4) Board of Property; (5) State Council of Education; (6) State Board of Censors; (7) State Board of Medical Education and Licensure; (8) State Board of Pharmacy; (9) State Dental Council and Examining Board; (10) State Board of Optometrical Examiners; (11) State Board of Osteopathic Examiners; (12) Osteopathic Surgeons' Examining Board; (13) State Board of Examiners for the Registration of Nurses; (14) State Board of Veterinary Medical Examiners; (15) State Board for the Examination of Public Accountants; (16) State Board of Examiners of Architects; (17) State Registration Board of Professional Engineers; (18) State Real Estate Commission; (19) State Board of Private Business Schools; (20) Pennsylvania Securities Commission; (21) State Soil Conservation Commission; (22) Water and Power Resources Board; (23) Flood Control Commission; (24) Anthracite Mine Inspectors' Examining Board; (25) Mine Inspectors' Examining Board for the Bituminous Coal Mines; (26) State Bridge and Tunnel Commission; (27) Pennsylvania Parkway Commission; (28) Sanitary Water Board; (29) State Board of Undertakers; (30) State Workmen's Insurance Board; (31) Industrial Board; (32) State Board of Vocational Rehabilitation; (33) State Welfare Commission; (34) State Athletic Commission; (35) State Board of Public Assistance; (36) Pennsylvania Aeronautics Commission; (37) State Board of Housing; (38) State Civil Service Commission; (39) State Tax Equalization Board.

[(c)] (d). This act shall not apply to actions of the Secretary of Banking in the taking possession and liquidation of banking institutions, and building and loan associations or to actions of the Insurance Commissioner in the taking possession and liquidation of insurance companies, nor to the Milk Control Commission.

SUMMARY

I. Increases in the salaries of state and public school employees automatically produce higher retirement allowances. The Commonwealth and the school district payments for employees' retirement are directly related to the payroll because that portion of the final retirement allowance which is composed of the "employer's" contribution is calculated by multiplying a fraction by the "final salary" and the years of service. Recent increases in salary and wage schedules have resulted in higher "employer" costs for both the State Employees' and the Public School Employees' Retirement Systems.

II. Both the Public School Employees' and the State Employees' Retirement Systems are financed on an actuarial basis by regular contributions from the employer and the employee over the period of active service of each employee. In the State System, the Commonwealth makes the employer contribution; in the Public School System, the school districts and the Commonwealth share the employer's cost. The difference between the retirement provisions of the two systems are as follows:

A. The superannuation allowance of state employees is calculated to equal one-half of the final salary (average of the last five years of service) after 25 years of service with retirement at age 60. The superannuation allowance of public school employees is calculated to equal one-half of the final salary (average of the last ten years of service) after 40 years of service with retirement at age 62. Public school employees must serve ten years before they are eligible for a superannuation retirement allowance. No minimum service period is specified for state employees' retirement.

B. State employees, but not school employees, are eligible for withdrawal allowances based upon the state's as well as the member's contributions. State employees are eligible for withdrawal allowances under the following conditions:

1. Involuntary separation after ten years of service;
2. Voluntary or involuntary separation after 25 years of service;

C. State employees are not eligible for disability retirement allowances until after five years of service. Public school employees are not eligible for disability retirement allowances until after ten years of service. Public school employees have the option of receiving a full disability allowance or a reduced disability allowance—reduced by virtue of the retiree's selection of the option that upon the death of the member any balance remaining in the employee's account shall be paid to a beneficiary. No option is provided in the State Employees' Retirement Act; a beneficiary is named to which any balance remaining from the employee's contributions is payable upon the death of the member.

Both employer and employee contribution rates for the State Employees' Retirement System are higher than for the School Employees' Retirement System.

III. Approximately 50 per cent of the retired school employees receive full annuity benefits of less than $1,000 per year. Approximately 4 per cent have a full annuity of over $2,000. The full annuities of professional employees fall most frequently between $1,000 and $1,200 per year; while those of the nonprofessional employees and disability retirees fall most frequently between $200 and $400. The average full annuity is $975.14 per year for public school employees.

For retired members of the state employees' system, slightly less than 50 per cent have full annuity benefits of $600 per year; 10 per cent have a full annuity of $2,000 or more. The average full annuity for state employees on retirement is $954.10.

The term "full annuity" used here refers to the amount a retiree could have received had he selected "the single life annuity," an annuity not reduced by the selection of any of the optional methods of receiving benefits available to members of both systems.

CHAPTER I

The State and School Employment Pattern

The Commonwealth's share of the cost of both the State Employees' Retirement System and the Public School Employees' Retirement System is increasing. A number of factors have contributed to this increase of which the following are the most important:

- (1) Salaries and wages have increased more than was anticipated when the systems were established.
- (2) Retirees are living longer than had been predicted initially.
- (3) Interest rates on the funds' investments have declined.
- (4) The extension of the State Employees Retirement System to classes of employees not initially covered.

1. Introduction

The Public School Employees' and the State Employees' Retirement Systems are financed on an actuarial basis. The actuarial plans in use in both systems provide for regular contributions by both the employer and the employee over the period of active service of each employee. Both employer and employee contributions are calculated to provide for an annual retirement allowance of approximately one-half the final salary for those with 25 years of state service or 40 years of school service. The retirement allowance is accumulated during the active service of each employee member, but payment is deferred until retirement.

In the Public School Retirement System, the Commonwealth and the school districts share the employer's costs. In the State Employees' System, the Commonwealth pays the total employer's costs. The actual yearly payments needed from the employers are calculated by the actuaries. The amounts are determined so as to be sufficient to provide reserves to balance the present value of future liabilities payable from the funds. In accordance with the original act, further appropriations are made to amortize the liabilities assumed by the employers on account of employees with service prior to the inauguration of the system.

It is worth while to note the nature of the liabilities and the assets of a retirement system. The liabilities are the total present value of the anticipated expenditures. These expenditures can at best be estimated, since they involve the payments to individuals which are expected to be made in the future. Thus, if the entire wage scale is raised, the final salaries at which employees will terminate their service is raised and the expected future payments are raised. At once, the present value of the liability of the system is raised.

The assets are of two sorts: (1) the actual cash reserves on hand, and (2) the present value of future contributions. The present value of a dollar receivable or payable in the future, is a sum of money which, if allowed to accumulate interest, will produce a dollar at due date.

It is the duty of the actuary to certify to the board the amount needed so that members now in the system are provided for adequately.

Any legislative changes in the amount or arrangement of benefits which liberalize or extend the systems are of prime consideration in the future costs to the Commonwealth. In addition, recent changes in the "pattern" of school district and state employment have resulted in increasing retirement costs to the Commonwealth, even without statutory changes.

2. State and School Employees' Salaries and Wages

Recent increases in salary and wage schedules and the increase in the number of state and school employees have resulted not only in higher costs to the Commonwealth for total wage and salary payments but also in higher costs for employee retirement.

As of June 30, 1947, there were 81,105 active members of the Public School System; and as of May 31, 1948, there were 37,303 active members of the State System. Table 1 shows the membership, total payroll, and average earnings of the active members of the State and the Public School Systems for each year since 1942. Both systems increased in total membership and payroll over the fiscal period 1942 to 1947. Membership increased 11 per cent for the State and 4 per cent for the Public School System. The Public School System includes administrative, clerical, and janitorial employees, as well as professional employees. It is estimated that one-seventh of the school district payroll goes to non-professional employees. Membership in the State System includes all classes of state employees. The payroll of members in the State System increased 56 per cent, and the payroll of the Public System increased 36 per cent between 1942 and 1947. For the same period the average salary increased 40 per cent for the state employee members and 30 per cent for the school employee members. Additional increases in salaries are guaranteed professional members of the Public School System by the Act of Legislature of 1947.¹

Table 2 shows the mandated salaries of teachers as increased by the sessions of 1945 and 1947. It will be observed that the last two sessions of the General Assembly increased the mandated minimum starting salaries a total of 83.3 per cent for elementary teachers in districts of the first class and 100 per cent in districts of the second, third, and fourth classes. Mandated minimum salaries plus increments for elementary teachers were increased 58.3 per cent for first class districts, 77.8 per cent for second class districts, 128.6 per cent for third class districts, and 190.9 per cent for fourth class districts.

The state allotments to school districts increased 157.4 per cent for all classes of districts between the fiscal periods ending in 1942 and 1948. Table 3 shows the total allotments paid by the State Department of Public Instruction to the local school districts for this period. These allotments are applicable to school costs including teachers' salaries.

Salary increases since 1942 for state employees ranged from 54 per cent for the lowest salary grades to 11 per cent for the highest salary grades. Table 4 shows the increases by salary grades of state employees from prior to the first cost-of-living raise of 1942 to the most recent increase of August, 1948.

3. Years of Service and Allowance Benefits of Present Pensioners and Active Members of the Retirement System

The actuarial calculations for the contributions necessary to produce a final retirement allowance of one-half of the annual salary are based on 40 years of service for school employees and 25 years of service for state employees.

Tabulations of the years of service of employees now on retirement show that a relatively high percentage of both systems has retired because of age with less than the service required to produce a retirement allowance of half their annual salary. The average number of years of service of state employees now retired is 19.7 years. Two-thirds had less than 25 years of service. Of the school employees now on superannuation retirement, the professional employees retired with an average (weighted) of 39 years of service, the nonprofessional with an average (weighted) of 21 years of service. Forty-one per cent of the professional and 95 per cent of the nonprofessional employees of the Public School System retired with less than 40 years of service. Tables 5 and 5-A show, by type of retirement allowance, the years of service of school and state employees now on retirement.

Because of the turnover in membership, only a part of state and school employees now in service will receive a retirement allowance under either system. Table 6 shows the number of years of service of the active membership of each system. It is noteworthy that the median years of service for state employees is between 5 and 8 years, and the median years of service for school employees is between 13 and 16 years. In both systems more employees are in the 1 to 4 years of service class than in any other four-year class.

The Joint State Government Commission's study of members of the State and Public School Systems on retirement as of October, 1948, shows that the average full annuity² for public school employees is $975.14. The average full annuity for state employees is $954.10. Slightly less than 50 per cent of the state employees have full annuity benefits of less than $600. Approximately 50 per cent of the school employees receive full annuity benefits of less than $1,000. Approximately 10 per cent of the state employees have a full annuity of $2,000 or more. About 4 per cent of the public school employees have a full annuity of over $2,000. Annuities of the professional employees of the public school system, i.e., teachers librarians, dietitians, etc., fall most frequently between $100 and $1,200 per year. While those of the nonprofessional employees, i.e., administrative, janitorial, etc., and disability retirees fall most frequently between $200 and $400 per year. Appendix Tables 5, 6, 7, and 8 show the amount of the full and actuarial allowance for both the state and the public school employees now on retirement.

4. Estimated Present Values of Jobs: Teachers on Mandated Minimum Salaries and State Employees

To determine the present value of jobs of State employees and of teachers, certain assumptions were made. It was assumed that an employee retires at age 62, dies at age 75, and that money brings 3 per cent interest. Adjustments in the computations of present values were made to cover the employee's risk of losing his job. The employee may lose his job for various reasons: he may resign, be discharged, become disabled, or die. Making the assumptions listed above, and using probabilities computed from data supplied by the actuaries of the two retirement systems, the present value of salaries and pensions which an employee can expect to receive is shown in Table 7.

For purposes of this computation, the average salary for the age groups was used to compute the present values of state employees' jobs, and the mandated minimum salary schedule in effect in fourth class school districts was used to compute the present values of teachers' jobs. Since the mandated minimum salaries are the same for both male and female teachers, no sex differentiation was made for the Public School System. In the long run women may expect to collect annuities for longer periods than men, but the difference will not appreciably change the relative positions of employees in the two systems.

For all ages of entry except the 55-year male state employee group, the present values of the school employees' jobs exceed those of the state employees.

CHAPTER II

The Public School Employees' Retirement System

The Public School Employees' Retirement System was established in 1917^a to become effective July 1, 1919. It was the first of the Pennsylvania State retirement systems.

1. Administration

The Public School Employees' Retirement Board, an administrative board in the Department of Public Instruction, is composed of eight members: the Superintendent of Public Instruction, chairman; the State Treasurer; one member appointed by the Governor; three members of the retirement association; one member elected by the board who is not an officer or employee of the State; and the Executive Secretary of the Pennsylvania State School Directors' Association. The members serve without compensation but are reimbursed for any necessary expenditures.

Members of the retirement board are trustees of the retirement fund. Within the limits imposed by law, they have exclusive control and management of the fund, including investments. Upon recommendation of the actuary of the retirement board, the board adopts necessary mortality tables, certifies rates of salary deduction, and certifies rates of state and local district contribution for new entrant employees (i.e., those hired since July 1, 1919). An annual report on the condition of the fund is prepared by the board for the Governor, designated state officials, the school districts, and the public.

The expenses of administering the system are paid from the interest earnings of the retirement fund in excess of four per cent. In years when the interest earnings are not sufficient, the balance required for administrative costs is paid by the Commonwealth from General Fund appropriations. Excess interest earnings were sufficient to meet all costs of administration from 1933 until 1947, when interest earnings had so declined that an appropriation was necessary from the General Fund. For the year ending June 30, 1947, administrative costs averaged $1.33 per member.

2. Membership

Membership in the Public School Employees' Retirement System is limited to persons employed on a full-time basis in the public school system of the Commonwealth: teachers, nurses, and other professional employees, as well as clerical, janitorial, and other nonprofessional employees. Membership is compulsory for new entrant employees. Membership was optional for present employees (i.e., those in the school service prior to July 1, 1919). The legislative sessions of 1923, 1927, 1931, 1935, 1939, and 1945 reopened, for limited periods of time, the option of joining the system and obtaining the benefits of "present employee membership." If this option was taken, the member was required to pay the back contributions between 1919 and the date of joining the system.

In addition to the employees of local school districts, membership also includes employees of state teachers' colleges, state institutions for the blind and deaf, the State Department of Public Instruction, and the State Council of Education.

Employees of the Department of Public Instruction are eligible for membership in either the State Employees' or the Public School Employees' System. Of the 442 department employees, 277 have joined the State System, 115 the Public School System, and the remaining 50 neither system.

Table 8 shows the active and retired membership in the Public School System as of June 30, 1947.

3. State Guarantee

All obligations of the retirement system are guaranteed by the Commonwealth: the payment of administrative costs, the creation and maintenance of necessary reserves, and interest at the rate of four per cent, compounded annually, on the employer and employee contributions. Interest earnings on the funds invested decreased from 1945 to 1947, but the reserves on which interest had to be paid increased.⁴

4. State and School District Contributions

In the Public School Employees' System, the Commonwealth and the school districts share the cost of the employer's or the state's annuity. A new entrant member, upon retirement, receives (1) an annuity purchased by his own contributions plus interest, called the member's annuity, and (2) an annuity from the state's and the school district's contributions called the state annuity. In addition to the member's and the state's annuity, a present employee receives a further state annuity for the period of service prior to July 1, 1919.

In order to provide reserves for the retirement of new entrant and present employee members, the state and the school districts contribute on the basis of a percentage of the payroll. Contributions on account of a new entrant member are placed in the Contingent Reserve Account while the employee is in active service and are transferred to the State Annuity Reserve Account when the employee retires. An amendment to the retirement act of 1945 requires that contributions on account of new entrant members be made at the rate necessary to meet the uncovered liabilities—the rate to be expressed as a fraction of the "salaries earnable" by new entrants. The actuary's report of 1947 recommended that the rate of contribution of the state and of school districts be increased from 2.88 to 3.12 per cent of the future payroll of new entrant members. The increase was attributed principally to the increase in salaries of member employees. Table 9 shows the present assets, the present value of state annuities payable from the account, and the present value of future appropriations payable to the Contingent Reserve Account for the years 1942 to 1947.

State and school district contributions on behalf of present employees accumulate in the State Annuity Reserve Account No. 2, and the allowances are paid from this account. When the retirement system was established in 1919, the Commonwealth and the school districts assumed the accrued liability for present employees for both the employers' and the members' contributions for service prior to 1919. It was originally planned that this accrued liability would be retired in 30 years. Both the state and local school districts were to pay semiannually into a special account, State Annuity Reserve Account No. 2, an amount equal to 2.8 per cent of the total compensation paid all members of the retirement system. Because the reserves were accumulating faster than had been anticipated, the rate of contribution was reduced. The General Assembly reduced the rate of state contribution to 2 per cent in 1925 and then to 1.6 per cent in 1933. As indicated by Table 10, the present value of the liabilities of the fund increased 21 per cent from 1942 to 1947, while the assets or fund reserves increased 8 per cent. Liabilities exceeded reserves by $11,356,083 in 1942 and by $22,989,831 in 1947.

5. Employee Contributions

The employee's or member's contribution is made as a payroll deduction at a rate determined by the age at which he becomes a contributor. The schedule of rates is computed by the actuary and adopted by the board. The rates are calculated to produce a member's annuity of approximately one-fourth of the final salary at retirement after 40 years of service. Rates are lower for men than for women.

Two schedules of rates are now in effect. In 1946 the actuary advised that the original rates were too low to produce at retirement an annuity equal to the state's annuity. In September, 1946, the new schedule of rates became effective for employees entering the school service after that date. These rates were based on the mortality tables, revised in the light of current mortality experience which showed that the life span has increased and that women are living longer than men.

For employees in service prior to September 1, 1946, the rates of contribution and the old mortality tables remain unchanged by virtue of an opinion of the Attorney General,* which reads in part as follows:

We recognize that over the course of years some hardship may be occasioned to the system and its administration but it is also our opinion that any deficiency occasioned by the fact that people live longer or that salaries have been increased beyond that which was contemplated at the time of passage of the act, is the obligation of the Commonwealth.

The rates of contribution effective for members entering service after September 1, 1946, range from 4.02 per cent for men and 4.10 per cent for women at age 18, to 6.36 per cent for men and 7.25 per cent for women at age 61. The old schedule of rates, applicable to members with service prior to September 1, 1946, ranges from 3.33 per cent for men and 3.69 per cent for women at age 18, to 5.30 per cent for men and 6.59 per cent for women at age 61. Table II gives the two schedules of rates.

A member may elect to stop contributing at age 62—the minimum age for superannuation retirement. However, the Commonwealth and the school district contributions continue until the employee reaches age 70—the age of compulsory retirement. A survey of the school employees now on superannuation retirement, made by the Joint State Government Commission, shows that 10 per cent of the present retirees elected to stop contributions at age 62. For this 10 per cent, the member's annuity is correspondingly reduced.

Where the member's contribution is over 5 per cent of his salary, the member, with the approval of the retirement board, may elect to contribute at 5 per cent, in which case the member's annuity payable upon retirement is less. In the Commission's survey, no instance was found where a member now on retirement elected to contribute at 5 per cent.

6. Employee Benefits

An employee separated from the service prior to retirement receives at least the full amount of his contributions plus interest compounded annually at four per cent. In case of death before retirement, the full amount of the member's contributions plus interest are paid to a beneficiary named by the member.

Three major classes of allowances are available to retired members of the Public School Employees' Retirement System:

(1) Withdrawal Allowances

If a member separates from the service before becoming eligible for superannuation or disability retirement, he has two options. He may receive his contributions plus interest in a lump sum at the time of separation, or he may receive an annuity computed only on the member's contributions and interest. The first payment of such annuity is deferred to the time when the member would be eligible for superannuation retirement had he not separated from the service. However, interest stops accumulating when the employee leaves active service. Only 10 members of the retirement system are now receiving this type of allowance.

(2) Disability Allowances

A minimum of 10 years' service is required for an employee to qualify for a disability retirement allowance. Applicants for such allowances must have their disability certified by a physician of the retirement board and must submit to an annual physical examination in order to continue on a disability allowance. Disability benefits may be discontinued or reduced by the board upon evidence that the beneficiary's earning capacity is fully or partially restored.

The disability allowance consists of: (a) an annuity which is the actuarial equivalent of the member's accumulated contributions plus interest, and (b) a state annuity which, together with the member's annuity, produces the equivalent of 1/90 of the member's "final salary" (i.e., average salary for the last 10 years) multiplied by the number of years of service. The law specifies that the allowance shall not be less than 30 per cent of the "final salary" unless the 30 per cent exceeds 8/9 of the allowance which would have been paid had retirement been deferred until the age of superannuation. In such case, the allowance shall be limited to 8/9 of the allowance payable at superannuation retirement.

Members retiring on disability allowances have two options: they may elect to receive the full allowance payable until death, or to receive a reduced annuity. The reduced annuity carries the proviso that upon death of the member any balance remaining from the member's contributions will be paid to a beneficiary named by him at the time of disability retirement. As of October, 1948, 1,056 members were receiving disability retirement allowances, of whom approximately 25 per cent elected to take the reduced allowance.

(3) Superannuation Retirement

To qualify for superannuation retirement, a school employee must have attained age 62 and have at least 10 years of service. The superannuation allowance is composed of a member's annuity, a state annuity, and a "further state annuity" for the years the member was in service prior to July 1, 1919.

The state's and the school districts' annual contributions on behalf of each member are calculated to give the employee an allowance at retirement of 1/160 of his final salary for each year of service. The final salary is the average salary paid for the last 10 years of service. If an employee, age 62, had served for 40 years, 20 of which were prior to 1919, and had a final salary of $2,000, the annual state allowance would be calculated as follows:

State Annuity—

$$1/160 \times $2,000 \times 40 \text{ yr.} = $500$$

"Further State Annuity" for Prior Service—

$$1/160 \times $2,000 \times 20 \text{ yr.} = $250$$

The member's contributions are calculated to produce an annuity equivalent to the state annuity. In this case where the member contributed for 20 years, the member's annuity would be approximately $250. The total allowance payable to a member retiring with 40 years of total service, including 20 years of service prior to 1919, at a final salary of $2,000, would be $500 + $250 + $250 or $1,000—one-half of the final salary.

A member eligible for superannuation retirement may elect to receive his allowance in one of the following arrangements:

- (a) Single life allowance payable to him until death;
- (b) Option 1—an allowance of lesser amount than the single life allowance, payable to him throughout his life with the proviso that any balance remaining upon his death shall be paid in a lump sum to a beneficiary designated by him;
- (c) Option 2—a life allowance payable to him until his death, and after his death payable in the same amount to a beneficiary designated by him;
- (d) Option 3—an allowance payable to him until death, and upon his death payable to the extent of one-half of the amount to a beneficiary designated by him;
- (e) Option 4—under which members are permitted to design their own scheme of annuity arrangements payable to the member or to one or more beneficiaries named by him. The annuity arrangement must be certified by the actuary and approved by the retirement board. The allowance may not exceed the actuarial value of the member's equity in the system.

7. Pensions for Former Teachers

The General Assembly has also provided a pension for public school classroom teachers, principals, or superintendents with at least 20 years' service, who separated from the service prior to July 1, 1919, and have not been engaged thereafter except temporarily. Pensions are also provided for teachers, principals, and superintendents with at least 14 years of service who separated from the service prior to July 1, 1919, on account of physical or mental disability and are still unable to teach. The state compensation is equal to 1/80 of the employee's final salary for each year of school service, but not less than $25 per month. These persons are expected to give reasonable assistance in any educational work at the request of school officials.

8. Transfer to Service Under the State Employees' Retirement System

Any contributor who ceases to be a public school employee and becomes a state employee and member of the State Employees' Retirement System may retain membership in the Public School Employees' Retirement System by leaving with the School Retirement Board all of his accumulated contributions. During the period of membership in the State System, interest continues to accumulate on the member's account. No credit is given for service rendered after the date of separation from the public school service. Rights to a disability retirement allowance are forfeited. In the computation of "final salary" the average salary used shall be that earned as a public school employee for the years preceding his separation, not to exceed 10 years.

When a former school employee reaches retirement age, if he is still a member of the State Employees' Retirement System and if he has left his contributions with the School Employees' Retirement System, he is entitled to receive a superannuation retirement allowance from the School Employees' Retirement System. The allowance is made up of the following parts:

- (1) A member's annuity purchased by the member's contributions plus accumulated interest.
- (2) A state annuity calculated on the basis of 1/160 of the average final salary earned while in school service, multiplied by the number of years of school service.

The State Employees' Retirement Act contains a similar provision regarding transfer from the State System to the Public School System.

CHAPTER III

State Employees' Retirement System

The State Employees' Retirement System was created by the Act of June 27, 1923, P. L. 858, to be established January 1, 1924. The second of the state-wide retirement systems, it was patterned closely after the Public School Employees' Retirement System.

1. Administration

The State Employees' Retirement Board is a departmental administrative board in the Department of State. By amendment to the act in 1937, it was transferred to the Treasury Department, and the State Treasurer was designated as chairman. In 1939, it was returned to the Department of State. The board consists of five members: the Secretary of the Commonwealth, chairman; the State Treasurer; one member appointed by the Governor; and two members from the retirement association. Members serve without compensation but are reimbursed for necessary expenditures.

Duties of the board are as follows:

1. To establish rules and regulations for the administration of the funds, accounts, and transactions of business.
2. To compile data necessary for actuarial evaluation of the fund.
3. To adopt mortality and other tables deemed necessary, on the basis of an actuarial evaluation and investigation into the mortality and service experience which must be conducted every five years; to certify rates of salary reduction necessary to pay the annuities; and to certify biennially, on the basis of estimates by the actuary, the amount of the appropriation required from the Commonwealth and other agencies.
4. To prepare an annual financial statement to be submitted to the Governor and other specified executive officers, showing the conditions of the funds and other data.
5. To keep a record of all its proceedings which shall be open to public inspection.

The staff of the board, including a secretary, an actuary, and such medical, clerical, and other employees as are necessary, are appointed by the Secretary of the Commonwealth with the approval of the Governor.

Administrative costs of the State System are paid from biennial appropriation from the General Fund. For the biennium 1945 to 1947 the total administrative cost was $139,532, or an average of $1.26 per member.

The State Employees' Retirement Board also administers the State Police Retirement System. The Municipal Employees' Retirement Act is under the administration of the State Board until such time as the Municipal Employees' Retirement System begins operation, and a separate board is organized.

Membership

Any person holding a state office or position, employed and paid on a yearly, monthly, per diem, or hourly basis, is eligible for membership in the retirement system. Persons employed on a per diem or hourly basis were admitted into the system by the 1947 General Assembly. Membership is restricted to persons employed at least 90 days or 750 hours in a year.

Membership has also been extended to employees in the county offices of the register of wills whose compensation is paid from Commonwealth moneys; to judges and their employees who are paid from state funds; to employees of The Pennsylvania State College, excepting those whose salaries are paid wholly from federal funds; and to members, officers, and employees of the General Assembly. Officers and employees of the Delaware River Joint Commission, the Interstate Commission on the Delaware River Basin, the Delaware River Toll Bridge Commission, and the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission are granted membership providing the respective commissions reimburse the Commonwealth for costs on account of the employees of these quasi-independent state agencies.

Membership is compulsory for all state employees entering state service after December 31, 1924, or for judges after the second Monday of January, 1930, and optional for all employees in state service before those dates. After the first six months of employment, membership as a new member is compulsory. Optional membership is provided for the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, the members of the General Assembly, the head or deputy heads of any administrative departmental board or commission, the board and commission members, the secretary to the Governor, the Budget Secretary, and legislative employees. Optional membership is also provided for persons over 50 years of age.

Original members in the State System are similar to present employee members in the Public School System. In the State System original membership includes the following: (1) any employee in state service prior to January 1, 1925, who elected to become a member; (2) judges in service on the second Monday of January, 1930; (3) members of the General Assembly who elected, on or before December 31, 1947, to become members of the retirement system; and (4) any other employee not previously classed as a state employee if membership in the retirement system is taken before December 31 following the effective date of the act under which such employee became eligible for membership. The Commonwealth has assumed the entire accrued liability for state and member contributions for service rendered prior to 1947 for members of the General Assembly, prior to 1930 for judges, and prior to 1925 for all original members.

A new member in the State System is the equivalent of a new entrant in the Public School System. New members are those who enter state service after December 31, 1924, or who elect not to avail themselves of the privilege of becoming original members.

Table 12 shows the active and retired membership of the State Employees' Retirement System as of May 31, 1947 and 1948.

3. State Guarantee

The Commonwealth guarantees all regular interest payable, the creation and maintenance of both state and member reserves, and the payment of all allowances granted by the board. All income, interest, and dividends derived from deposits and investments authorized by the retirement act must be used for the payment of the obligations of the Commonwealth. The legislature is charged with the duty of making an appropriation sufficient to provide for the needs of the system as estimated by the retirement board.

Interest at the rate of four per cent compounded annually is guaranteed by the Commonwealth on the members' and the State's reserves.

4. State Contribution

The Commonwealth is responsible for the cost of the employer's or state's share of the retirement allowances except for the payments in behalf of employees of the quasi-independent boards and commissions. The independent agencies contribute to the State Employees' Retirement Fund the amount necessary to build up the reserves on account of their respective employees. The Commonwealth is in no way liable for payments due the fund from these quasi-independent agencies.

The total allowance paid to an employee upon retirement consists of a member's annuity from the member's accumulated contributions and a state annuity. In the case of an original employee, a further state annuity is paid for the period of service prior to 1930 for judges, prior to 1947 for members of the General Assembly, and prior to 1923 for all other members.

State reserves for the retirement of new members and original members are accumulated in separate accounts.

The contributions of the Commonwealth from the General Fund and special operating funds and from the independent agencies are accumulated in the Contingent Reserve Account for the retirement of new members. Funds are transferred from the Contingent Reserve Account to the State Annuity Reserve Account upon the retirement of a new member.

The amounts of the state appropriations to the Contingent Reserve Account are certified by the retirement board as necessary to provide during the prospective service of each new member employee the reserve required at the time of retirement. The amounts certified are computed to bear a ratio to the "salary earnable" by each new member and are to remain constant during his entire period of active service.

Table 13 shows the state contribution on behalf of new members. From 1942 to 1948 the state's contribution per each new member increased from $22.01 to $49.18, an increase of 123.44 per cent.

Table 14 presents data on the present assets, the present value of liabilities on account of future annuities payable, and the present value of prospective contributions payable to the Contingent Reserve Fund on account of new members. From 1942 to 1948 assets doubled; however, the liabilities quadrupled. For the same period present value of state contributions payable to this fund increased from $1.2 million to $14.6 million.

The state reserves for the retirement of original members are accumulated in and allowances are paid out of the State Annuity Reserve Account No. 2. When the retirement system was inaugurated the Commonwealth assumed the accrued liability for the members' as well as for the state's contribution for prior service. The original plan was to retire 1/25 of the accrued liability each year. At this rate the liability on account of prior service should have been retired by 1950. Successive legislative action has increased the liability as new classes of state employees have been admitted as original members. The accrued liability has been further increased both because of recent increases in salaries of active members and because the longevity of retirees has exceeded original estimates.

Table 15 shows the average contribution on behalf of original members. From 1942 to 1948 the state's contribution increased from $577.89 per original member in active service for the year ending 1942 to $864.10 per member in 1948—an increase of 50 per cent.

As shown in Table 16, the present value of the contributions payable by the State which are needed to balance the present assets and the present value of liabilities (on account of future annuities payable) increased from $9.6 million in 1942 to $11.8 million in 1948—an increase of 22 per cent.

5. Member Contribution

The original State Employees' Retirement Act gave members the option of contributing either on the 1/100 or the 1/160 basis. During 1931 and 1937 members were permitted to transfer to the 1/100 class.* (See Sec. 8, (3).) In 1937 the 1/100 contribution basis was made compulsory for all members entering the service after June 1, 1937. This amendment further required that for purposes of computing the state annuity of members who transferred from the 1/160 to the 1/100 class, the time spent in the 1/100 and the 1/160 class should be apportioned. As of May 31, 1948, there were 812 active members on the 1/160 basis and 36,491 on the 1/100 basis.

Members contribute according to a schedule of percentages of their salaries. The percentages vary according to age of entrance of the members. A member's ratio remains constant during the entire period of his active service. The contributions of members in the 1/100 class are higher than those in the 1/160 class.

The state and member contributions for the 1/100 class are calculated to produce a retirement allowance of one-half of the final salary after 25 years of service. Two schedules of contribution rates are in effect for members contributing on the 1/100 basis, depending upon the date of entry of the member into the system. The actuarial investigation of the mortality experience reported in 1947 showed that the effective rates were too low in view of the changing mortality experience. The retirement board adopted a new schedule of rates for member contribution and new mortality tables effective for members entering the system after June 1, 1948. The new schedule provided separate rates for male and female contributors. Table 17 shows the schedules of rates of contribution effective for members entering the system before and after June 1, 1948.

When the required contribution rate exceeds 7 per cent, a member may, with the approval of the retirement board, elected to contribute at 7 per cent.* Members may discontinue contributions after reaching the age of superannuation retirement—age 60. However, the state's contribution on behalf of such members is not reduced.

6. Employee Benefits

A member separating from the service before becoming eligible for a retirement allowance receives the amount of his accumulated deductions plus interest compounded at four per cent annually.

Three classes of retirement allowances as available to members of the State Employees' Retirement System:

(1) Withdrawal Allowances

If a member separates from the state service before becoming eligible for superannuation, disability, or one of the other withdrawal allowances, he may elect to receive (a) the full amount of his contributions plus the interest in a lump sum, or (b) an annuity composed solely of his own contributions. The annuity may begin immediately upon his separation from service or it may be deferred until the age of superannuation retirement.

There are three conditions under which an employee may elect to receive either the lump sum of the accumulated deductions credited to his account or an allowance composed of an annuity purchased by the member's accumulated deductions plus the state's contributions on his behalf. These conditions are: (a) involuntary separation from service after the completion of at least 10 years' service; (b) voluntary or involuntary separation from service after the completion of 25 years' service; and (c) separation from the service by a member of the General Assembly who served during at least five regular sessions. The state annuity given under these conditions has the same present value as the state annuity receivable under superannuation retirement, but the annual payments are reduced because the annuity is begun before the usual retirement age.

2) Disability Allowances

At least five years' service is required for a member to qualify for a disability retirement allowance. The disability must be certified by a physician of the retirement board and approved by the board. During the continuance of a disability allowance, the member must submit to a medical examination at least once in six months. Disability allowance may be reduced or discontinued by the board upon evidence that the earning capacity of the member is partially or fully restored.

The disability allowance is computed as follows: (a) member's annuity purchased by his own accumulated contributions; (b) a state annuity which, together with the member's annuity, is sufficient to produce 1/90 of the final salary multiplied by the number of years of service. The minimum disability allowance is 30 per cent of the final salary unless the 30 per cent exceeds 8/9 of the allowance payable had retirement been deferred to the age of superannuation. In this case, the state annuity granted is the amount which is sufficient to make the total disability allowance equal to 8/9 of the rate of allowance had retirement been deferred until superannuation age. Upon the death of a member retired for disability, any balance in the member's account is paid to a named beneficiary.

3) Superannuation Allowances

Members are eligible for superannuation retirement at any time after reaching age 60. The member and state contributions on behalf of the member are calculated to produce an allowance of one-half of the final salary after 25 years of service terminating at age 60. If a member age 60 retires with a final salary of $3,000 after 5 years of total service, 5 years of which are prior service rendered before January 1, 1923, the yearly allowance payable is calculated as follows:

(a) State annuity—

$$1/100 \times \text{final salary} \times \text{years of service, or}$$

$$1/100 \times $3,000 \times 25 = $750$$

(b) Further state annuity on account of years of prior service—

$$1/100 \times \text{final salary} \times \text{years of prior service, or}$$

$$1/100 \times $3,000 \times 5 = $150$$

(c) Member's annuity—the annuity which can be purchased by a member's accumulated deductions. The rates of contribution have been calculated to produce at retirement an annuity approximately equal to the state annuity for a number of years corresponding to the number of years the member contributed to the fund. In this case, the member contributed for 20 years. The annuity purchasable from the member's accumulated contributions should amount to approximately $600 per year.

The superannuation allowance payable is the total of the state annuity of $750, the further state annuity of $150, and the member's annuity of approximately $600—a total of $1,500.

At the time of retirement, a member may elect to receive his benefits in a retirement allowance; or in case the full retirement allowance is less than $10 per month, he may elect to receive in a lump sum the full amount of state and member accumulated contributions standing to his credit. When a member elects to receive his benefits in a retirement allowance, he may also elect to receive either a single life annuity payable to him until death or the actuarial equivalent of the single life annuity reduced by one of the following options or arrangements of benefits which are identical to the options available to school employees:

Option 1—a single life allowance reduced in amount by virtue of the proviso that upon the death of the member any balance remaining in the member's account is to be paid to a beneficiary designated at the time of retirement.

Option 2—a life allowance payable to the member throughout his life and continuing in the same amount to a beneficiary designated by the member.

Option 3—a life allowance payable to the member throughout his life and continuing in one-half the amount to a beneficiary designated by the member.

Option 4—any arrangement of benefits designated by the member which is certified by the actuary and approved by the retirement board. The actuarial value of the arrangement of benefits under this option may not exceed the actuarial value of the single life annuity.

² The full annuity is the amount which a member would receive had he selected a single life annuity not reduced by virtue of the fact that he elected one of the optional methods of retirement by which provision was made for the benefits to be paid to a beneficiary after the member's death.

⁸ 1931, P. L. 519, and 1937, P. L. 682.

⁹ With the approval of the board, a member formerly could elect to contribute at 5 per cent if the required contribution exceeded 5 per cent. This option was repealed in 1937, P. L. 683.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

To the Members of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Pursuant to Senate Resolution No. 124, May 27, 1947, concurred in by the House of Representatives, June 11, 1947, I have the honor to present herewith a catalog of historical buildings, sites and archaeological remains in Pennsylvania.

In accordance with Act No. 4, Session of 1943, Section 1, the Commission created a subcommittee and appointed a committee of advisors to work in collaboration with the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission to survey and prepare a list of the historic buildings and sites which are of distinctive significance and value to the history or archaeology of the Commonwealth.

Those buildings, sites or archaeological remains whose preservation should be of prime concern to the General Assembly are designated in the list which follows.

On behalf of the Commission, the cooperation of the members of the historical subcommittee, the advisory committee and the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission is gratefully acknowledged.

WELDON B. HEYBURN, Chairman.

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is rich in historical treasure of interest not only to the citizens of the State, but to the people of the entire country, since it was here that the history of the United States as a nation began, and here that many of America's founders had their homes.

In addition to the buildings in which much of the country's early history was written, and the homes of men who contributed to its writing, Pennsylvania has also the sites and buildings which mark the beginning of both the State and Nation's industrial heritage.

Monuments to Pennsylvania's long established principle of religious tolerance are the early churches and religious settlements which found welcome here in colonial times.

Relics, buildings and sites connected with the pioneer days of the country commemorate the successful struggle of a people to conquer new land and hold it against hostile interference.

Although concern often has been expressed over the loss to the public of many places of historical interest, no extensive listing of the still existing historical buildings, sites and archaeological remains has been available heretofore for the guidance of those interested in their preservation. It is the purpose of this catalog to show those places of historical value whose preservation is of greatest importance to the Commonwealth.

In many cases, the buildings, sites and remains designated as being of primary importance are, at present, in the hands of organizations and groups who are able and competent guardians of this heritage of the State. These structures are included in this listing because, while the present owners and administrators are performing a great service to the public in caring for these places, the time may come when lack of local interest, or loss of funds, prevents their continued supervision and it then may be the duty of the Commonwealth to assume responsibility for the continued preservation of these historically important sites.

Pennsylvania has been fortunate in the past in having patriotic citizens and public spirited organizations who have interested themselves in these symbols of the State's past and who have purchased and provided for the preservation of many buildings and landmarks. It has been through the efforts of these citizens that many of the historical shrines are preserved today, since these private groups were able to act more quickly to prevent demolition or destruction than would have been possible for the Commonwealth government.

Nevertheless, historical landmarks and buildings worthy of preservation already have been lost for want of prompt action or of anticipating legislation which would have prevented the disposal of property of historical significance until the General Assembly could move to consider assuming responsibility for its preservation.

It is the recommendation of the Joint State Government Commission that legislation be passed to prohibit the destruction or sale of any of the buildings or sites designated in the following listing as being of prime historical importance, until the proposed action has been brought to the attention of the General Assembly at its regular session. It is further recommended,

The wealth of places having historical associations made the choice of the most important a difficult one. Anyone reading the listing of famous buildings and sites in a county with which he is familiar, undoubtedly will feel that many more should have been designated as being of primary concern to the General Assembly. However, it was felt that the designations should be made only for those buildings, sites and remains which were of the greatest interest, since this catalog is intended to serve as a guide for the preservation of the historic structures and landmarks which are of prime concern to the Commonwealth.

The listing which follows presents only items of great general interest. No attempt has been made to include all items of importance in connection with specific historical events.

This catalog lists the historical buildings, sites and remains by counties, arranged in alphabetical order. Wherever possible, each listing includes a brief description of the event or events which give the building or site historical or archaeological importance, the location, present ownership and state of repair. In designating the places of primary significance, the following standards were used as guides:

1. The building served as the residence or was the birthplace of some notable person.

2. The building was a meeting place for some historically important gathering.

3. The structure or site was the first location of some important industrial, social or religious development.

4. The building once housed an industry which played an important role in connection with an event of historical importance.

5. The building, or site, although not associated with a significant event or notable person, is representative of the architecture and mode of life of a period or culture in the growth of the State.

In judging each item, the following factors were given consideration:

1. Generality of historical significance.—An old homestead may be worth preserving because it once served as the home of the first settler of a particular region; however, unless the homestead is architecturally unique, or the first settler was prominent in other than purely local affairs, it may not be advisable to finance restoration or preservation out of State Funds.

2. Uniqueness.—A structure may be a splendid example of the architecture of a given period or culture and yet its restoration or preservation at Commonwealth expense may be difficult to justify because numerous similar examples of the architectural type may be scattered through the State and already marked for preservation for additional reasons.

3. Accessibility.—An historically significant structure, by virtue of changes in modes of transportation, may have become virtually inaccessible to visitors.

4. Present condition of the structure.—Faithful restoration is costly and often impossible where extensive records are unavailable.

The preservation of the items designated by ★ should be of prime concern to the Commonwealth.

BUDGET ADDRESS OF GOVERNOR JAMES H. DUFF BEFORE A JOINT SESSION OF THE HOUSE AND SENATE IN THE HALL OF THE HOUSE, HARRISBURG, PENNSYLVANIA, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1949

Mr. Lieutenant Governor, Mr. Speaker, Members of the General Assembly:

The Budget Message, with the amplifying statements accompanying it, will be in your hands at the end of this Joint Session.

I know you will agree that a visual examination of the Budget, with the accompanying data, is far ahead of any endeavor on my part at this time to take it up with you verbally.

Therefore, since I have the privilege of your attention, I would like to discuss briefly several subjects about which I think a more general understanding is necessary than that indicated either in my January fourth message or in the Budget data.

By dealing only with these specific subjects now, I do not want to be understood to minimize in any particular whatsoever any of the recommendations that I had the honor to present to you in my message of the fourth of January.

HOUSING

It seems clear to me that at the State level we have the inescapable responsibility of doing something about the housing situation, with particular emphasis on rental properties in the low income brackets. This responsibility is so great that we cannot depend entirely upon action by the Federal Government. Every level of government must accept responsibility for some essential contribution to such a program.

It has been demonstrated that private enterprise at rentals presently being received for low income houses has not been able or willing to build sufficient houses to meet the demand. I am a firm believer in the proposition that Government should not do things for people that they can do for themselves. The low rental housing situation is a case where people have not been able to produce houses; they must have a place to live. This clearly seems to be a situation where Government at all levels must be concerned with the problem.

After studying the situation, I feel that it would be unwise for the Commonwealth itself to go into the business of building houses. I am convinced that such a program can best be advanced by the Commonwealth subsidizing private enterprise builders up to the point where it will be possible for them to erect houses in the low income group.

I, therefore, propose that the Commonwealth appropriate the sum of fifteen million dollars for subsidies, in the coming biennium, for public housing, especially in the low income brackets. From data presently available, it is fair assumption that a subsidy of between 25% and 35% of cost will make feasible a substantial public program in the Commonwealth in this type of rental houses.

On the basis of these figures, a subsidy of fifteen million dollars would provide for the erection of fifty million dollars in middle and low income bracket houses under this program.

If the Federal Government matches or doubles the State's subsidy in addition to its own separate program, as has been suggested, it would make possible a program of one hundred or one hundred fifty million dollars of low income bracket houses in the Commonwealth during the coming biennium at the State level.

Legislation will be presented for competitive bidding by those desirous of building these houses under State subsidy; the fixing of the rentals to be paid; the places and types of houses to be built; and the selection of the localities in which the need is most urgent; as well as other provisions to make this program workable on a competitive basis so as to best serve the needs of the people of the Commonwealth.

I feel that in this program there should be a preference for veterans, if such preference can legally be established.

This program is an entirely new department in Pennsylvania. No such activity at the State level has ever been attempted before. It is a necessary beginning—and only a beginning, because the problem is great.

However, this program, plus the Federal program which is definitely assured, will start a real onslaught against the housing shortage in Pennsylvania. It will probably afford as many houses during the coming two years as is practical with the materials and labor available, when taking into account the vast other building construction operations in the Commonwealth.

The low income housing shortage is a very important social problem. Therefore, our approach to it should be with a broad perspective and freed from any narrow or partisan bias. It is certainly something we have to do something about.

HIGHWAYS

As I related to you in January, the Highway Department has informed me that they cannot longer continue to carry forward the highway program that they deem vitally necessary on the basis of the present gas tax. This situation confronts us by reason of our great highway mileage and the vast increase in cost both of building and of upkeep. This difficulty is further expanded as the result of the vast amount of deferred maintenance and construction that accumulated in the Commonwealth during the war period—which backlog has not been caught up with.

The magnitude of the demand for this work is clearly indicated; and it still remains, despite the fact that in 1948 the Highway Department carried on the greatest construction program in its history.

Every user of our highways realizes that in every part of the Commonwealth, in built up areas, in the rush hours, both morning and evening, there is a tremendous waste of time and great inconvenience to everyone caught in these daily traffic slow downs.

If these delays were expressed in terms of the earning power of the people who waste their time daily in these jams, it would amount to such a vast sum that no one considering them would hesitate for a moment to attempt their elimination.

In this connection it is most important for all of us to remember that, in considering the problems of the highway, our funds go only half as far as they did before World War II. In other words, when we look at the sums that we now appropriate for this work, we must realize when we do look at them that they only buy one-half as much highway as they did before the war. Therefore, when you compare the Budget submitted today with the pre-war Budget, cut it in half to determine how it compares with those years.

And so that there may be no misapprehension also as to the situation on the farm-to-market roads, I would like to make clear that there has been no disparity in the way of a balanced program during the current Administration. In the last two years more money was spent from the Motor License Fund on improving farm-to-market roads than in any two-year period in the history of the Highway Department. It is our plan to continue this policy.

In order to clearly illustrate the completeness of the program in the Commonwealth for the past two years, the Highway Department has prepared two maps: one for the year 1947 and the other for the year 1948. These maps will visually express at a glance the completeness and balance of the highway program during the past two years. They will illustrate visually also, better than any words could tell, how balanced the program has been in carrying out the policies of the current Administration. The engineers of the Highway Department have asked me to advise you that they will be glad to appear in all caucuses, Republican or Democratic, to which they may be invited, to produce the detailed maps and all other supporting data to completely explain and define the needs and plans of the highway system.

Now, let us take a look at the funds estimated to be necessary by the Department; also their method of determining how they will become available; and why the Department insists that an increase of the tax on gasoline is necessary. The Highway Department estimates they will need a minimum of one hundred million dollars a year for each of the next two years for construction. Parenthetically, this is less per year than the Highway Department is spending in the last year of the current biennium.

A certain group in the Commonwealth have insisted that the amount of federal aid that will be received by the Department will augment the funds to a degree that will render unnecessary a further increase on the tax of gasoline. Those advancing this argument content that the Highway Department will receive in the coming biennium by way of federal aid approximately eighty-two million dollars. If this contention were correct it would be an easy solution to some of our problems. However, the Highway Department informs me that such an estimate of funds for the Department from the Federal Government in the way of highway aid positively will not be received in the coming biennium, and that the contention that it will be received is based on an unfamiliarity with the operations of the highway system and the federal law governing such aid.

Instead of eighty-two million dollars, the Highway Department states unqualified that they will not receive substantially in excess of forty million dollars in cash during the coming biennium in the federal aid program.

It is necessary that it be clearly understood that the Highway Department cannot concentrate the use of these federal funds in any type of highway construction that they may desire. They are governed definitely by the laws regulating the federal aid program. The federal aid law definitely specifies that 37% of these funds must be used on primary roads, 42% on urban roads, and 21% must be used on farm-to-market roads. Consequently, to secure federal funds, the Highway Department must match out of our funds, dollar for dollar, on each of the above specified classifications; because unless we do match it in amounts and in classifications we cannot qualify for and receive such federal aid.

Let us take a look also as to how these funds come into Pennsylvania. Thereby we can prove conclusively that the Highway Department will not receive approximately in excess of $40,000,000 in the coming biennium.

In 1948-49 the Highway Department will spend more for construction than it will spend in either of the two years of the coming biennium. The Department will spend $103,313,000 in 1948-49. On that $103,313,000, actual federal aid payments to the Commonwealth were only $20,017,000, or nineteen and four-tenths percent of the total.

Since we do not expect to spend more than $100,000,000 a year in each of the two years of the coming biennium for construction, it is clear that we will not receive more than $20,000,000 in federal aid in each of those two years, and that the final $42,000,000 of the Pennsylvania allotment will not be received, on the basis of experience in the Department to date, until the 1951-53 biennium.

The above being so, it is evident that of the $82,000,000 federal aid that eventually will come to Pennsylvania more than one-half will not be received until after the end of the next biennium. On the basis of estimated funds for the next biennium, there will be only $120,000,000 available for construction. That means that the Department will be shy approximately $40,000,000 each year in order to carry forward a construction program of $100,000,000 a year for the next two years of the coming biennium.

Both the Secretary of Highways and the engineers in that Department have unqualifiedly recommended to me—which I pass along to you with my recommendation—that the gas tax be increased one cent per gallon for the next two years over existing taxes, and that any funds found necessary in this construction program in excess of one cent, but not to exceed $40,000,000 more, be raised by the Highway Department for bridges, express highways, or controlled access highways in the Commonwealth, by an Authority.

In this connection I think it is informative to point out that this tax on gasoline will not be in excess of the existing tax on gasoline in our sister States of Maryland and West Virginia, and that the Governor of New York this last week, proposed an increase in the tax of that State equivalent to the tax proposed herein. And further, as a matter of comparison, I think it ought to be stated that the present tax on gasoline in Pennsylvania is less, by one-fourth of a cent per gallon, than the existing National average. And whereac twenty-two of the States do not spend the money from the highways exclusively for highway purposes, Pennsylvania spends all of its motor funds for highway purposes.

For the reasons stated, I urge the enactment of the legislation necessary to make effective the recommendations of the Highway Department.

MENTAL HEALTH

I feel obliged to call to your attention to the urgent necessity for the large amount of funds requested for the mental health program as specified in the Budget.

I realize, as you do, that the funds asked for are great. But I also realize that the urgency of the demand is equally great. The chief reason that so great an expenditure of funds has been necessary for mental health in the current biennium, and will be necessary in the next biennium, is that in the past we refused to meet adequately and promptly the challenges of the problems of mental health as they were presented.

Everyone reading the daily papers is obliged to be aware of the variety of problems presented by various phases of the problems of mental illness. The time has come when society must attempt to protect itself against the dangers that we have heretofore refused to provide against. We should no longer continue the practice of awaiting for catastrophes to happen before we are sufficiently stirred up to take measures to prevent them.

There is a tremendous need in Pennsylvania, as elsewhere, for increased research into the causes of mental illness, and training in the care of those who are mentally ill, as well as provisions for the restraint of persons afflicted with certain mental quirks and sexual abnormalities that make them menaces to society. We have arrived at the place where there is need for institutions of the type where we are concerned more with the methods of cure and prevention than merely with the custodial care of the chronically mentally ill.

We need to understand not only the effect of mental pressures that produce bodily ailments, but also bodily ailments that tend to cause mental illnesses. Research has proven beyond doubt that emotional instability is caused in many people by certain types of illness.

Research has also made clear that many mentally ill patients may be prevented from falling into the classification of chronically mentally ill patients if they are received in time and receive the proper treatment and care necessary to restore them to full health again.

The great problem of today, when such a high percentage of our population is suffering from mental illnesses, is to treat those illnesses of the mind in the early stages the same as medicine would treat physical illnesses in the early stages before they become chronic.

Because once mental illness becomes chronic the patient becomes, in all probability, a permanent charge upon society; while if they are treated early before they do become chronic they can be restored to useful lives in society.

For the above, and the other reasons that I stated in my former message to you, I earnestly hope that the requested funds will be made available for use in the coming biennium.

AUTHORITY

An examination of the Budget discloses that a large sum of money is needed for permanent improvements. These improvements are imperatively needed now. To pay for them out of the current General Fund would necessitate large increases in taxes for the General Fund. It is not fair to ask the people of Pennsylvania to pay for permanent improvements wholly out of current funds, because many of them are of a character that will last for generations.

Granted the necessity for the improvement and the unfairness of asking current taxes to pay the entire cost of permanent improvements, it becomes clear that the only alternative is to pay for them over a period of years.

As we are all aware, the Constitution of Pennsylvania does not permit the borrowing of more than one million dollars as a direct obligation of the Commonwealth without a vote of the people, except in the case of insurrection. This direct obligation method of borrowing money is so cumbersome and time-consuming that it prevents the raising of substantial funds to meet an emergency.

The situation confronting Pennsylvania today illustrates the absolute necessity for borrowing funds to meet a critical emergency for improvements that happen to be permanent in character. The only method devised to free the Commonwealth from the shackles of an outmoded method of financing is by the Authority method, whereby an indirect obligation is created by the payment of rentals for the use of permanent improvements over a period of years until the cost is liquidated. The Authority has been approved by the highest judicial authority of the State as a method whereby the critical obligations of Government may be met.

I feel there is no alternative at this time in Pennsylvania to an Authority as a method for meeting the critical emergency of the Commonwealth for permanent improvements.

It is clear that the Constitution should have been amended long ago in order to enable the Government of this day and generation to function in a way that the vast demands on Government of today require. Such a situation was not envisaged in the day in which the Constitution was written. Since these needed changes have not been effected in the Constitution, it becomes necessary to use the device that has been found practical to meet the emergency. Because after all the purpose of government is not to defeat the proper and necessary demands of the people, but to make it possible for them to be carried out. They can be carried out in a legitimate way in Pennsylvania as approved by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. I, therefore, feel that this Authority should be erected at this time for the purpose of accomplishing the necessary demands for permanent improvements outlined in the Budget.

In order to lower the rate of interest and to bring the funds necessary for these permanent improvements within the classification as a direct obligation of the Commonwealth, I suggest that legislation be enacted to submit for approval by the people as an indebtedness of the Commonwealth the total of such funds as this session of the General Assembly may approve under an Authority.

Members of the General Assembly:

In conclusion, I would like to reiterate today what I said to you on January 4th, that this is a program to the advantage and for the benefit of all the people of Pennsylvania. It is an endeavor to do what seems to me to be sensible, to be right, and to be necessary. And, after all, that is what government is for—to do the best for the most people.

APPROPRIATIONS RECOMMENDED BY GOVERNOR FOR THE BIENNium *

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA
EXECUTIVE CHAMBER

Harrisburg, February 1, 1949.

To the Honorable, the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

In compliance with Article VI of the Act of April 9, 1929, P. L. 177, I have the honor to lay before the General Assembly a State Budget for the fiscal biennium from June 1, 1949 to May 31, 1951.

On January 4th I had the honor to address you on the important problems confronting us at the current Session. Therein was stated generally the approach to the solution of these problems as I appraised them. I herewith submit for your consideration a detail of the funds necessary to make that program effective.

Since this report is almost completely a great array of figures and the explanations accompanying them, I feel it would serve no useful purpose to read aloud to you in detail the various voluminous and detailed items which, from their nature, can only be adequately approached by a visual examination and close detailed study. The accompanying chart shows a breakdown of the budget in its general distribution of income and outgo.

Two years ago I presented to the Legislature a budget for the 1947-1949 biennial period based necessarily upon certain assumptions; that there would be a level of national income somewhere in the neighborhood of the high level which existed at the time the budget was prepared; that salary levels would not decrease during the two-year period but rather that there was the probability some further increases might be necessary where salary levels lagged behind the price level; there was the assumption that the price level after the beginning of the period would not be higher but rather show some downward trend as production increased; and the further forecast that the consumption of commodities would increase.

We find that there has been a considerably greater degree of inflation than was assumed in making the 1947-1949 budget. National income is some 28% above two years ago; the price level has gone up 25% in that period of time. The State Government had to be operated on a budget which was not constructed to meet the amount of inflation which occurred.

This circumstance has had a number of outstanding manifestations bearing on the State finances. In order to help State employes meet increased prices it was considered necessary to make a substantial increase in salaries and wages during the two-year period. This increase, along with the increased costs of everything else the State buys, has caused deficiencies in some budgets, particularly at the institutions and in public assistance, where it was found necessary to increase grants to meet living costs. The great increase in building costs which has taken place has had the effect of materially limiting the construction program which was set up two years ago.

Fortunately, on the other side, inflation has bolstered some of the sources of revenue to the point that after deficiencies of the present biennium have been provided, a sizeable General Fund surplus can be expected at the end of the current biennium.

Since the budget I am now presenting is to operate the State government for two years beginning June 1, 1949, the difficult problem of foreseeing the future again recurs.

This budget anticipates that the level of national income will remain at somewhat the present level. It assumes that the price level will not be far different from where it now stands. It assumes that business activity and employment will continue at somewhat the present high rate.

In studying this budget we will not have a proper comparison with expenditures for former years unless we constantly keep in mind the effects of inflation on State costs. For expenditures as a whole we can conservatively say that State costs now are at least 50% above prewar costs—that is, the same amount of State Government costs 50% more now than at the time the war commenced. Some costs have increased much more than 50%. Building construction has increased 200%. Public School subsidies which comprise a large share of the budget have increased 174% since 1941 with a 14% decline in the number of teachers. The cost of operating the Welfare Institutions has increased more than 100% since 1942. And, too, it is important to keep in mind that during the present biennium and continuing into the next biennium we are making expenditures for many necessary projects deferred from the war years.

Before discussing the budget for the 1949-1951 biennium, the execution of the budget for the current biennium ending May 31, 1949 needs to be set forth.

Total appropriations for the 1947-1949 biennium were $595,252,831. To meet these appropriations there were estimated revenues of $570,350,285, a surplus of $14,780,184 from the 1945-1947 biennium, and cancellation of 1945-1947 appropriations in the amount of $10,380,000, making a total of $595,510,460. As shown in the budget which I am presenting some of the appropriations proved to be insufficient and I am recommending deficiency appropriations amounting to $21,078,846. It is expected that revenues for the 1947-1949 biennium will surpass the estimate of $570,000,000 by $58,500,000. Thus, after providing for the deficiencies, and considering lapses, we anticipate a surplus for this biennium in the amount of $42,879,694. This is available for appropriation for the 1949-1951 biennium.

Now, turning to the 1949-1951 budget, let me say that at a time when Federal taxes and high prices constitute a tremendous burden, the principal attempt was to prepare a budget which would provide adequately for all essential State needs and to do so if at all possible without any taxation beyond that which has existed during the current biennium.

The General Fund budget which I present to you has been constructed on the basis of no additional taxes beyond those now in effect.

It was not possible to do so for the Motor License Fund, as is explained later in this Message.

In order to provide necessary funds under greatly increased costs for urgent highway work I find it necessary to recommend either an increase of two cents in the Liquid Fues Tax for a two-year period or a one cent increase in the tax and the balance of the funds necessary to be provided by a State Authority.

The budget I am presenting to you recommends General Fund appropriations amounting to $695,218,980. These appropriations would be met by $653,300,000 in estimated revenues, and $42,879,694 of surplus funds from the 1947-1949 biennium.

The appropriations of $695,218,980 recommended are for current operations with the exception of the appropriation of $17,000,000 recommended for Schuylkill River desilting and $15,000,000 for low-rent housing subsidies. With these amounts deducted, the remaining total, $663,218,980, is $82,887,303 above the corresponding total of appropriations including deficiencies for current operations for the 1947-1949 biennium. The chief increases making up this amount are as follows:

$34,620,034 additional for the schools, School Employees Retirement Fund, and other Public Instruction appropriations

$16,314,400 additional for Welfare and Health Institutions

$ 4,610,000 additional for Public Assistance

$ 7,500,000 for interest on veterans bonus bonds

$13,649,496 for operation of the departments

$ 3,750,000 for General State Authority rentals

These items explain $80,000,000 of the increase.

In this program $275,152,180 of the total $695,218,980 appropriations recommended, or 39.5%, is for Education; $284,467,885 of the total, or 40.9%, would be appropriated for Public Welfare and Health, with the remaining 19.6% for conservation of natural resources, interest and sinking funds, and operation of the departments, legislative, and judiciary.

The appropriations recommended are to meet current operations and do not provide for major public works. As I stated previously, the appropriations made for public works two years ago have been reduced by inflated building prices so that there will remain much to be done beyond those appropriations. As shown later in this Message, requests for construction and other public works submitted by the departments amount to $147,000,000.

While it may be possible to make some reductions in this program, it is apparent that there are larger public works needs which cannot be met from estimated revenues for the next two years. In considering funds for construction we should keep in mind that building costs are now three times what they were before the beginning of the war. In other words, a $147,000,000 program now is about the equivalent of a $50,000,000 program at that time.

At the last Session we provided a huge public works program supported partly with borrowed funds and partly from the revenues of the present biennium. I do not consider it advisable to recommend new taxes to carry this additional construction program from current revenues. In my opinion this would be a proper case for borrowing because we are undertaking in a short period of time projects the need for which has accumulated over many years and which will serve future generations, but due to constitutional restriction funds cannot be obtained soon enough by that method. I recommend that a Senate Authority be established to finance and undertake necessary public works. It appears that from the standpoint of saving interest costs it might be desirable to start a constitutional amendment for a bond issue in this Session to take up the Authority bonds as soon as the required legislative action and constitutional amendment can be had. The necessary legislation has been prepared to establish a State Authority.

The additional amount of $34,620,034 recommended to be appropriated for Public Instruction is the amount which is required under existing legislation. $22,000,000 of the amount must be provided as payments to the school districts under the legislation adopted at the last two Sessions providing for reimbursement units and raising teachers salaries. $7,708,600 of the amount is required to meet increased State payments to the School Employees Retirement Fund caused by the high salary schedule and inability of the Fund to earn the required 4% on its investments. $3,000,000 of the amount is for transportation due to higher costs and a larger number of districts applying for transportation.

The $16,314,400 increase for Welfare and Health Institutions is required for increased salaries of employees, increased food, clothing, and other costs, and to raise the standard of service and care in those institutions.

The increase of $4,610,000 for Public Assistance is due to increase in the grants made during this biennium to meet increased living costs.

I am recommending that you again approve the constitutional amendment providing for a soldiers bonus and that you enact the necessary legislation so that the bonus can be paid as soon as possible upon the approval of the constitutional amendment by the voters. We estimate that $7,500,000 would be sufficient for interest charges in the 1949-1951 biennium. This assumes that the first payments on retirement of the bonds will not occur before the 1951-1953 biennial period.

The estimate of General Fund receipts, $653,300,000, for the 1949-1951 biennium assumes that all tax sources in effect during the 1947-1949 biennium will be in effect during the 1949-1951 biennium. I recommend that all necessary legislation be adopted to carry out that revenue program including the extension of all emergency taxes and other taxes established at the last Session for a two-year period, and postponement of the exemption of manufacturing corporations from the capital stock and franchise tax for that period of time. The necessary legislation to carry out this recommended revenue program has been prepared for your consideration.

In the budget you will find the estimated receipts for the different sources of revenue compared with the present biennium and the two preceding bienniums.

At this point I should like to point out the great problem this State and all states have from the enormous burden of overlapping Federal taxes. The states in raising necessary revenue are struggling with a situation which was never contemplated when our Federal system of government was established. On practically every important source of State revenue there is a heavy burden of Federal taxation. For instance, one of our major sources is alcoholic beverages. The State Store profits and State tax represents a tax of about $5.00 per gallon on whiskey. There is a Federal tax of $9.00 per gallon. Our State tax on cigarettes is four cents per package. The Federal tax is seven cents. Our corporate net income tax is at a rate of 4%. The Federal corporate income tax rate goes as high as 38%. The Federal government collects several times as much with its estate tax from this State as does the State from inheritance and estate taxation, the Federal government collects one and one-half cents per gallon in gasoline taxes, and so it goes. As long as these extremely high Federal rates exist on the chief sources of revenue used by the State, we are going to have great difficulty in having a satisfactory State revenue system. It was hoped that there would be a large reduction in Federal taxes but we find higher taxes are recommended. There is no greater problem that the states have than this to finance their essential functions with the overwhelming burden of Federal taxation on their chief sources of revenue.

APPROPRIATIONS RECOMMENDED

The deficiency appropriations I am recommending are set forth in the budget. The deficiency of $10,600,000 in the Public Assistance appropriation is due to the fact that grants to persons receiving public assistance and salaries of employes were increased during the biennium. The deficiency appropriations for the Welfare Institutions, the Teachers Colleges, and for the other departments, are due primarily to the increased salaries of employes and increases in food, materials and supplies. Applications for relief from school districts exceeded the number expected causing a deficiency of $500,000 in the appropriation for Handicapped School Districts.

PUBLIC SCHOOL SUBSIDIES

Of the $34,620,034 additional recommended for the Department of Public Instruction, $3,000,000 is for transportation and $22,000,000 for Support of Public Schools. The increase for transportation is due partly to increased costs of transportation and to an increase in the number of districts which will require transportation. The increase of $22,000,000 for Support of the Public Schools is the amount estimated to be needed upon the basis of applications from the districts which the Department of Public Instruction has received to date.

The amounts appropriated for the last few bienniums for this purpose are as follows:

| | |
|----------------------|---------------|
| 1939-1941 | $ 64,000,000 |
| 1941-1943 | 71,000,000 |

| 1945-1947 | 125,000,000 |
| 1947-1949 | 173,000,000 |
| (Required) 1949-1951 | 195,000,000 |

Under the legislation of 1945 and 1947, salaries of teachers mandated by the State have been as follows:

MANDATED MINIMUM AND MAXIMUM TEACHER SALARIES IN EFFECT DURING 1943-1944 COMPARED WITH THOSE PROVIDED BY ACT 515, 1947 SESSION INCLUDING PER CENT OF INCREASE

SCHOOL EMPLOYEES RETIREMENT FUND

The recommended appropriation of $21,180,000 for this Fund compares with $13,486,400 in the current biennium. This increase is due in part to increased salaries of teachers, in part to the inability of the Fund to earn the 4% interest rate guaranteed by law, and in part to the decision of the Attorney General that rates of contribution may not be increased for employees who were in public school service prior to September 1, 1946. This amount will just meet the interest deficiency for the 1947-1949 biennium. An additional interest deficiency of $7,000,000 is estimated for the 1949-1951 biennium but is not included because I feel it is more workable for the Legislature to meet whatever deficiency occurs during the next biennium at the 1951 Session when an accurate estimate of the deficiency can be made.

FORESTS AND WATERS

I am recommending an appropriation of $3,000,000 for the salaries and expenses of the Department of Forests and Waters. Furthermore, in the amount which I recommend later in this Message for a State Authority program for that Department, the intent is that the State Authority take over dam building projects originally intended to be financed from the appropriation of $10,000,000 (23-A) made to that Department in 1947. This will make funds in Appropriation Act 23-A available to this Department for forest and park work which has not previously received the proper development. The balance of the State Authority program would be for the construction of additional dams serving the purposes of flood control, water supply and recreation and for structures required in the State parks.

During the 1945 Session an appropriation of $16,500,000 was made to the Department of Forests and Waters (83-A) and an appropriation of $10,000,000 at the 1947 Session (23-A) for major public works of that Department. Of the $16,500,000 appropriation, $16,353,000 had been allocated for projects as of December 31, 1948.

Of the $10,000,000 appropriation, $9,907,131 had been allocated on that date.

At each of the last two Sessions a $5,000,000 appropriation has been made for removing silt from the Schuylkill River. $25,000,000 more will be needed in the 1949-1951 biennium. I am recommending that you appropriate $17,000,000 of that amount from the General Fund and that $8,000,000 of the construction work be undertaken by the State Authority. Due to the character of the work projects it appears that $8,000,000 is the most that can be undertaken by a State Authority. In order that additional contracts can be awarded it is important that $5,000,000 be appropriated as soon as you can conveniently do so. An appropriation bill has been prepared for that purpose.

SCHOOL HEALTH EXAMINATIONS

The appropriation for this important function began with an appropriation of $4,000,000 in 1945-1947 and increased to $7,000,000 in 1947. I am recommending another appropriation of $6,400,000 for the next biennium, which, it appears, will be sufficient in view of the difficulty experienced in securing the necessary number of nurses for this work. Should the experience be otherwise it may be necessary to supplement this appropriation in the 1951 Session.

CANCER RESEARCH

The Cancer Research appropriation of $250,000 which was made to the Department of Health for the present biennium should be again appropriated for the next two-year period. Also, I am recommending an appropriation of $150,000 in State aid to the Cancer Research Laboratory at Fox Chase. This Laboratory which was established two years ago and opened for active research work this year promises to be one of the outstanding cancer research laboratories in the country. I feel that the State should have a share in this important work.

MILITARY AFFAIRS

The appropriation recommended for salaries and expenses of the Department of Military Affairs shows a large increase over the present biennium, $5,188,556 as compared with $3,250,000. The major part of this increase is due to the fact that the Department plans to bring the strength of the National Guard up to 25,000 prior to June 1, 1949, whereas it averaged about 10,000 men during the first year of the present biennium and about 15,000 the second year.

PUBLIC ASSISTANCE

Due to increased grants the present rate of expenditure of Public Assistance funds will require $151,100,000 for the next biennium. This compares with $146,490,000 for the present biennium including the deficiency of $10,600,000. This amount is recommended upon the assumption that employment conditions will remain about as favorable as at present. Should conditions be less favorable, a deficiency in this appropriation would result unless costs declined correspondingly.

OCCUPATIONAL DISEASE COMPENSATION

The appropriation recommended for Occupational Disease Compensation is $1,150,000 compared with $750,000 for the present biennium. This increase is the estimated amount necessary to carry the large number of new cases which have been assigned to referees on which awards are expected along with cases now being compensated and to increased grants which I am recommending.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE POLICE

The State Police with its present force will require a considerable increase in appropriation due to the general salary increase during this Administration and increase in other costs. $17,440,000, compared with $15,000,000 in the present biennium, will be required. I recommend that the General Fund and the Motor License Fund carry the same proportions as at present which would result in appropriations of $5,800,000 from the General Fund and $11,640,000 from the Motor License Fund. This appropriation provides for a full complement of 1600 men.

In order to bring about greater safety on the highways the present force of State Policemen is inadequate. Therefore, I recommend that the present upper limit of State Police be increased from 1600 to 2000 with the additional 400 to be assigned entirely to highway patrol work. This will involve an increase in appropriation of $4,000,000 which amount should be carried entirely by the Motor License Fund.

This increased force of 2000 men will require $15,640,000 from the Motor License Fund and $5,800,000 from the General Fund.

WELFARE AND HEALTH INSTITUTIONS

The appropriations I am recommending for Welfare and Health Institutions, a total of $103,470,000, represents an increase of $16,314,400. This increase is due to greatly increased prices, increased salaries of employes, to an estimated increase in patient population, and to improvement of the service in those institutions.

The appropriation I am recommending for the Mental Hospitals, including those for the Mental Defectives, is $68,917,000, which compares with $58,248,800 in the present biennium. Unless inflation should become greater this appropriation will permit much improvement in the care and treatment of mental patients.

Of the total of $103,470,000, $11,000,000 is recommended for the Tuberculosis Sanatoria and the Crippled Childrens Hospital in the Department of Health. This appropriation will allow these institutions to be built up to capacity during the biennium. It will allow the Crippled Childrens Hospital to take in many children beyond the present population of that institution.

An appropriation of $240,000 is recommended to continue the important work of treatment of rheumatic fever patients.

STATE-AIDED HOSPITALS AND HOMES

An appropriation of $13,262,000 is recommended for the State-aided hospitals which compares with an appropriation of $12,262,000 in the present biennium. A review of past appropriations shows that in 1946 the State provided 51% of the cost of free days service in the State-aided Hospitals, in 1947 the State carried 42%, in 1948, 51%. The appropriation I recommend would provide 52% of the estimated cost of free days service for each year of the coming biennium.

An appropriation of $571,275 is recommended for State-aided Homes as compared with $519,275 in the present biennium. This represents a 10% increase to help meet increased costs.

CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

At the last Session of the Legislature, $70,290,000 was appropriated for construction at the Welfare Institutions. $25,290,000 of this amount was appropriated from the General Fund and $45,000,000 from the $50,000,000 bond issue. Of this total amount, $55,347,670 has been allotted for construction at Mental Institutions, $587,700 at Penal Institutions, and $403,210 at the State Medical Hospitals.

As I explained previously, the increase in building costs has greatly reduced the amount of construction which could be obtained under these appropriations as well as the construction appropriations made at the 1945 Session and, accordingly, these appropriations are not sufficient for the construction which needs to be done. The following amounts are requested for construction at the Welfare Institutions:

|-----------------------------|--------------|
| Mental Hospitals | $80,000,000 |
| Feeble-minded and Epileptic | 3,800,000 |
| Medical and Surgical | 2,200,000 |
| Penal and Correctional | 3,500,000 |
| Equipment | 2,000,000 |
| | <hr/> |
| | $91,500,000 |

In addition to construction at the Welfare Institutions $26,325,000 is requested for construction at Educational Institutions as follows:

|-------------------------------|--------------|
| State Teachers Colleges | $13,000,000 |
| Soldiers Orphan School | 5,000,000 |
| Thaddeus Stevens Trade School | 325,000 |
| Pennsylvania State College | 8,000,000 |

At the Health Sanatoria $2,000,000 is requested.

The State Police requests construction of $2,626,000 which was not obtainable as originally planned under the appropriation made in 1945.

With the $24,600,000 State Authority program requested by the Department of Forests and Waters the total requests are $147,051,000.

In recommending the establishment of a State Authority to undertake public works the intent is that projects pass a rigid test of necessity and urgency before being undertaken. The departments concerned will be glad to furnish you full information about the construction programs for which they are making requests.

SALARIES OF STATE EMPLOYES

During the 1947-1949 biennium it was found necessary to increase salaries and wages of State employes in view of increasing prices. Two increases have been granted—one in August, 1947 for most employes averaging from 5 to 7%, and a 10% increase, with a limit of $600 for any increase, was granted effective in August, 1948. Since 1942 the salaries of State employes who at that time were receiving $3,000 or less have been increased from 50% to 60%. Above that amount, the increase has been from 20 to 25%. During that period of time the cost of living has increased some 58%. While it may not be desirable to keep State salaries entirely abreast of the cost of living, the lag cannot be too great or the State will lose its best employes and will not be able to attract the type of employe it should have. Moreover, State employes will experience real difficulty in maintaining a satisfactory standard of living unless their compensation advances with the cost of living.

Salaries which are fixed by law did not share in adjustments. I believe this is a matter which you should consider because inflation has left those salaries at only a share of their value when established.

CHILDREN'S CAMP—INDIANTOWN GAP

Provisions is made in the budget for a camp for underprivileged children as I recommended in my Message at the opening of the Session. This is in the form of an appropriation of $600,000 recommended to be appropriated to the Department of Military Affairs. While I recommend that the appropriation be made to the Department of Military Affairs the expenditure of the funds and the management of the camp should be under the jurisdiction of the Department of Military Affairs, Department of Health, and Department of Public Instruction.

The recommended appropriation of $600,000 is based upon a fifteen-day camp of 2500 children the first year and 5000 the second year. The appropriation would be expended for subsistence, councilors, doctors, nurses, and other necessary help, transportation, medical supplies, and miscellaneous items. All housekeeping facilities and equipment such as dishes, cooking equipment, beds, mattresses and the like, will be provided by the 2nd Army without cost.

HOUSING

In my Message in the beginning of the Session I stressed the importance of low-rent housing. I am convinced that in order to have low-rent housing it is necessary for the State government to subsidize local housing authorities or insurance companies if such low-rent housing is going to come about. Accordingly, I recommend an appropriation of $15,000,000 for this purpose. Since the State Planning Board and the State Board of Housing, which I hope will be consolidated with the Planning Board, has given lengthy study to this problem, I recommend that the appropriation be made to the State Planning Board.

MOTOR LICENSE FUND

The estimated total of funds available in the Motor License Fund for the 1949-1951 biennium is $321,147,702 assuming the reenactment of the one cent emergency Liquid Fuel Tax which has been in effect for the last thirteen years which I recommended. This total consists of an estimated cash balance of $43,527,802 June 1, 1949 and $277,619,900 of estimated receipts including Federal Aid. This total of $321,147,702 compares with $360,581,802 estimated for the 1947-1949 biennium, a decrease of $39,434,100. This decrease is the result of a reduction in the cash balance and in the estimated Federal Aid. For the present biennium $75,000,000 of Federal Aid was estimated, of which amount approximately $38,053,428 will be received due to the fact that projects must be completed before the Federal Aid payments are made. For the 1949-1951 biennium the estimate of receipts from Federal Aid is $40,000,000. Receipts from sources other than Federal Aid are estimated at $237,619,900 for 1949-1951 compared with $227,735,374 for the present biennium.

The estimate of funds available for 1949-1951, $321,147,702, will permit the Department of Highways to have a budget of $225,000,000 for the 1949-1951 biennium. This will permit the following expenditures during the two-year period compared with those estimated for the present biennium:

| | Estimated 1947-1949 | Estimated 1949-1951 |
|--|------------------------|------------------------|
| Construction | $171,179,000 | $120,440,000 |
| Resurfacing | 9,956,000 | 12,000,000 |
| Overhead Engineering, Equipment, etc. | 29,440,000 | 32,560,000 |
| Maintenance | 55,113,000 | 60,000,000 |
| Totals | $265,688,000 | $225,000,000 |

OTHER APPROPRIATIONS FOR MOTOR LICENSE FUND

An appropriation of $10,000,000 is recommended for cities, boroughs, and first class townships and $10,000,000 for townships of the second class. These are the same as the appropriations for the present biennium.

The allocation recommended for the Pennsylvania State Police upon an increase of the force by 400 is $15,640,000 which is $5,640,000 more than in the present biennium.

An allocation of $10,000,000 is recommended for the Department of Revenue, an increase of $1,735,000 over the allocation for the present biennium. This increase is due to increased salaries and increased cost of materials and supplies.

MOTOR LICENSE FUND BALANCE, MAY 31, 1951

If expenditures are made according to the allocations and appropriations recommended it is estimated there will be a cash balance of $38,857,750 May 31, 1951.

The Department of Highways expects to spend $171,179,000 for construction in the present biennium and $9,956,000 for resurfacing. It will have $120,440,000 to spend for construction in the 1949-1951 biennial period and $12,000,000 for resurfacing. Due to increased costs and wa deferred road construction projects the amount which will be available will not be sufficient to meet the urgent highway construction needs. During the fiscal year 1948-1949 an estimated $107,600,000 will be spent for construction and resurfacing. The Department of Highways feels that the minimum amount it should have for construction in the next two years is $200,000,000. This will require an increase of $80,000,000 in the Motor License Fund revenues for the two-year period and, as I stated in my Message to you at the opening of the Session, this amount can be derived by an increase of two cents per gallon in the Liquid Fuels Tax or by a one cent increase and providing the balance, which would be $40,000,000 in amount, by a State Authority. Whatever increase in tax is made it should be effective June 1, 1949 for a two-year period. The Department of Highways can give you full information on its commitments and future needs.

This budget has been construed to promote the best interests of all the people of the Commonwealth. I pledge you my cooperation and the cooperation of my whole Administration in working out these problems in that direction.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES H. DUFF,
Governor

Note: It had been the practice, in making appropriations for Aid to Dependent Children, Mothers Assistance, Pensions for the Blind, and General Assistance, to make lump sums covering both administrative costs and grants (subsidies). In this Statement, portions of appropriations which were spent for administration are shown under Administration and the remainder of the appropriation is shown under Subsidies. In each column the amounts prefixed by the same letter must be added together to show the total amount of appropriation.

REPORT OF THE PENNSYLVANIA AERONAUTICS COMMISSION

1947-1948

INTRODUCTION

The Pennsylvania Aeronautics Commission was created by the 1943 Legislature as an administrative agency of the Department of Commerce to develop and regulate aeronautics in the Commonwealth. Specifically the duties of the Commission are to foster and promote aeronautics by the establishment and supervision of civil airways, emergency landing fields and air navigation facilities, the inspection and licensing of all airports and landing fields, and the promulgation and enforcement of rules and regulations governing the operation of aircraft. In conjunction with the industrial program of the Department of Commerce, the Aeronautics Commission is charged with the task of promoting and encouraging the expansion of the aircraft industry in Pennsylvania by publicizing the advantages offered by the Commonwealth for the manufacture of aircraft and aircraft accessories.

The most important function of the Commission is the promotion of safe flying in the Commonwealth. This objective is being accomplished in many ways. Airports are licensed by the Commission to assure their airworthiness and periodic inspections are made to make certain that the landing areas are maintained in a safe condition. A system of air marking is being maintained and an aeronautical chart is published and revised at regular intervals. An active aviation education program is underway in cooperation with the Department of Public Instruction. Enforcement of regulations and accident investigation activities are carried out in conjunction with the Pennsylvania State Police. The airport facilities in many political subdivisions of the Commonwealth are being improved under a construction program made possible by appropriations from the Commonwealth, the Federal government and the political subdivisions themselves.

AIRPORT LICENSING AND INSPECTION

During the period of this report the number of airports in the Commonwealth has continued to increase. On January 1, 1947 there were a total of three hundred and eighteen such landing facilities licensed by the Commission; on January 1, 1949 the total has increased to three hundred and forty-four.

| | 1946 | 1947 | 1948 |
|---|------|------|------|
| Number of Personal Landing Strips | 61 | 87 | 121 |
| Number of Commercially Licensed Airports | 184 | 205 | 203 |
| Number of Seaplane Bases | 16 | 23 | 19 |
| Number of Helicopter Fields | 0 | 3 | 1 |
| Total | 261 | 318 | 344 |

All types of airports are represented, from the small personal landing strips to the large municipal airport. The Commission has been responsible for the site approval, development, and final licensing of each new unit. After licensing, periodic inspections are made to insure that each airport is maintained in a safe condition.

In the interests of public safety the Commission supervises all air meets in the State by requiring that a waiver be issued to cover each single meet. Further it is required that each such meet be amply covered with sufficient public liability and property damage insurance. The effectiveness of this supervision is shown by the fact that thirty air meets were conducted in the last two years without bodily injuries or property damage.

AVIATION AND AGRICULTURE

One of the most important aspects of aviation is its expanding role in the field of agriculture. Disease and pest control by airplane crop dusting and spraying has already become an important business in the Commonwealth. Sixteen concerns are engaged in this business at the present time and additional operations are carried out by out of state concerns. All such flight operations are regulated by the Commission.

In conjunction with this activity the Commission arranges conferences with representatives of other state departments and with agencies of the Federal government. By this means effective dusting and spraying procedures are being developed.

The Commission also exhibits material at the annual State Farm Show to illustrate the application of aviation to the agriculture industry. Crop dusting and spraying demonstrations have been sponsored by the Commission at the Harrisburg State Airport.

PUBLIC RELATIONS

The Commission has assisted in conducting four successful air cruises to various points in Pennsylvania during the period of this report. These cruises are open to the general public and are designed to encourage the use of the airplane as a means of transportation for both business and recreational purposes.

Personnel of the Commission are active in addressing service clubs and other such organizations throughout the State and members of the staff are available for consultation on technical questions at all times without charge. The Commission also maintains close liaison with the aviation bodies of other states and with the aviation agencies of the Federal government.

In 1947 the accomplishments of the Commission were recognized nationally when the Executive Director of the Commission was singularly honored by being selected to receive the Haire Trophy for "outstanding achievement in the development of airports serving non-scheduled flying, both private and commercial."

AIR MARKING

Pennsylvania continues to maintain its enviable position as the best air marked State in the nation. Within the past two years the Pennsylvania Aeronautics Commission placed three hundred and seventy standard air markers, while during the same period of time the Federal government placed twenty-five markers. Prior to that time the Pennsylvania Aeronautics Commission had placed one hundred and thirty-four markers and forty-four were placed by various civic groups or individuals.

The standard air marker consists of the name of the community, the geographical bearing and an emblem indicating the direction and the distance to a commercial airport.

A considerable number of standard markers have been eradicated by smoke and grime in the industrial areas, and a smaller proportion have been effected by roof repairs. A definite program has been outlined for spring, utilizing improved materials which will give longer, lasting results with greatly improved visibility features.

In a cooperative effort with the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters, Pennsylvania became the first state to number its Fire Towers. The roofs of one hundred forty towers were numbered in sequence and are geographically located on the Pennsylvania Aeronautical Chart.

A total of approximately six hundred markers remain effective and numerous reports testify to their efficiency in the added safety they provide those who travel the airways. The contemplated program will assure the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania its leading position.

STATE AERONAUTICAL CHART

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania was the first state to publish an aeronautical chart. This chart was produced by the Pennsylvania Aeronautics Commission in 1947, being followed in succeeding years by the more progressive states.

The chart indicates to the pilot a graphic colored picture of the terrain, showing in detail the elevation of the various mountains, the contour of the land over which he is flying, the many rivers, lakes and the system of railroads and important highways.

The approximate size of villages, towns and cities are portrayed and serve as check points to the pilot. The exact location of all airports are shown as well as the airways and radio ranges. Thus, a complete aeronautical picture is available to the pilot and one that adds greatly to the safety of air travel.

Revision was made in 1948 and work is now under way in preparing the 1949 edition which will be published upon the completion of the air marking program, and should be available prior to June 15th.

The new edition will present a number of additions, including the designation of personal landing strips as well as up to the minute aeronautical data, including the air marked communities.

On the back of the chart appears an alphabetical listing of commercial airports and includes all pertinent data necessary to the pilot. These charts may be procured from the Bureau of Publications at the nominal price of fifty cents each and are greatly in demand throughout the eastern states.

AVIATION EDUCATION

War-time activities had given a tremendous spur to aviation and with the closing of hostilities many people are under the impression that aviation activity is only a part of war emergency and have not as yet come to realize the terrific social, political and economic changes aviation progress is bringing about in the lives and fortunes of people throughout the world.

Recognizing the fact that there is a definite need to inculcate aviation into our educational system, the Pennsylvania Aeronautics Commission is taking definite steps to assist in infusing aviation material into the Commonwealth's educational program.

For the first time in 25 years a state-wide revision in the curriculum of Pennsylvania's schools is being undertaken, and it was felt by the Commission that this would provide a proper opportunity to give aviation its place in education.

Working with the Department of Public Instruction, the Commission arranged a series of conferences at which Federal aviation educationists and other aviation people were brought into discussion with State education officials. As a result of these conferences there has developed a definite new program in Aviation Education for the Commonwealth.

One immediate outcome of the conferences was the appointment of a Specialist in Aviation Education to maintain a program for its long range importance. The Commission has arranged to contribute funds to cover a portion of the salary of an Aviation Consultant and to provide financial support necessary for educational services.

The duties of the Consultant will be to counsel and advise teachers and school administrators concerning the introduction of Aviation Education in the school curriculum and to perform related duties.

In addition to the above program, the Commission has sponsored Teacher Airport Institutes during which the Teachers have been taken on tours of the Harrisburg State Airport and have been given flight experience.

ENFORCEMENT

Following are detailed summaries of aeronautical violations, aircraft accidents and other information pertaining to safety as compiled from investigations made for the Pennsylvania Aeronautics Commission by Aviation Investigators of the Pennsylvania State Police.

During this period, 423 aircraft accidents were investigated in Pennsylvania. One hundred and seventy-nine accidents resulted in 96 deaths, 68 serious injuries, and 114 minor injuries. Fifty-six accidents were fatal accidents. Two hundred and forty-four accidents resulted in injury to persons.

Sixty-three of the aircraft accidents were directly attributable to low and reckless flying, resulting in 35 deaths, 17 serious injuries, and 20 minor injuries.

Fatal accidents were reduced 17.9% in 1947 over 1946. The total death rate from aircraft accidents in 1947 was reduced 25.55% and deaths from low and reckless flying were reduced 8.61%.

The 1948 accident figures, as compared to 1947, show a decrease of 23.75% in all accidents; a decrease of 44.5% in all fatal accidents; a decrease in total accidents due to low and reckless flying of 58.4%, and a decrease of 53.34% in the number of fatal accidents due to low and reckless flying. There was a decrease of 31.58% in the total number of persons killed in fatal accidents. (See Figure No. 4)

Investigations revealed 355 violations during this period, resulting in 173 arrests and 119 warnings issued. Twelve violators, who were non-residents, were referred to the CAA for Federal action.

The 1948 enforcement figures, as compared to 1947, show a decrease of 12.2% in total violations; a reduction of 11.7% in low and reckless flying violations. There was a reduction of 41.3% in arrests in 1948 as compared to 1947.

SCHEDULED AIR TRANSPORTATION

Scheduled Air Transportation in the United States has grown rapidly since its inception in 1926. Its rapid growth can be visualized by the increases in air carrier operations shown during the past few years. (See Figure No. 5)

Despite its expeditious development, the air lines this year had one of the best safety records in the history of the industry with only 1.3 fatalities per 100 million passenger miles or less than one-half the fatality rate of 2.9 in 1947.

Although a general downward trend in the overall traffic market is expected, it has been estimated that in 1949 the air carriers will show gains of 2 to 3 per cent in passenger traffic and a larger percentage in the volume of air cargo.

(See Figure No. 6)

Since the inauguration of scheduled air service, passenger traffic has provided the bulk of the airline business, however, World War II gave tremendous impetus to air cargo and during the past two years the greatest rate of increase in air transportation has been in the movement of freight and express. Air Cargo has rapidly developed into a service of major utility.

(See Figure No. 7)

Pennsylvania's air services have grown along with the national pattern. Scheduled air transport carriers serving the State fall into three categories—Domestic Trunkline International and Feederline. Today 10 Pennsylvania communities are being served directly by a total of 294 daily flights.

(See Figure No. 8)

The pattern of trunkline service reaches all of the Commonwealth's principal centers of population, and expansion will undoubtedly be in the direction of additional schedules as required and the addition of a few new routes as determined by the decisions of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Philadelphia is the only Pennsylvania city presently being served by an international carrier, nevertheless, this service holds great promise for the future of aeronautics in Pennsylvania.

Feederline air transport is a new phase of air service being introduced into the Commonwealth. Recently All American Airways has been certificated for a feeder service to connect many of the smaller communities of the State with each other and with major centers of population. This service will fill a definite need, hasten the development of inaccessible areas and expedite business and social relations throughout the Commonwealth. All American has been authorized to serve seventeen Pennsylvania communities, ten of which now have no air transport service. It is anticipated that this service will be inaugurated early in 1949.

(See Figure No. 9)

Although there has been a definite gain in the air service in the State during the past two years, the Aeronautics Commission is well aware that wide gaps still exist in the pattern of air routes authorized for Pennsylvania.

(See Figure No. 10)

The air route pattern of the United States is today still in a fluid state. The time is rapidly approaching, however, when the overall pattern will be frozen into a more or less permanent form and when changes and additions will be made very slowly. Anticipating this turn of events and realizing the lack of adequate airline service in the Commonwealth, the Commission is taking action to meet these requirements.

A professional aviation analyst was retained to make a survey of the Air Transport Requirements for Pennsylvania. The report has been completed, taking into account a study of the present scheduled air transport needs with respect to individual activity, manufactured products, educational institutions, recreational facilities, surrounding topography, nature and extent of ground transportation facilities by rail and highway, established traffic flows and existing air routes. This report entitled "The Air Transport Requirements of Pennsylvania" is currently being distributed and will serve as a guide in providing an adequate and sufficient air service pattern for the Commonwealth.

AIRPORT CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

In discussing the progress that has been accomplished during 1947 and 1948 in the Commission's Airport Construction Program, it is necessary to review the events immediately preceding this period. Act 85A of the 1945 Legislature appropriated $2,725,000 to be used for airport construction purposes and a similar appropriation Act 93A in the 1947 Session of the Legislature provided an additional $1,000,000.

Concurrently plans were underway by the Federal government to provide funds for similar purposes so that a program of construction could be established in which the Federal government would assume one-half of the cost of airport construction costs, the local political subdivision one-fourth of the cost and the Commonwealth one-fourth of the cost. The Federal Airport Act became law on May 13, 1946. Federal Airport Aid, however, was not actually available in 1946 because regulations implementing the Act did not become effective until June 9, 1947. Practically no airport construction was started in 1947 because the construction season was over before the necessary planning and paper work could be accomplished. Meanwhile, more Federal funds were appropriated and it was not until 1948 that any substantial construction was started.

In anticipating the immediate future development in the Airport Construction Program, it is felt that more emphasis will be placed in improvements to airports that fit into the National Defense Program. This is in line with the recommendations made by the President's Air Policy Commission and the Congressional Air Policy Board, and is expressed further in a Policy Statement by the Administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Administration in formulating the current fiscal years program. It is revealed in this Statement of Policy that top priority will be given to airport projects designed to provide terminal facilities needed for the effective use of aids to air navigation that are being planned by the Federal government. These air navigation aids are principally instrument landing systems.

Lowest priority is given to airports necessary to serve feeder lines and the smaller type of aircraft. Thus the tendency is to concentrate on improvements at the larger airports.

It is interesting to note that many Pennsylvania airports occupy a very high rating on the priority listing of the Federal government for instrument landing systems. At the present time instrument landing systems are in operation at Philadelphia (International), Reading and Erie. Following are top rating Pennsylvania cities scheduled for instrument landing systems in order of their appearance on the Federal listing:

Pittsburgh; Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton; Harrisburg; Philadelphia (North Philadelphia); Wilkes-Barre-Scranton; Williamsport; Lancaster; Johnstown; Blair County; Bradford-McKean County.

It is to be noted that in some instances the funds that were made available were used to construct new airports and in other instances improvements were made to airport facilities that had already been established. Consequently, for the sake of clarity separate reports follow showing the funds that have been allocated from State sources and funds that have been allocated from Federal sources under the Federal Airport Act.

CITY OF PHILADELPHIA

Board of Directors of City Trusts

120 South Third Street, Philadelphia 6, Pa.

March 21, 1949

To the Chief Clerk of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives,
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania

Dear Sir:

As specifically provided in Clause XXIV, Item 3, of the Will of the late Stephen Girard, the Board of Directors of City Trusts acting for the City of Philadelphia renders herewith to the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania a detailed account for the year 1948 of the Estate devised to the City of Philadelphia in trust and the investment and application of the same, and a report in like manner of the state of Girard College, a duplicate copy of which has been rendered to the Senate of Pennsylvania.

Very respectfully yours,

W. H. GILLAM, JR.,
General Manager

WHG:gg

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF CITY
TRUSTS TO THE LEGISLATURE OF THE COMMON-WEALTH OF PENNA. FOR 1948.

March 21, 1949

To the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Gentlemen:

In accordance with Clause XXIV, Item 3, of the Will of Stephen Girard, the City of Philadelphia, acting by the Board of Directors of City Trusts, herewith submits to you a detailed account concerning the devised and bequeathed estate of Stephen Girard, deceased, with the investments and application of the same, together with a report of the state of Girard College, for the year 1948.

The capital of the Residuary Fund for the maintenance of Girard College amounted on December 31, 1948 to $65,313,945.36, or $269,975.02 more than at the end of the year 1947.

The total ordinary expenditures for the support of Girard College amounted to $2,382,780.95, an increase of $99,599.97 over the preceding year. The average number of pupils maintained was 1,314 and the cost of maintenance per capita, $1,813.38. This is an increase of $53.02 over 1947.

| | | |
|---|-------|-------|
| Number of pupils, January 1, 1948 | 1,298 | |
| Admitted during the year | 160 | 1,458 |
| Indentures cancelled | 97 | |
| Left at eighteen years of age | 55 | 152 |
| Number of pupils, December 31, 1948 | | 1,306 |

The celebration of its Centennial dominated the year 1948 at Girard College. The Centennial and the attention which it drew to the College resulted in a considerably larger application list, especially in applications on behalf of boys born outside Pennsylvania. Reorganizations were made during the year in the service departments and the maintenance force and in some instructional departments including music and the shops. The Bakery was closed and a program of purchasing bakery products outside was begun. The College discontinued its generation of current for power and light. These and other changes, such as participation for the first time in the National School Lunch Program, resulted from the necessity of restricting the College budget in the fact of higher costs for materials and service. Retrenchment has begun in various phases in the work of the College with the thought that eliminations and curtailments of services will be made where they will do the least harm.

Girard College generally is in excellent physical condition because of such improvements in recent years as the resurfacing of the roads, the resurfacing of the playgrounds, the recovering of the ground floor of the Armory, the reroofing of several buildings, the insulating of the Junior School roof, the modernization of equipment in mechanical instruction, the installation of two new boilers in the power house, the modernization of Founder's Hall, the improved exhibition of Stephen Girard's furniture, the resumed use of the House Group, the new floors, new plumbing, and refurnishing of living rooms in the upper dormitory halls, the betterment of the facilities of the Camp, the acoustical treatment of some dining rooms, and the replacement of equipment in some buildings, such as the Infirmary.

The Centennial year brought a renewed interest on the part of alumni in the affairs of the College, and among alumni gifts were the Alumni Memorial Room in the Library with its furnishings, memorial books and radio phonograph.

The receipts from the property of the Girard Estate Within the City of Philadelphia, were as follows:

| | Gross | Net |
|-------------------------|----------------|----------------|
| For the year 1948 | $2,939,525.67 | $1,091,358.61 |

The receipts for the year 1948 from the property of the Girard Estate Without the City of Philadelphia were as follows:

| | | |
|--|----------------|----------------|
| Gross receipts | $1,410,232.14 | |
| Taxes and other operating expenses | 343,773.35 | |
| Net receipts from operation .. | | $1,066,458.79 |
| Amount expended on Rehabilitation of Packer No. 5 Colliery .. | $ 412,148.55 | |
| Other extraordinary expenditures | 101,531.87 | 513,680.42 |
| Net Receipts | | $ 552,778.37 |
| Of which there was set aside for possible permanent improvements and capital investments by colliery lessees | | 463,653.73 |
| Net addition to Capital Account | | $ 89,124.64 |

The amount invested in bonds, preferred stocks and mortgages for the Residuary Fund is $55,559,358.09 or $493,289.68 more than in 1947, and the gross receipts therefrom were $1,543,998.47.

The Fire Insurance Fund has assets amounting to $600,-098.64. The risks being carried amount to $2,280,200.00 of which $967,000.00 has been reinsured. The Fund suffered no fire loss during the year 1948.

From the Fund for the Improvements of the Eastern Front of the City the expense of lighting and of minor items incident to the lighting of the district lying between Vine and South Streets, Front Street and the Delaware River, has been paid and amounted to $13,722.75.

The shipment of coal from the Girard Estate during the year 1948 was 1,584,748.35 gross tons, an increase as compared with 1947 of 57,158.70 tons, or 3.74%. The shipments were made up as follows:

| | Tons | Cwt. |
|-------------------------------------|-----------|------|
| Shipped to market—Fresh mined | 1,458,264 | 19 |
| Bank coal | 126,483 | 08 |
| Total | 1,584,748 | 07 |

The total rail shipment from the region for the year 1948 was 42,230,697 tons, a decrease of 1,058,428 tons or 2.4% as compared with 43,289,125 tons for 1947.

The Girard Estate's proportion of the regional shipments was 3.75% as compared with 3.0% in 1947.

The quantity of coal consumed in operating was 32,-117.35 tons, 1.99% of the total production of 1,616,865.70 tons, an increase of 1,887.95 tons, and an increase of 0.05% as compared with 1.94% in 1947. The average for the thirteen years from 1901 to 1913, when there were no collieries operated by electricity was 10.92%.

During the eighty-six years of active mining on the Girard Estate properties there have been marketed from them 133,376,103.40 tons. The coal leases at the end of the year 1948 were twenty-one in number, the same as in 1947.

During the year 1948 the sum of $360.55 was expended in the purchase and distribution of fuel (coal) in accordance with the provisions Clause V of the Will.

Under the provisions of Clause IV of the Will the sum of $309.42 was expended in the purchase of scholastic supplies for schools in the first section of the first school district of Pennsylvania.

On behalf of the Board of Directors of City Trusts.

JOSEPH GILFILLAN, President.

ANNUAL REPORT OF

The Delaware River Joint Commission of Pennsylvania and New Jersey

To the Honorable: The Legislatures of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey.

The upward trend of traffic over the Delaware River Bridge continued throughout 1948 setting a new record of 19,227,246 vehicles, an increase of 1,120,113 or 6.18 per cent over the volume for 1947. The bridge shared in the general rise in traffic throughout the country in which, according to the Public Roads Administration of the Federal Works Agency, 33,225,000 privately-owned automobiles were registered in 1948 and 2,500,000 fewer in 1947.

The Delaware River Joint Commission, recognizing that the bridge as the main artery of communication between Pennsylvania and New Jersey would shortly be crowded to capacity with but the present six lanes, is expending a minimum of $3,000,000 of toll receipts to add two lanes. This expansion, begun in 1948, will be completed by the end of 1950 thereby increasing the traffic capacity to at least 28,000,000 vehicles annually. To accommodate this number, approaches to the bridge in Camden must be materially improved. At the western end the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the City of Philadelphia are spending $13,000,000 for the widening of Vine and Race Streets, completion of the project being scheduled two years hence. During the year the Commission paid the Highway Department of New Jersey $134,750 to defray the cost of paving and installing modern traffic lights along Penn and Linden Streets, Camden but, while this aided in expediting the 1948 flow of traffic bound to and from the bridge, street limitations preclude any hope that bridge traffic of the future can be fitted therein. A new road is urgently needed to match the improvement in Philadelphia where construction of the Vine Street Boulevard was begun September 8.

In 1948 much of the attention of the Commission was devoted to the problem of development of the Delaware River Port and determination of the need of additional crossing of the Delaware River in accordance with directives in the Pennsylvania and New Jersey laws of 1947. Expenditures of $190,233.12 were made in study and investigation during the year. On October 20 Governor Driscoll approved an act of the New Jersey Legislature constituting The Delaware River Joint Commission as the Delaware River Port Authority and providing for a certain enlargement of the powers now possessed by the Commission. The measure does not become effective, however, until the Pennsylvania Legislature approves a similar bill. Conclusions of the Commission on the subjects of port development and additional crossings appear in a separate report submitted to the Governors and Legislatures of the two States which, in brief, are that the Commission be made a Port Authority endowed with powers commensurate with the responsibilities of the project which will include promotion of the port and building of an additional bridge from South Philadelphia to Gloucester, New Jersey when warranted by the growth of traffic.

TRUCKS SWELL BRIDGE TRAFFIC

During 1948 daily average traffic was 52,533 compared with 49,609 the preceding year. The Sunday and holiday average was 55,456 against 53,048 and the weekday, 51,983 against 48,959. Traffic highs for the year were Sunday, August 15 with 79,229 vehicles and Friday, September 3 with 67,057, an all-time weekday high. August totaling 1,923,160 was the busiest month of the year. Outstanding in traffic statistics for the year was the increase in the number of heavy trucks. In 1947 these totaled 1,192,053 and, in 1948, 1,365,889. This growth is most welcome as most of the trucks cross the bridge in off-peak hours. Passenger automobiles and light trucks numbered 15,854,315 in 1947 and 16,817,353 in 1948. Buses dropped from 1,033,521 to 1,016,603 in 1948. The rail transit line with 10,209,502 patrons in 1948 set a new record, an increase over the 10,056,967 total in 1947.

Following is the record of bridge traffic, receipts and expenses since the opening on July 1, 1926:

A comparison of 1948 traffic components with 1947 follows:

| | 1948 | 1947 | Increase Decrease* | Per Cent |
|---|------------|------------|-----------------------|-------------|
| Commutation tickets | 1,662,406 | 1,528,094 | 134,312 | 8.79 |
| Pleasure cars and light trucks | 15,154,947 | 14,326,221 | 828,726 | 5.78 |
| Solid rubber-tired trucks (7,000 pounds or less) | 33 | 56 | 23* | 41.07* |
| All other trucks | 1,124,338 | 982,073 | 142,265 | 14.48 |
| Double-deck buses | 31 | 198 | 167* | 84.34* |
| Single-deck buses | 1,016,572 | 1,033,323 | 16,751* | 1.64* |
| Horsedrawn vehicles | 2 | 1 | 1 | 50.00 |
| Motorcycles and bicycles | 27,399 | 27,240 | 159 | 5.58 |
| Special rates | 241,518 | 209,924 | 31,594 | 15.05 |
| Led animals | | 3 | 3* | |
| TOTAL | 19,227,246 | 18,107,133 | 1,120,113 | 6.18 |

During the year passenger automobiles and light trucks contributed 71.75 per cent. of toll receipts; buses, 11.12 per cent; large trucks, 17.06 per cent and motorcycles, .07 per cent. Every month of 1948 with the exception of January showed a traffic increase over the corresponding month of the previous year, the drop in January being due to unusually severe weather.

RAIL REMOVAL PUSHED

Some progress was made during the year toward removal of the obstacle caused by the freight railroad intersections at Penn and Linden Streets, Camden just beyond the bridge plaza. A plan for relocation of these tracks on Delaware Avenue was prepared by engineers representing all interests involved. The estimated cost of this improvement is $1,000,000. In the interests of the bridge-traveling public, the Commission agreed to defray twenty-five per cent of the cost and the Highway Department of New Jersey pledged an equal amount. The Public Utility Commission of New Jersey on October 25 held a pre-hearing conference at Trenton to discuss the formal petition of the City of Camden for relocation of the tracks. A further hearing on this subject is to be held early in 1949. The movement of freight trains across Penn and Linden Streets has delayed traffic on the bridge extending back into Philadelphia. This was painfully demonstrated on the occasion of President Truman's visit to Camden on October 6 when a freight train blocked Penn and Linden Streets while bridge police were trying to clear the structure of traffic accumulated during the President's stay. Vehicles were lined up solidly on access roads in Philadelphia and South Jersey for more than an hour.

At the March meeting the Commission reengaged the engineering firm of Modjeski and Masters to prepare contract plans and specifications for work required in the bridge roadway widening project from pylon to pylon. Associated with this firm are Louis T. Klauder and Associates, electrical engineers and Harbeson, Hough, Livingston and Larson, architects. The Commission awarded the first three contracts for the widening aggregating $585,051 in 1948 on competitive bids and directed that tenders for contracts totaling $1,800,000 be received in January, 1949. One of the latter calls for a new roadway lighting system upon which bids had been opened November 22 and rejected by the Commission as being excessive.

Despite the expenditure of $190,233.12 for port development in 1948, net income for the year over bond maturity and sinking fund reserve requirements was $1,334,450.24. In the preceding year when such expenses were but $9,774.59, the net was $1,229,798.23. At the close of the year the Commission held Government and Commission bonds aggregating $6,610,000, par value. Included in this were $2,800,000 United States Treasury obligations to meet the cost of widening the roadway. General reserve fund assets were composed of Treasury notes and certificates of a par value of $1,950,000 and $660,000 par value Commission bonds repurchased at a discount. Against these assets were commitments of $200,000 to be paid the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as part of the expenses of widening Vine Street, Philadelphia and $250,000 for removal of the railroad tracks in Camden. On December 1, $850,000 Commission bonds matured, being the last of three per cent bonds sold by the Commission in 1946; a like amount matured June 1, 1948. Commission indebtedness was thereby reduced by $1,700,000 during the year. The Commission debt of $25,750,000 now outstanding is funded at one per cent, callable in 1951 at 102.

In 1948 the Commission repurchased $109,000 Commission bonds at prices ranging from 86½ to 89¼ which had been sold by the Commission on May 22, 1946 at slightly above par. In order to obtain needed funds for authorized improvements on the bridge, the Commission sold $3,885,000 United States Treasury 2½ per cent bonds of 1972-67 and reinvested the proceeds in $1,000,000 Treasury 1¼ per cent Certificates of Indebtedness due October 1, 1949 and $2,917,000 Treasury 1¾ per cent notes due April 1, 1950.

STATES NOW RESTRICTED

The attention of the Legislatures is respectfully directed to the anomalous position in which this Commission has been placed regarding its duty of investigating the need for and determination of the location of additional Delaware River crossings through the application of a restrictive act adopted by the New Jersey Legislature which apparently clothes the Burlington County Bridge Commission with authority to prevent construction of an addition bridge or tunnel within the territory ten miles south of the Tacony-Palmyra Bridge. This would include all the area between the Tacony-Palmyra and Delaware River Bridges and extend approximately three miles below the latter bridge embracing nearly all of South Philadelphia. In October, 1948 the Tacony-Palmyra and Burlington-Bristol Bridges were sold by the private owners to the Burlington County Bridge Commission. The New Jersey legislative acts of 1947 and 1948 enabling this transaction to be consummated purported to give the Burlington County Bridge Commission a legal right to prevent the building of new crossings within an area of approximately thirty miles along the river. The position of the Commission in this matter is shown in the following resolution adopted October 27, 1948:

"Whereas, the Act of New Jersey of August 9, 1948, Chapter 288, permits the Burlington County Board of Freeholders to create a county bridge commission; and Whereas, in accordance with the terms of this Act, the Burlington County Board of Freeholders did create the Burlington County Bridge Commission for the acquisition of the Tacony-Palmyra and Burlington-Bristol Bridges; and

Whereas, the Burlington County Bridge Commission has issued bonds for the acquisition of the bridges covered by an indenture containing this provision:

"The Commission covenants that it will not construct or establish any bridge, ferry, tunnel or other crossing of the Delaware River between the Pheladelphia-Camden Bridge to the south and ten miles to the north of the Burlington-Bristol Bridge nor consent to the construction or establishment thereof so long as any bonds issued under this resolution or any supplement thereto remain outstanding and unpaid"; and

Whereas, the State of New Jersey and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania are thereby enjoined from constructing any bridge over the Delaware River between the Tacony-Palmyra and Delaware River Bridges; and Whereas, this unilateral action by the State of New Jersey invalidates a most essential part of the agreement entered into in 1931 by the State of New Jersey and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania which agreement was ratified by Act of Congress; and

Whereas, the aforementioned Act abrogates and destroys certain rights and powers of The Delaware River Joint Commission with respect to determining the feasibility, location, system and character of any additional means of communication over the river required for the public good; and

Whereas, the acquisition of the said bridges will definitely retard the contemplated program of the proposed Delaware River Port Authority by reducing its probable revenue and said action is therefore contrary to the best interests of the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey; and

Whereas, the rights of the sovereign Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and State of New Jersey to take such steps as are necessary for the public good have been impaired and restricted; and

Whereas, the Burlington County Bridge Commission apparently is clothed with the power to prevent the building of any additional bridge for a distance or more than three miles south of the Delaware River Bridge even though the Burlington County Bridge Commission has no authority to construct bridges within this restricted area.

Therefore, be it resolved: That The Delaware River Joint Commission determine that its rights have been infringed upon and will take all necessary and appropriate action to defend all the rights and powers conferred upon it by the joint action of the State of New Jersey and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania recited in the agreement between the aforementioned states and adopted in 1931; and

Be it further resolved: That this Commission respectfully request the Attorneys-General of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey to take such steps as may be appropriate to protect the rights of the respective states to correct the flagrant injustice to which the people of the two states have been exposed."

At the close of the year proceedings to invalidate the sale of the bridges were pending in the New Jersey courts. This Commission respectfully suggests that the sovereign States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey should not be limited or restricted in the exercise of their power to additional river-crossings wherever required for the public good.

During the year two persons were killed in accidents on the bridge, one suicide was reported, one hundred fifty-eight arrests were made and fifty-six fires extinguished.

All members of the legislatures of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey are cordially invited to inspect the Delaware River Bridge at any time.

Respectfully submitted,

THE DELAWARE RIVER JOINT COMMISSION:

To the Honorable: The Governors and the Legislatures of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey.

The purpose of this report is to fulfill the requirements of the directives received June, 1947, from the Legislatures of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey.

The instructions contained in the directives of said Acts allot two missions to the Commission: that of formulating a specific action program for the promotion of the Delaware River Port; and that of reporting upon the need for and advisability of constructing additional tunnels or bridges across the Delaware River from Trenton, New Jersey and Morrisville, Pennsylvania to the Delaware Bay.

To obtain all available data relative to the problems of the Port, the Commission retained The Knappen-Tippetts-Abbett Engineering Company of New York, to make preliminary and final surveys, at a cost to the Commission of $179,500. A copy of the final Knappen Report is appended.

PROGRAM

The Commission is of the opinion that any formula for a specific action program for the Delaware River Port should contain the following elements:

- (1) A plan for the administration of State regulations affecting the Port and its activities; as well as a plan for the promotion of the Delaware River Port to further the improvement of commerce and prosperity of the Port District area.
- (2) The designation of a bi-state agency as a Port Authority to provide stable and efficient management.
- (3) A grant of the powers by the Legislatures of Pennsylvania and New Jersey which are necessary to carry out the plan.
- (4) Financing Port Authority Activities.
- (5) Operations of the Port Authority.
- (6) Promotion of commerce.

PLAN

That the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey modify the Interstate Compact of July 1, 1931, approved by the 72nd Congress June 14, 1932, appointing The Delaware River Joint Commission so as: (1) to change the name of the Commission to that of The Delaware River Joint Commission Port Authority; (2) to create a Port District to embrace the territorial limits of the five Pennsylvania Counties of Bucks, Philadelphia, Montgomery, Delaware and Chester; and the nine New Jersey Counties of Mercer, Burlington, Camden, Gloucester, Salem, Cumberland, Cape May, Ocean and Atlantic; (3) to give The Delaware River Joint Commission Port Authority jurisdiction over the district and to endow it with the powers to administer and coordinate its Port District activities; (4) to bestow on the Authority broad and extensive powers to engage in activities directly or indirectly connected with the Port which further the interests of the States.

LEGISLATION

The proposed legislation modifying the Acts of 1931 should be broad in scope so as to give the Authority sufficient power to engage in all activities in the Port District which are either directly or indirectly connected with the Delaware River Port.

Since the Authority will be entering into a field of larger and more diversified operations than the Commission has been engaged in during its existence, it therefore must be sure that the recommended legislation provides all the powers needed to carry out its new responsibilities.

One of the important provisions of the required legislation is to transfer jurisdiction now exercised by many state agencies to the Authority, and give the Authority the right to negotiate with County and Municipal Governments for the releasing of their duties to the Authority when it is considered advantageous to all concerned.

For the reasons cited above, a proposed bill is made a part of this report. The bill, if passed, will provide the additional powers which are required to establish the Delaware River Joint Commission as a Port Authority and allow it to carry out a comprehensive plan for the development and promotion of the Port and obviate the necessity of returning to the Legislatures for approval for each individual part of the program.

The Delaware River Joint Commission is the only existing bi-state public agency in the proposed Port District, which is self-financing, and for this reason, and on account of its experience, it is considered the logical control agency to administer the Port and its activities.

No change in the number of members on the Commission from each State, nor the length of term of five years of each is considered necessary. It is recommended that the members be appointed by the Governors under the law of the respective States and that the appointment of ex-officio members be discontinued.

The Commission is of the opinion that the State of Delaware should be invited to participate in the Authority after organization.

ADMINISTRATION AND OPERATIONS

There are three Port activities in which the Port Authority will be engaged from the beginning, namely: (1) the administration of regulations now supervised by other agencies; (2) promotion of the Delaware River Port; (3) continuance of the operation of the Delaware River Bridge.

The Commission has studied many Port and Port-related activities in connection with the preparation of this report. Their need and whether they are economically sound projects for the Authority to undertake will be finally determined as time and circumstances permit.

However, under no circumstances will the Authority undertake any new enterprises other than those named above until its own organization has made further investigations to determine which activities are most needed.

The more important activities which have been investigated are listed below, but not in order of priority, nor is the Commission recommending them as self-liquidating and desirable ventures for the Authority to engage in without further investigation:

Vehicular Crossings of the Delaware River

The Commission has made investigations and studies to determine the need for additional crossings of the Delaware River. Based on an 'origin and destination' survey made in 1947 by the Highway Departments of the States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, in conjunction with the United States Public Roads Administration, and the assistance of the Cities of Philadelphia and Camden, there is sufficient indication that an additional crossing of the Delaware River below the Delaware River Bridge would be desirable now and become imperative within the next decade.

The Engineers retained by the Commission to make a detailed survey report that the origin and destination demands of the public point to the greatest need for a bridge joining South Philadelphia with Gloucester City, at an estimated cost of $43,000,000.

The Commission is now expending $3,000,000 for the widening of the Delaware River Bridge roadway from six to eight lanes. This will increase the capacity of the bridge to 28,000,000 vehicles annually. In 1948, vehicles totalled 19,227,246. Assuming the present growth of bridge traffic continues, the 28,000,000 volume most likely will be attained seven or eight years hence. The approaches now under construction in Philadelphia will be adequate for the increased traffic. The approaches in Camden, however, will present a problem, as they are inadequate.

Particular consideration was given that part of Knappen report wherein it was stated that a new bridge and certain other projects could not be financed and operated with less than a twenty-five cent toll. The Commission charges a twenty-cent toll and a fifteen-cent commuter's ticket on the Delaware River Bridge.

The Commission concludes and recommends as follows:

That the Governor and the Legislature of the State of New Jersey advance the program of the north-south highway and start work on the Camden end so that the approaches to the Delaware River Bridge can accommodate the increased traffic when the bridge widening has been completed.

That the Authority be authorized and empowered to build a bridge to be owned jointly by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey, across the Delaware River between South Philadelphia and Gloucester City, including its approaches and additions, at such time as the Authority, in its judgment, may deem it advisable and economically feasible, without regard to any limitation of time as to the building of said bridge; that the said bridge shall be operated and maintained by this Authority after its construction is completed.

Belt Line Railroad

The Commission records its appreciation of the need of developing the Belt Line Railroad as a means of promoting commerce of the Port and recommends that this project be included in the list of prospective improvements to be undertaken by the Commission.

Rapid Transit Lines in New Jersey

While this Commission fully recognizes the desirability of extending high-speed rail transportation facilities between Philadelphia and communities in South Jersey, it must be noted that it does not have the financial resources required to construct and operate this improvement. Three out of four engineering reports on the subject have shown that substantial deficits will be incurred over a period of years. The Commission favors extending the high-speed line but is convinced, after careful examination of the project, that it must be subsidized by the State of New Jersey or some other agency.

Modification of Existing Piers

The Commission recommends that the Authority be empowered to lease piers owned by the City of Philadelphia and South Jersey Port Commission upon terms to be agreed upon by the Authority and the owners, to make improvements thereon and to operate the piers in the interests of promoting commerce of the Port.

Marine Terminal

A modern terminal with mechanical means of loading, unloading and storing of cargo, backed up by adequate warehouse space and supported by good communications, both rail and highway, would be a most valuable asset for the Port. The estimated cost of this project is $35,200,000.

The Commission recommends further investigation after the Authority is created if satisfactory arrangements for the leasing of piers owned by the City of Philadelphia and South Jersey Port Commission are not consummated.

Motor Truck Terminals

The Motor Truck Terminal operation provides many advantages to the community which it would be difficult to value on a monetary basis.

One terminal would reduce materially the traffic on streets. If three were built,—one each in Camden North-east and Southwest Philadelphia—the resulting reduction in traffic congestion would speed-up the movement of vehicles over the streets.

This project, which is discussed in detail in the Knappen report, is included in the list of prospective improvements to be undertaken by the Authority.

Acquisition of Bridges

In developing a plan for the improvement of the Port, our Engineers had included the earnings of the Tacony-Palmyra and the Burlington-Bristol Bridges to be acquired by the State of New Jersey and placed under operation of this Commission. Legal action is now pending to restore to the State its right to assume the ownership of these structures. This Commission recommends that every effort be made to carry out this plan, and that no agency other than the Authority be permitted to exercise any regulatory power over the construction of additional crossings of the Delaware River within the Port area.

Elimination of Pollution

The Commission recognizes that the pollution of the Delaware and Schuylkill Rivers is a detriment to the growth of the Port and pledges itself to aid and encourage the present program of elimination and to resist actively any attempt to hinder or retard the progress of this improvement and this Commission urges the Legislatures to carry on the campaign without delays or postponements.

FINANCING

The Commission will undertake financing of needed activities in the Port District from time to time. The financing must depend on the treasury position of the Commission and its credit, as a means of obtaining money through the sale of bonds. As of January 1, 1949, the Commission's outstanding indebtedness was $25,750,000.

The present bond indenture prevents the Commission placing any additional lien upon the revenues of the Bridge.

No increase in tolls is contemplated for use of the Delaware River Bridge.

When created, the Authority will be engaged in the administration of the regulations of the Port; promotion of commerce; operation of the Delaware River Bridge and of such other projects as may be initiated. Expenditures will be made for these purposes.

PROMOTION

A Development Department of the Authority should assume the leadership in promotion of the Port to increase its commerce. Investigation and planning should be prosecuted thoroughly and diligently to provide the proper service.

The Commission, acting under the authority contained in the Interstate Compact of 1931, has appropriated the amount of $100,000 for expenditure in 1949 to promote increased commerce on the Delaware River by publicity and such other means as may be deemed appropriate.

The Commission recognizes the importance of furthering the interests of the Delaware River Port as an essential contribution to the welfare of the people of Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Appendix A

PROPOSED PENNSYLVANIA ACT CREATING PORT AUTHORITY

An Act authorizing the Governor on behalf of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to enter into a supplemental compact or agreement with the State of New Jersey, amending, revising, adding and repealing certain sections of Articles I, II, IV, XII and adding XIII, to the compact and agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey authorized by and made pursuant to an act entitled "An act providing for joint action by Pennsylvania and New Jersey in the development of the ports on the lower Delaware River, and the improvement of the facilities for transportations across the river; authorizing the Governor, for these purposes, to enter into an agreement with New Jersey; creating The Delaware River Joint Commission and specifying the powers and duties thereof; including the power to finance projects by the issuance of revenue bonds; transferring to the new commission all the powers of The Delaware River Joint Commission; and making an appropriation," approved June twelfth, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one (P. L. 200), by changing the name of The Delaware Joint Commission to The Delaware River Joint Commission Port Authority, by all members appointed by the Governors of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, by extending the jurisdiction, powers and duties of the said The Delaware River Joint Commission Port Authority and defining such additional jurisdiction, powers and duties; to take effect upon the enactment of substantially similar legislation by the State of New Jersey embodying the supplemental agreement between the two States in this act set forth, and authorizing the Governor to apply, on behalf of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, to the Congress of the United States for its consent thereto.

The General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania hereby enacts as follows:

1. The Governor is hereby authorized to enter into a supplemental compact or agreement, on behalf of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, with the State of New Jersey, amending and supplementing the compact or agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey and repealing certain sections thereof entitled "Agreement between the State of New Jersey and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania creating The Delaware River Joint Commission as a body corporate and politic and defining the powers and duties," which was executed on behalf of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by its Governor on July first, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one, and on behalf of the State of New Jersey by the New Jersey Interstate Bridge Commission by its members on July first, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one, and which was consented to by the Congress of the United States by Public Resolution No. 26, being Chapter 258 of the Public Laws, 72nd Congress, approved June fourteenth, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-two which supplemental compact and agreement shall be in substantially the following form:

"Supplemental agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey amending and supplementing the agreement entitled 'Agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania the State of New Jersey creating The Delaware River Joint Commission as a body corporate and politic and defining its powers and duties' by changing the name of the The Delaware River Joint Commission to The Delaware River Joint Commission Port Authority, by changing the method of appointment of the commissioners, by extending the jurisdiction, powers and duties of the said The Delaware River Joint Commission Port Authority and defining such additional jurisdiction, powers and duties."

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey do hereby solemnly covenant and agree each with the other as follows:

(1) Article I of the said agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey creating The Delaware River Joint Commission as a body corporate and politic and defining its powers and duties, which was executed on behalf of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by the Governor on July first, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one, and on behalf of the State of New Jersey by the New Jersey Interstate Bridge Commission by its members on July first, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one, and which was consented to by the Congress of the United States by Public Resolution No. 26, being Chapter 258 of the Public Laws, 72nd Congress, approved June fourteenth, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-two, is amended to read as follows:

Article I

The body corporate and politic, heretofore known as The Delaware River Joint Commission hereby is continued under the name of the Delaware River Joint Commission

Port Authority (hereinafter in this agreement called the "commission"), which shall constitute the public corporate instrumentality of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey when exercising any of the following public purposes and which shall be deemed to be exercising and essential governmental function in effectuating such purposes, to wit:

a. The operation and maintenance of the bridge, owned jointly by the two States across the Delaware River between the City of Philadelphia in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the City of Camden in the State of New Jersey, including its approaches, and the making of additions and improvements thereto.

b. The effectuation, establishment, construction, operation and maintenance of railroad or other facilities for the transportation of passengers across the said bridge, including extensions thereof, to the vicinity of Race Street, and Eighth Street in the City of Philadelphia and to the vicinity of Carman Street and Haddon Avenue in the City of Camden.

c. The improvement and development of the Port District by or through the acquisition, construction, maintenance, operation, in whole or in part, of any and all projects for the improvement and development of the Port District or incidental thereto, either directly by purchase, lease or contract, or by lease or agreement with any other public or private body or corporation.

d. Co-operation with all other bodies interested or concerned with, or affected by, the promotion, development or use of the Delaware River and the Port District.

e. The procurement from the government of the United States of any consents which may be requisite to enable any project within its powers to be carried forward.

f. The promotion as a highway of commerce of the Delaware River.

g. The promotion of increased passenger and freight commerce on the Delaware River and for such purpose the publication of literature and the adoption of any other means as may be deemed appropriate.

h. The petitioning of any interstate commerce commission, public service commission, public utilities commission, or any similar body, or any other federal, municipal, state or local authority, administrative, judicial, or legislative, having jurisdiction in the premises, for the adoption and execution of any physical improvement, change in method, rate of transportation, system of handling freight, warehousing, docking, lightering or transfer of freight, which, in the opinion of the commission, may be designed to improve or better the handling of commerce in and through the Port District, or to improve terminal and transportation facilities therein. The commission may apply to intervene in any legal or other proceeding affecting the commerce of the Port District. In any such case, the commission may be represented by its counsel or such other counsel as it shall designate.

i. The regulation subject to the paramount jurisdiction of the Federal government of the navigable waters of that part of the Delaware River which is within the Port District, including the right to establish anchorages, harbor lines, pier head lines and bulkhead lines, together with any and all necessary and incidental powers to such regulation. The commission shall have power to make and promulgate such regulation and provide for the issuance of permits and the fees therefor and for the enforcement of said regulation. The commission shall also act as and perform the functions and duties of harbor master in respect to scheduling the use of wharves, piers and anchorages by ships and generally controlling the movements of ships in the Delaware river in the said Port District.

j. The performance of such other functions which may be of mutual benefit to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey in so far as concerns the promotion and development of the Port District and the use of its facilities by commercial vessels.

(2) Article II of said Agreement is amended to read as follows:

Article II

The commission shall consist of sixteen commissioners, eight resident voters of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and eight resident voters of the State of New Jersey.

The present members of the commission shall continue to serve, respectively, as commissioners until the expiration of their terms and until their successors shall be appointed and qualify.

The commissioners for the State of New Jersey shall be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, for terms of five years; and in case of a vacancy occurring in the office of commissioner during a recess of the Legislature, it may be filled by the Governor by an ad interim appointment which shall expire at the end of the next regular session of the Senate unless a successor shall be sooner appointed and qualify and, after the end of the session, no ad interim appointment to the same vacancy shall be made unless the Governor shall have submitted to the Senate a nomination to the office during the session and the Senate shall have adjourned without confirming or rejecting it and no person nominated for any such vacancy shall be eligible for an ad interim appointment to such office if the nomination shall have failed of confirmation by the Senate.

The eight commissioners for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania shall be appointed by the Governor for terms of five years.

All commissioners shall continue to hold office after the expiration of the terms for which they are appointed unless and until their respective successors are appointed and qualify, but no period during which any commissioner shall hold over shall be deemed to be an extension of his term of office for the purpose of computing the date on which his successor's term expires.

(3) Article IV of said Agreement is amended to read as follows:

Article IV

For the effectuation of its authorized purposes the commission is hereby granted the following powers:

- a. To have perpetual succession.
- b. To sue and be sued.
- c. To adopt and use an official seal.
- d. To elect a chairman, vice chairman, secretary and treasurer, and to adopt suitable by-laws for the management of its affairs. The Secretary and Treasurer need not be members of the commission.
- e. To appoint such other officers and such agents and employees as it may require for the performance of its duties and fix and determine their qualifications, duties and compensation.

- f. To enter into contracts.
 - g. To acquire, own, hire, use, operate and dispose of personal property.
 - h. To acquire, own, use, lease, operate, mortgage and dispose of real property and interests in real property, and to make improvements thereon.
 - i. To grant by franchise, lease or otherwise, the use of any property or facility owned or controlled by the commission and to make charges therefor.
 - j. To borrow money upon its bonds or other obligations either with or without security.
 - k. To exercise the right of eminent domain within the Port District.
 - l. To determine the exact location, system and character of and all other matters in connection with any and all improvements or facilities which it may be authorized to own, construct, establish, effectuate, operate or control.
 - m. In addition to the foregoing, to exercise the powers, duties, authority and jurisdiction heretofore conferred and imposed upon the aforesaid The Delaware River Joint Commission by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or the State of New Jersey, or both of the said two States: and
 - n. To exercise all other powers not inconsistent with the constitutions of the two States or of the United States, which may be reasonably necessary or incidental to the effectuation of its authorized purposes or to the exercise of any of the foregoing powers, except the power to levy taxes or assessments, and generally to exercise in connection with its property and affairs, had in connection with property within its control, any and all powers which might be exercised by a natural person or a private corporation in connection with similar property and affairs.
- The commission shall have full power and authority to acquire, purchase, construct, lease, operate, maintain and undertake any project, including terminal, terminal facility, transportation facility, or any other facility of commerce and to make charges for the use thereof. The commission is authorized to make expenditures anywhere in the United States and foreign countries, to pay commissions, and hire or contract with experts and consultants, and otherwise to do indirectly anything which the commission may do directly. The commission shall have such additional powers and duties as may hereafter be delegated to or imposed upon it from time to time by the action of either State concurred in by legislation of the other.

(4) Article XII of said Agreement is amended to read as follows:

Article XII

The commission shall make annual reports to the Governors and Legislatures of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey, setting forth in detail its operations and transactions, and may make such additional reports from time to time to the Governors and Legislatures as it may deem desirable.

(5) Add to said Agreement a new Article to be entitled, and to read, as follows:

Article XIII

The following words as herein used shall have the following meanings:

1. "Port District" shall include the counties of Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery and Philadelphia in Pennsylvania and the counties of Atlantic, Burlington, Camden, Cape May, Cumberland, Gloucester, Mercer, Ocean and Salem in New Jersey, excluding however, therefrom the area north of the stone arch bridge of the Pennsylvania Railroad from Trenton to Morrisville, Pennsylvania.

It is hereby declared as the legislative intent that this act would have been adopted had such unconstitutional provision not been included therein.

8. This act shall become effective immediately upon its approval by the Governor and the passage by the State of New Jersey of a substantially similar act embodying the supplemental compact or agreement between the two states hereinabove set forth.

Appendix B

PROPOSED NEW JERSEY ACT CREATING PORT AUTHORITY

An Act authorizing the Governor on behalf of the State of New Jersey to enter into a supplemental compact or agreement with the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, amending Article I, II, IV and XII of, and adding a new Article to be known as Article XIII, to the compact and agreement between the State of New Jersey and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania authorized by and made pursuant to an act entitled "An act providing for joint action by Pennsylvania and New Jersey in the development of the ports on the lower Delaware River and the improvement of the facilities for transportation across the said river; authorizing the New Jersey Interstate Bridge Commission on behalf of the State of New Jersey for these purposes to enter into an agreement with the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania creating The Delaware River Joint Commission and specifying the powers and duties thereof, including the power to finance projects by the issuance of revenue bonds; transferring to the new commission all the powers of The Delaware River Bridge Joint Commission and making an appropriation," approved June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one (P. L. 1931, c. 391), by changing the name of The Delaware River Joint Commission to The Delaware River Joint Commission Port Authority, by changing the method of appointment of the commissioners for the State of New Jersey, by extending the jurisdiction, powers and duties of said The Delaware River Joint Commission Port Authority and defining such additional jurisdiction, powers and duties; to take effect upon the enactment of substantially similar legislation by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania embodying the supplemental agreement between the two States in this act set forth, and authorizing the Governor to apply, on behalf of the State of New Jersey, to the Congress of the United States for its consent thereto, and repealing Chapter four hundred forty-three of the Laws of one thousand nine hundred and forty-eight, approved October twentieth, one thousand nine hundred and forty-eight (P. L. 1948, c. 443).

Be It Enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey:

1. The Governor is hereby authorized to enter into a supplemental compact or agreement, on behalf of the State of New Jersey, with the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, amending and supplementing the compact or agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey entitled "Agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey creating The Delaware River Joint Commission as a body corporate and politic and defining its powers and duties," which was executed on behalf of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by its Governor on July first, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one, and on behalf of the State of New Jersey by the New Jersey Interstate Bridge Commission by its members on July first, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one, and which was consented to by the Congress of the United States by Public Resolution No. 26, being Chapter 258 of the Public Laws, 72nd Congress, approved June fourteenth, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-two which supplemental compact and agreement shall be in substantially the following form:

"Supplemental agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey amending and supplementing the agreement entitled 'Agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey creating the Delaware River Joint Commission as a body corporate and politic and defining its powers and duties' by changing the name of The Delaware River Joint Commission to The Delaware River Joint Commission Port Authority, by changing the method of appointment of the commissioners, by extending the jurisdiction, powers and duties of said The Delaware River Joint Commission Port Authority and defining such additional jurisdiction, powers and duties."

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey do hereby solemnly covenant and agree each with the other as follows:

(1) Article I of the said agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey creating The Delaware River Joint Commission as a body corporate and politic and defining its powers and duties, which was executed on behalf of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by the Governor on July first, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one, and on behalf of the State of New Jersey by the New Jersey Interstate Bridge Commission by its members on July first, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one, and which was consented to by the Congress of the United States by Public Resolution No. 26, being Chapter 258 of the Public Laws, 72nd Congress, approved June fourteenth, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-two, is amended to read as follows:

Article I

The body corporate and politic, heretofore known as The Delaware River Joint Commission hereby is continued under the name of The Delaware River Joint Commission Port Authority (hereinafter in this agreement called the "commission"), which shall constitute the public corporate instrumentality of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey when exercising any of the following public purposes and which shall be deemed to be exercising an essential governmental function in effectuating such purposes, to wit:

a. The operation and maintenance of the bridge, owned jointly by the two States across the Delaware River between the City of Philadelphia in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the City of Camden in the State of New Jersey, including its approaches, and the making of additions and improvements thereto.

b. The effectuation, establishment, construction, operation and maintenance of railroad or other facilities for the transportation of passengers across the said bridge, including extensions thereof, to the vicinity of Race Street, and Eighth Street in the City of Philadelphia and to the vicinity of Carman Street and Haddon Avenue in the City of Camden.

c. The improvement and development of the Port District by or through the acquisition, construction, maintenance, operation, in whole or in part, of any and all projects for the improvement and development of the Port District or incidental thereto, either directly by purchase, lease or contract, or by lease or agreement with any other public or private body or corporation.

d. Co-operation with all other bodies interested or concerned with, or affected by, the promotion, development or use of the Delaware River and the Port District.

e. The procurement from the government of the United States of any consents which may be requisite to enable any project within its powers to be carried forward.

f. The promotion as a highway of commerce of the Delaware River.

g. The promotion of increased passenger and freight commerce on the Delaware River and for such purpose the publication of literature and the adoption of any other means as may be deemed appropriate.

h. The petitioning of any interstate commerce commission, public service commission, public utilities commission, or any similar body, or any other federal, municipal, state or local authority, administrative, judicial, or legislative, having jurisdiction in the premises, for the adoption and execution of any physical improvement, change in method, rate of transportation, system of handling freight, warehousing, docking, lightering or transfer of freight, which, in the opinion of the commission, may be designed to improve or better the handling of commerce in and through the Port District, or to improve terminal and transportation facilities therein. The commission may apply to intervene in any legal or other proceeding affecting the commerce of the Port District. In any such case, the commission may be represented by its counsel or such other counsel as it shall designate.

i. The regulation subject to the paramount jurisdiction of the Federal government of the navigable waters of that part of the Delaware River which is within the Port District, including the right to establish anchorages, harbor lines, pier head lines and bulkhead lines, together with any and all necessary, and incidental powers to such regulation. The commission shall have power to make and promulgate such regulation and provide for the issuance of permits and the fees therefor and for the enforcement of said regulation. The commission shall also act as and perform the functions and duties of harbor master in respect to scheduling the use of wharves, piers and anchorages by ships and generally controlling the movements of ships in the Delaware River in the said Port District.

j. The performance of such other functions which may be of mutual benefit to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey in so far as concerns the promotion and development of the Port District and the use of its facilities by commercial vessels.

(2) Article II of said Agreement is amended to read as follows:

Article II

The commission shall consist of sixteen commissioners, eight resident voters of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and eight resident voters of the State of New Jersey.

The present members of the commission shall continue to serve, respectively, as commissioners until the expiration of their terms and until their successors shall be appointed and qualify.

The commissioners for the State of New Jersey shall be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, for terms of five years; and in case of a vacancy occurring in the office of commissioner during a recess of the Legislature, it may be filled by the Governor by an ad interim appointment which shall expire at the end of the next regular session of the Senate unless a successor shall be sooner appointed and qualify and, after the end of the session, no ad interim appointment to the same vacancy shall be made unless the Governor shall have submitted to the Senate a nomination to the office during the session and the Senate shall have adjourned without confirming or rejecting it and no person nominated for any such vacancy shall be eligible for an ad interim appointment to such office if the nomination shall have failed of confirmation by the Senate.

The eight commissioners for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania shall be appointed by the Governor for terms of five years.

All commissioners shall continue to hold office after the expiration of the terms for which they are appointed unless and until their respective successors are appointed and qualify, but no period during which any commissioner shall hold over shall be deemed to be an extension of his term of office for the purpose of computing the date on which his successor's term expires.

(3) Article IV of said Agreement is amended to read as follows:

Article IV

For the effectuation of its authorized purposes the commission is hereby granted the following powers:

- a. To have perpetual succession.
- b. To sue and be sued.
- c. To adopt and use an official seal.
- d. To elect a chairman, vice chairman, secretary and treasurer, and to adopt suitable by-laws for the management of its affairs. The Secretary and Treasurer need not be members of the commission.
- e. To appoint such other officers and such agents and employees as it may require for the performance of its duties and fix and determine their qualifications, duties and compensation.
- f. To enter into contracts.
- g. To acquire, own, hire, use, operate and dispose of personal property.
- h. To acquire, own, use, lease, operate, mortgage and dispose of real property and interests in real property, and to make improvements thereon.
- i. To grant by franchise, lease or otherwise, the use of any property or facility owned or controlled by the commission and to make charges therefor.
- j. To borrow money upon its bonds or other obligations either with or without security.
- k. To exercise the right of eminent domain within the Port District.
- l. To determine the exact location, system and character of and all other matters in connection with any and all improvements or facilities which it may be authorized to own, construct, establish, effectuate, operate or control.
- m. In addition to the foregoing, to exercise the powers, duties, authority and jurisdiction heretofore conferred and imposed upon the aforesaid The Delaware River Joint Commission by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or the State of New Jersey, or both of the said two States; and
- n. To exercise all other powers not inconsistent with the constitutions of the two States or of the United States, which may be reasonably necessary or incidental to the effectuation of its authorized purposes or to the exercise of any of the foregoing powers, except the power to levy taxes or assessments, and generally to exercise in connection with its property and affairs, and in connection with property within its control, any and all powers which might be exercised by a natural person or a private corporation in connection with similar property and affairs.

The commission shall have full power and authority to acquire, purchase, construct, lease, operate, maintain and undertake any project, including terminal, terminal facility, transportation facility, or any other facility of commerce and to make charges for the use thereof. The commission is authorized to make expenditures anywhere in the United States and foreign countries, to pay commissions, and hire or contract with experts and consultants, and otherwise to do indirectly anything which the commission may do directly. The commission shall have such additional powers and duties as may hereafter be delegated to or imposed upon it from time to time by the action of either State concurred in by legislation of the other.

(4) Article XII of said Agreement is amended to read as follows:

Article XII

The commission shall make annual reports to the Governors and Legislatures of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey, setting forth in detail its operations and transactions, and may make such additional reports from time to time to the Governors and Legislatures as it may deem desirable.

(5) Add to said Agreement a new Article to be entitled, and to read, as follows:

Article XIII
